"The amount of work that went into this is extraordinary," Roy Herzfelder said. "The science is first rate, and the new equipment is going to ensure quality data. It's as professional as it gets."

President of the CSCR Jack Buckley is very optimistic about the potential impact the program could have on the town. "I certainly hope it has a significant impact. It's a beautiful facility, and the location is beautiful," he said.

Buckley also notes that students involved in the research are providing a very meaningful service, which for them is "highly motivating."

Funding from the Community Preservation Act, as well as private donations and grants, covered the $100,000 it cost for CSCR to renovate to the building, Bobo said.

The town bought the former Hagerty house and the two acres that make up what is now Mariners Park 10 years ago. Buckley, who leases the boathouse on the property, approached selectmen about 18 months ago about leasing the Hagerty building for the CSCR. Selectmen approved the proposal last August after Buckley returned with detailed financial plans. Selectmen were initially reluctant because they didn't want to turn the town-owned building that needed considerable work over to another nonprofit that may or may not make it. The structure had been previously leased to the Lobster Lab, a maritime research facility, which was unable to realize its potential for the space. Selectmen ultimately terminated the Lab's lease because the nonprofit organization did not meet the conditions of the lease in terms of building upkeep and fundraising.

That history was a distant memory Friday as roughly 80 people attended the grand opening, which will no doubt be a new chapter for the Hagerty building.

The inspirational setting will also be shared by artists when the South Shore Art Center begins renting the second and third floors of the building for studio space. The money will be used to help maintain the building.

Lt. Gov. Healey hears local concerns at South Shore summit

Budget cuts, train, and Chapter 40B dominate powwow

By Matthew J. Gill
MGILL@CNC.COM

Chapter 40B development, local aid cuts and regional transportation projects — including the proposed $464 million Greenbush line — topped South Shore officials' list of concerns when they met with Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey.

About 25 representatives, most of them selectmen or town administrators from a dozen South Shore communities — including Abington, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Norwell, Rockland and Scituate — had an opportunity to weigh in on state policy and issues of local concern at the regional meeting with Healey earlier this month. The summit was held at the Rockland Trust bank in Brockton. State officials from Mass Highway, and the Department of Environmental Protection were also on hand to provide answers to some questions

"These meetings are an ongoing effort to hear from municipal officials," said Healey, who has been meeting with community leaders around the state since the Romney administration moved in to Beacon Hill.

Healey conceded this year's budget deficit has been "devastating," and has been the leading topic of many of the recent meetings, but she said the administration expects a moderate economic turnaround.

Rockland Town Administrator Brad Plante centered his comments on the state's budget cuts, which he said have hit hard his town hard.

"We took a tremendous hit this year; one of the largest on the South Shore," he said.

Plante said he wanted an explanation of what he described as the "voodoo" formula the state employs to decide budget cuts.

Healey said the current formula the state is using for local aid distribution is the expired house and senate formula. Romney's proposal for $232 million in statewide cuts for local aid was not accepted by the legislature.

"We are disappointed the House and Senate haven't embraced the reforms we have proposed," said Healey.

Abington Town Administrator Dori Jamieson also focused her comments on the state budget cuts which she said will result in more than 50 layoffs in the school department.

Jamieson said she's also concerned with school reimbursement funding, monies for the revitalization of North Abington, and improvements to roads leading to Abington's state parks.

Scituate Selectmen at the meeting took the opportunity to make their concerns about the MBTA's planned restoration of the 17.7-mile Greenbush commuter train clear to the Romney administration.

Addressing what he referred to as "the infamous train," Selectman Paul Reidy complained about missed deadlines by the MBTA and poor communication with the transit authority over the project, and questioned what the status of the project is at this point.

"We're looking at all the promises that have been made to local communities," said Healey.

She added that because Big Dig cost overruns have consumed most of the state's transportation dollars, the administration is looking at promoting "smart growth" opportunities.

Among these, Healey said the administration is looking at transportation changes that will add to local communities and their economies, more than they disrupt them.

Scituate Advisory Committee member Kathy Donohue said she doesn't feel that the proposed train line falls into that category.

"The whole Greenbush thing is the antithesis of smart growth," she said, and questioned why the rail line's largest parking lot is to be built in a neighborhood that most people couldn't locate on a map.

Donohue also wanted clarification on what is to become of the "no-name intersection," where Route 123 meets Chief Justice Cushing Highway, and proposals for a roundabout at the site.

"It's certainly nice for the Lt. Governor. to have some feedback from the people who are being affected by the state's policy," she said. "How can 1,000 cars get to Greenbush?"

Scituate Selectmen Chairman Joseph Norton was also direct in his comments about Greenbush.

"We can't grow anymore. We're at our maximum water supply," he said. "In the town of Scituate, town meeting voted overwhelmingly against the train."

He added that the town has spent $100,000 on non-reimbursable funds just in dealing with the MBTA.

"The train is not a plus for the town of Scituate," he said.

Norton asked Healey for a "sincere effort" to be made to look at commuter boats, and other cheaper forms of transportation.

Hingham Town Administrator Charles Cristello brought another message of opposition to the rail project and took issue with the projece being described as a tool for economic development.

"We commend you for taking a hard look at Greenbush," he said. "If you judge this by merit, we're confident you'll make the right decision," he said.

The condition of state roads in local communities was another issue local officials addressed.

Describing his town as "the hub of the South Shore," Abington Selectman Jerry Corcoran said he wanted state funding for improvements to Route 18, and officials in both Whitman and Rockland decried the state of their roads — which they said are chock-full of potholes.

Plante added that Rockland roads were severely damaged over the winter, and a pile of pothole-induced insurance claims are currently cluttering his desk.

While it was brought up by nearly every official in attendance, the Chapter 40B housing development issue was put off for discussion until the end of the meeting at Healey's request.

Norwell Town Administrator James Boudreau said some developers have been bypassing town zoning by implementing the 40-B "loophole." He gave an example that if a plan for a $1 million house was turned down, a developer could use the 40B legislation to put a 55-unit housing on that spot instead.

Healey said a bi-partisan 40B task force that was set up to analyze the issue, recently reported its findings to the administration. One of the issues the task force analyzed is how a community's mobile or manufactured homes are credited, she said.

Healey said the group's recommendations would have to go before the House to be amended into law, but the general consensus regarding the mobile residences is that they should be included in the affordable housing counts.

She added that community characteristics including an area's density, and closeness to public transportation would be looked at when making decisions on Chapter 40B legislation.

3 Jerusalem Lane may set a precedent homeowner's right to build a new home with spectacular ocean views for which he was issued a building permit, over the objections of some neighbors, who say the new house at 3 Jerusalem Lane blocks their views, reduces their property values, and doesn't fit the neighborhood.

Putting all technical issues aside, Martin Healy, an attorney representing the Ayers, urged the Zoning Board to do the right thing in what is "a truly unfortunate situation."

"It was not our intent to find ourselves here," he said.

Although the neighbors have been fighting to stop work on the property for nearly a year, issues surrounding the house — which more than doubles the ranch-style home it replaced — are still wending their way through the hearing process.

The zoning board's decision to uphold the neighbors' appeal of Building Inspector Bob Egan's issuance of a building permit for 3 Jerusalem Lane set the stage for last week's hearing. In other words, the zoning board agrees with the neighbors that a building permit should not have been issued without the owner first obtaining a special permit because the lot the house sits on is undersized under the current zoning bylaw. The owners, Phil and Mary Anne Ayer, were told on Jan. 16 to stop work on their home, which was 80 percent complete at that point. They have appealed that ZBA decision to court and have also asked the larger question about whether they are being singled out. Their lawyers have produced building permits issued over the past several years for new homes on undersized lots. The only difference between the Ayers' home and others in question may be that the Ayers' neighbors have complained more. The building permits for the other homes were never appealed to the Zoning Board.

What's now before the zoning board is whether to issue or deny the special permit for the house. The decision to deny, if issued, means the new house meets the test of being "substantially more detrimental to the neighborhood" [the standard in the bylaw].

Whatever happens, it is likely that an another appeal is in the offing, which would send the matter to court.

Healy argued state law and the town's zoning bylaw protects owners of undersized lots that pre-date zoning. He said the ZBA must decide in what respect the Ayers' home — which he said meets all zoning setback, height and lot coverage requirements — increases the non-conformity. And then the board must decide if that aspect of the non-conformity causes detrimentally to the neighborhood.

"This structure is in full compliance with zoning requirements save one issue, this undersized lot," he said, pointing out that all lots on Jersualem Lane are undersized.

Mark DeGiacomo of Beach Street who has taken up the case for the neighbors said the law only protects vacant lots that predate zoning. He said homeowners in a neighborhood have the right to expect the homes that are there will remain or they should at least have the opportunity to be heard before the ZBA. He said if the Ayers had reconstructed essentially the same house, they would not have needed a special permit.

DeGiacomo also urged the board not to be swayed by arguments the Ayers have suffered by the series of events and the fact their house is built.

"All you do is grant or deny the special permit," he said, agreeing the "situation is certainly unfortunate for everybody." DeGiacomo said in the final analysis the courts will make the decision where to proceed from here.

The only relevant issue is whether the house intensifies the non-conformity, he said

The Zoning Board closed the hearing, allowing two weeks for both sides to submit briefs, and a week for each to respond to the other side's briefs, from both sides. The board will conduct preliminary deliberations on the issue at its July meeting; and continue deliberations at the August meeting, Chittick said.

ZBA says Ayers have no standing on other permits

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The Zoning Board of Appeals has decided Phil and Mary Anne Ayer, owners of 3 Jerusalem Lane, do not have standing to appeal the building permits on other homes in town built on under-sized lots.

Attorneys for the Ayers hoped the ZBA would consider appeals of building permits on 147 Beechwood St., 396 Jerusalem Road, 575 Jerusalem Road, 7 Lothrop Lane, 22 Norfolk Road and 414 N. Main St.

But last week, the ZBA said the Ayers did not suffer a specific harm from those properties, which are in other neighborhoods.

The Ayers' attorney Roberta Sawyer argued her clients had been singled out and required to file for a special permit when other homeowners in similar circumstances did not, and thus the Ayers' home had been "elevated to a level of scrutiny" not required of the other houses.

She said the Ayers have been negatively impacted in that they cannot sell or finance their home, which has been the subject of ongoing controversy.

ZBA chairman Woody Chittick asked, for example, how 22 Norfolk Road affected 3 Jerusalem Lane.

Sawyer said the unfair treatment of her clients' had caused "tremendous" harm and that the lawyers, architects and engineers would not be sitting before the board if that was not the case. She said her clients' individual civil rights have been violated.

Chittick said the civil rights issue was not relevant in determining whether the Ayers suffered specific harm from any one of the properties in question.

ZBA member Ben Lacy agreed saying he could not see any causal relationship between the properties.

ZBA member Anson Wheeler said the Ayers' claim of being aggrieved was too general to be relevant in a hearing before the board. He said their claim was more of a "general public good" issue than one of a specific nature the board could address.

The board voted 4-0 to deny the appeals.

Neighbor's roof deck is an issue

The Ayers, owners of 3 Jerusalem Road Lane, think their neighbor and chief critic of their home, needs zoning relief to add a roof deck to his house at 322 Jerusalem Road.

Roberta Sawyer, attorney for the Ayers, argued Stephen Daly needed a special permit to alter his home, which is a pre-existing, non-conforming structure because the work being done is on a part of the house that is in excess of the town' height requirements.

Mark DeGiacomo, who is representing Daly, told the ZBA "this is no more than an attempt at intimidation and retribution for Mr. Daly's involvement in 3 Jerusalem Lane."

Sawyer disputed DeGiacomo's charge and said her client, whose house is on ledge above the Dalys and looks down on the deck, could suffer potential harm from noise and parties.

There was some dispute over the height of the deck and the preexisting roof which it would replace.

ZBA Chairman Woody Chittick said if the deck is below 35 feet there is nothing to appeal and asked the homeowner to get a measurement.

The ZBA continued the hearing to its September meeting.

Look who's back

Levangie returns to CHS to take over girls hoop team

By Jim Logan
CORRESPONDENT

After taking a break from the rigors of the head coaching scene, longtime South Shore mentor John Levangie is back to take the helm once again, returning to the bridge of the Skippers, hoping to steer the wayward vessel of the Cohasset girls basketball team.

As anyone who's followed the Lady Skippers over the past several years knows, the locals have been unable to secure a state tournament bid for awhile now. Despite an overall improvement to the program over the past three seasons with the help of recently resigned Ellen Carr, the bottom line is the CHS girls have been unable to crack the hard shell of the South Shore League's upper-tier squads, an endeavor needed in order to make it to the Big Dance.

Now, it's Levangie who's hopeful he'll be successful in getting that job done.

With more than 25 years of coaching experience in the Greater Boston/South Shore areas, Levangie understands what it takes to bring teams to the Tournament. Over the past quarter century, Levangie has helped numerous clubs from several cities and towns (including the Cohasset boys basketball program in 1977-79, as well as BC High, Westwood and Wayland). Now, he'll be trying to aid the Skippers once again.

And he's more than up for the challenge.

"I'm ready," smiled Levangie, who lives in Scituate.

Although it's his first head coaching position since his "retirement" more than two years ago, Levangie stated the short time off means little to him.

"Head Coaching, I think, is in the blood," said Levangie, who actually served as an assistant girls basketball coach at Notre Dame Academy the last two winter seasons. "And it wasn't as if I haven't been coaching during the time. It was just I wanted to be a head coach again, I think. I had the fire in my belly."

He continued: "Luckily, Ron Ford (Cohasset High Athletic Director) was looking for someone to step in and take over the girls basketball program. It was a good fit for everybody."

Ford feels the saw way.

"We're extremely excited to have someone with John's experience agree to come on board and try to turn our program around," said the third year AD. "I think anyone who follows that program should be excited about the type of proven coaching skills John brings."

Outside of meeting with some of his players once before the summer break, Levangie admit-

A decade worth of frustration ends

Post 118 ends Braintree's 10-year head-to-head mastery

It was a 10 years in coming. And, though it wasn't quite worth the wait, it did feel pretty good.

The Cohasset Post 118 Legion baseball team ended a decade's worth of frustration at the hands of Zone 6 rivals Braintree on Monday night, pulling out a dramatic come-from-behind 5-4 win on their home Scituate High field.

Thayer Academy sophomore to be Greg Malley, of Scituate, went the distance on the mound against the perennially powerful Post 86 squad defending, scattering six hits and four walks to earn his second win of the season.

Malley, 15, threw a lot of pitches and appeared to struggle with his control at times, but he bore down to get the big outs when he had to, proving to veteran coach Scott Arnold something he already strongly suspected.

"That kid has no fear," said Arnold, who, with the win, put an end to his ohter 30 run against Braintree.

The young righty hurler was clearly getting upset over ball and strike calls in the late stages of the game when Arnold pulled him aside for a quick chat.

"I just told him, at this level, you take that anger and use it in your pitching," said the 10th year Post 118 Field Manager. "He's a kid with a real good arm, but he's still got things to learn. He did a great job tonight, though."

Malley surrendered one run each in the second, third and fourth innings, and his mates were able to answer with only a solo run in the bottom of the second.

Malley had no one to blame but himself when Braintree broke the ice in the top of second. After Ryan Thompson opened the inning by legging out an infield single, a misfired pick-off attempt at first base allowed Thompson to scamper all the way around to third. A

All-Scholastic boys track team

Cohasset's Krupczak, Kidder, 4x100 relay team named among area's elite

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

Several of the young men you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

In the end, however, we limited ourselves to a team of just 16 individuals and three relay squads, and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top male tracksters in Marinerland for this honor.

Ian Kidder - Senior (Capt.)
Javelin - Cohasset

Ian Kidder

This two-time Mariner All-Scholastic spring trackster is a true jack of all trades...played a huge part in each of the Skippers back-to-back unbeaten seasons in his sophomore and junior years, regularly placing in sprints (200), jumps (the triple being his specialty), on the field (javelin) and in relays (a member of the two-time Mariner All-Scholastic 4x100 team)...suffered a hamstring injury in his senior year, but still managed to qualify for the javelin, then take fourth at the state Class D meet with a throw of 163-07 to advance to the All-State championships...finished 18th in the javelin at All-States with a disappointing throw of 154-09...two-time South Shore League all-star...helped the 4x100 finish third at the Class D meet with a season best time of 45 seconds to advance to All-States (unfortunately, the team did not run here due to CHS graduation falling on the same day)...was a starter for the CHS basketball team this winter and a standout golfer for the school team as well...a good student...an Appalachia Project volunteer...will attend Bucknell and attempt to make the school's Div. I track team...intends to major in Environmental Studies with an eye toward a career in architecture...Cohasset coach Al LaFountain: "Ian has talent, obviously, but he also has a real passion for track, and that helps set him apart from a lot of other kids. He and Jared (Krupczak) were great captains and they carried themselves like captains."

Leary gets kick out of new job

Former Rockland High head coach named new CHS boys soccer coach

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Rob Leary loves coaching. He's really enjoyed coaching the Scituate High boys tennis team these last four springs and helping out with the perennial powerhouse Rockland High boys basketball team over the last five.

Now he gets to combine this love with another one: soccer. Last week, Cohasset High Athletic Director Ron Ford named Leary the new head coach of his boys soccer program.

"Soccer will always be my first love, so I'm really thrilled to get back into head coaching soccer," said Leary, a former Rockland High star who went on to play college soccer at Plymouth State, and is currently an assistant boys soccer coach at his high school alma mater. "I'm quite familiar with Cohasset, obviously, and I think it's a great situation for me."

Leary met last week with a group of returning CHS players from last year's state tourney team and viewed the school and field, all of which only fueled his enthusiasm for the new post.

"Cohasset has great facilities, a great A.D. (Ford) who I look forward to working with and a very strong middle school program that will hopefully continue to be a good feeder for the high school team," said Leary, a health teacher at the Rockland

Jared Krupczak - Senior (Capt.)
200 - Cohasset

Jared Krupczak

If not for graduation, Jared might well have burst out of the shadow of older brother Brian (CHS class of 2001, 2-time Class D 200-meter champ, now a standout at Washington and Lee University in Virginia)...Jared's qualifying run of 23.32 in the 200 at All-State meet would have advanced him to New England's (something Brian never did, though injury played a big part in that his senior year), but he elected to attend his high school graduation rather than run in the finals...despite being slowed by a hamstring injury, Jared finished third in the 200 at the Class D meet with a season best 23.31 seconds... also helped CHS 4x100 finish third at the Class D meet with a season best time of 45 seconds to advance to All-States (unfortunately, the team also did not run here due to CHS graduation)...also qualified for the class meet in the 100 and was a standout long jumper...two-time South Shore League all-star in track...was the starting point guard for the CHS basketball team this winter...plans to attend Bridgewater State College and run track... Cohasset coach Al Lafountain: "Jared was a lot like Ian (Kidder). He has a passion for track, and that passion carried him a long way. He was a great captain for us, and an extremely hard worker. He'll be missed for that as much as what he did on the track."

Kyle Morse - Junior
Discus - Hingham

Kyle Morse

No question here... One of the top discus throwers around, Morse was the owner of the state's best throw (164'11") that won the State Class C Meet...Morse went on to claim third at the All-State Championships and was seventh at the New Englands (153')...Unbeaten in the Patriot League in dual meet competition this season, Morse set a new PL Meet record (157'1"), which won him the title in the event...He won the South Shore Principal's Meet with the same throw...Just a junior, Morse said he is already planning to continue his track career in college. Hingham coach Fred Jewett: "The discus is kind of an odd event because it requires a very fine balance between throwing hard and throwing well and usually, Kyle is able to find that balance. He's very motivated and is a very hard worker. He's taken his throwing to a whole other level."

Alex Cook - Junior
Two-mile - Hanover

Alex Cook

This Patriot League All-star went unbeaten in the two-mile in dual meet competition this season, helping to lead Hanover (6-1) to a second place finish in the PL...Cook was third in the event at the State Class D Meet (10:02.49) and ran a personal best 10:00.95 at the All-State Championships to finish 16th overall...The junior runs cross country in the fall at HHS and is a two-time Mariner All-Scholastic in that sport...A meticulous worker, speed and endurance are among Cook's best qualities...Also a talented speed skater, Cook will be among the top returnees to the Indians' team next season. Hanover coach Brett Johnson: "Alex is a maniac. He loves running. He sets hard goals and he goes at them. I've actually been trying to cut him back (workoutwise) but he just loves it out there. He's done a lot of conditioning and is mentally tough."

Joe Haidul - Senior (Capt.)
Mile - Hanover

Joe Haidul

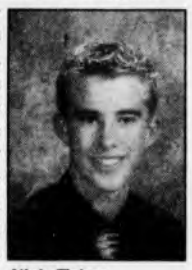
Only a two-year track runner, Haidul's leadership on and off the track helped land the Indians in a second-place finish in the Patriot League (6-1)...The senior captain finished 8th in the mile at the State Class D Meet with a personal best 4:42.28...Was also the owner of the PL's best 800-meter time (2:04) and competed in the long jump (18'1.5")...Haidul is making his second appearance on a Mariner All-Scholastic team as he was also on our cross country squad last fall...The graduate plans to join the Merchant Marines. Hanover coach Brett Johnson: "He's the consummate team player. He'd do anything he was asked to do and would get the job done. He was always willing to do anything as long as it helped the team. He's a great guy."

Paul Mansicalco - Junior
Multi-eventer - Hanover

The leading point-getter on the team last season, Maniscalco ranked third this season, aiding in the team's second-place finish in the Patriot League (6-1)...A standout sprinter and jumper, Maniscalco finished 9th in the 100-meters at the State Class D Meet (11.82), just one place (.02 seconds) shy of the finals...Was ranked among the top 5 in the PL in the 100, 200, and long jump (18'11") Also a hurdler and thrower, Maniscalco may be molded into a 400 runner next season...A two-time PL All-star, Maniscalco also plays soccer at HHS and hopes to attend college and continue his track career. Hanover coach Brett Johnson: "He's got such a long stride and is a tall kid. I think he'll be a great 400 runner. He's a great athlete and can do just about everything for us."

Paul Mansicalco

Nick Fisher - Junior
110-Hurdles - Abington



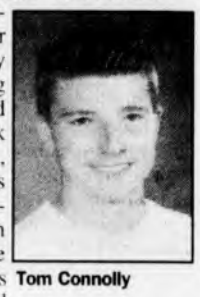
Nick Fisher

A breakout season for Fisher, this South Shore League All-star broke the Abington High record in the 110-meter hurdles with a 16.6...Fisher finished fourth at the South Shore Principal's Meet (16.85) and ran at the State Class D Meet, but an ankle injury sustained in practice kept him a bit off balance...Fisher also competed in the triple jump (38'), long jump, and 300-meter hurdles, helping Abington finish second in the SSL (7-2)...Fisher is a captain elect for next season. Abington coach Bob Hayes: "He's a good listener. He took the hurdles home for the summer because he wants to get better and he's willing to put in the extra work. He's a very coachable kid."

Dennis Hologitas - Junior
110-Hurdles - Rockland

A talented multi-event athlete, Hologitas excelled in the 110-meter hurdles, finishing third at the South Shore Principal's (16.71)...One of the Patriot League's best in the event, Hologitas finished second at the PL Championships with the fastest time of his career (15.9)...The junior was also third in the triple jump at the PL Meet...Hologitas competed in the 110 hurdles at the State Class C Meet...A three-year trackster and two-time PL All-star, Hologitas also ran the 300-meter hurdles and high jump...Hologitas also plays football and basketball at RHS and will be among the top returnees to the track team next season.

Tom Connolly - Senior
Two-mile - Marshfield



Tom Connolly

A standout senior on a very young Marshfield boys track squad, Connolly's performance in multiple events helped pace the team (2-5)...Connolly finished 4th in the two-mile at the South Shore Principal's 10:21.62, but ran a personal best 10:21.11 at the State Coaches' Invitational...He was second in the event at the Old Colony League Meet...Ran the third leg on the Rams' record-breaking 4x800-meter relay team, which competed at the All-State Championships...A cross country All-Scholastic last fall, Connolly plans to attend Mitchell College in Connecticut where he will continue his running career and study Phys. Ed. Marshfield coach Ryan Wagner: "Tom is such a strong runner. He's able to maintain himself very well. He had a great season."

Ryan Henry - Junior
400 - Norwell

Despite being slowed at the beginning of this season by a hip flexor injury, Henry was able to qualify for the state Class D meet in the 400-meter race, where he finished a respectable 10th overall with a time of 52.32 seconds...his season best 400 time was a 51.8...the inability to train hard for the first month of the spring season (due to injury) made it difficult for him to regain the form that saw him finish second in the 600-meter race at the indoor Class D meet this past winter...also threw the javelin and ran a leg for a very good 4x400 relay team...South Shore League track all-star in both the winter and spring seasons in 2003...a sensational player for the NHS soccer team that won the SSL title this past fall...earned SSL and Mariner All-Scholastic Honorable Mentions for soccer in 2002... an extremely accomplished website designer, he created and maintains the Bostontrack.com website that reports on South Shore League track...a National Honor Society student...has heard from several schools with prominent track programs, including Stanford and Boston College...a member of the Galway Rovers soccer club team that recently finished as runners-up for the Mass. Premiere Elite League championship...Norwell coach Mike Murray: "Ryan is an extremely powerful runner with very little wasted motion. He's got great running form and he works hard at it. I think if he'd been healthy at the beginning of the year, you'd have seen a much higher finish at the Class meet. The good news is he's got another year to show what he can do."

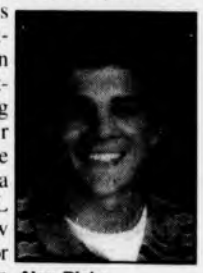
Tom Kleber

This is Kleber's second consecutive Mariner All-Scholastic selection for spring track and third overall (he also made our '02 cross country squad)...the year-round track star, who already has three All-State meets under his belt, qualified for the state 800 with a 2:03.44...unfortunately, he fell well below that at last month's Class D meet (2:04.3), though he still finished a respectable eighth...Tom was slowed for the last several weeks of the regular season by a hamstring strain that forced him to sit out a few duel meets... also competed in the long jump and ran a leg for a very good 4x400 relay team...hopes to run track in college...is looking at Sacred Heart (Connecticut), among others...Norwell coach Mike Murray: "It's a shame Tom's spring season had to be slowed by injury, but I'm looking for really big things for him next season. I know he's going to train hard this summer, and really work on his endurance in the cross country season. He has a lot of natural talent. With some hard work, I think he'll really have a huge senior year."

Alex Piche - Sophomore
Mile - Silver Lake



Alex Piche

Alex is fast following in the footsteps of big brother Mike Piche, a 2001 SL grad (now running for Brown University), who was the New England mile champ in his senior year...OCL All-Star in distance events...was undefeated in 800 during regular OCL duel meets...finished second in the 800 at the OCL championships...won the 1-mile four times during the season, losing only to Barnstable's Matt Clark...has personal bests of 2:04 in the 800, 4:34 in the mile and 10:28 in the 2-mile...member of the 4x1-mile relay team that broke the Silver Lake record at the state relays this spring...finished fifth at the South Shore Principal's meet in the mile...competed in the Class A mile...also an OCL All-Star indoors this winter and for cross country in the fall...also a Mariner All-Scholastic selection for cross country...High Honors student...Silver Lake coach Fred Watson: "Alex has what it takes to be a very, very good high school runner. He's got the type of tough mindedness and intestinal fortitude and work ethic. Plus, he's got a great family there behind him. It's going to be very exciting to see what he does the next two years."

Patrick Gorman - Junior
Shot Put/100 - Silver Lake

Patrick Gorman

The top point producer for a very good Silver Lake team over the course of this spring...an OCL all-star in the 100-meter dash, with a top time of 11.18...won the 100 four times in duel meet competition and was second the other three races...won the discus five times with a best throw of 126-8...won the shot put four times in duel meets, his best throw going for 41-8...also an OCL all-star in the shot put this past winter season...competed in 100 and discus at the class meet, but was suffering from a hamstring strain and performed well below his established best in both events... Silver Lake coach Fred Watson: "Pat is a warrior. He gave it his all every time out no matter what the event; it was whatever the team needed. He gave it his all at (the Class A meet) too, like you knew he would. He just didn't have the push in his legs with that injury that he normally does."

Steve Craven - Junior
Hurdles - Silver Lake

This junior really came into his own this spring on the track…named an Old Colony League all-star in the 300-meter hurdles, an event he won six times and took second in the other time in duel meet competition…best time in the event was a 42.2 seconds…also won the 110-meter hurdles in two duel meets, while taking second in his other six… ran a 42.34 at the state Class A meet, good for 10th place overall…a key contributor for the SL varsity soccer team this past fall…plays indoor soccer in the winter for the Cape Cod United club team…member of the National Honor Society…winner of the Renssalaer Medal for advanced math and Sciences…is interested in majoring in Engineering…is looking at Syracuse University, among many other schools… Silver Lake coach Fred Watson: "Steve is a bulldog in the hurdles races. He ran against some elite runners, but he never backed off, never gave an inch. He's a very unassuming kid but very determined too. He's a quiet leader by example."

Jim Bellofatto - Junior High jump - Braintree

Jim Bellofatto

This jack of all trades specialist qualified for the state Class A meet in two solo events (high jump and 400) and as part of the 4x100 relay team…also just missed qualifying for state in the discus…Bay State Conference All-Star…best time in the 400 was a 53.5…best high jump was 5-10…won the high jump in four of seven duel meets this spring, taking second place in the other three…was also first or second in all seven 400-meter races…always competed in maximum of four events at duel meets, competing at least one time in the 100, 200, 400, 4x1, high jump, disc and shot put…also a sensational football player this past fall for the BHS team, earning BSC All-Star and Mariner All-Scholastic honors… 6-3, 210-pound defensive end hopes to play college football and has already heard from several Div 1A (including a few Ivy League schools) and Div. 2 programs…Honor Roll student…Braintree coach Kevin Jameson: "Jim would be a great decathlete. There's almost nothing he can't do on the track or field. He'll do whatever you ask him to if it's for the good of the team, and get points in just about everything. As a coach, you love the kind of flexibility he gives you."

Justin Lutz - Sophomore
110 Hurdles - Braintree

Justin Lutz

The top point-getter for the Wamps this spring… often won three events at duel meets: the 110m hurdles, long jump and triple jump…qualified for the state class A meet in the 110 hurdles and triple jump with personal best marks of 15.35 seconds and 39-6, respectively… just missed qualifying for states by just two inches in the triple jump with his best leap of 19-10…Bay State Conference All-Star came the closest of all BHS athletes at the Class meet of advancing to All-States, finishing sixth in the 110 hurdles… unfortunately, Justin got hung up on a hurdle in the championship heat, finishing with a disappointing 17.49 seconds, well off his preliminary heat times (15.83 and 15.78), either of which would have been good enough to advance him to All-States…also a winter track league all-star…also had a best of 11.5 seconds in the 100-meter dash…would like to run college track, and has an eye on the Northeastern program… Braintree coach Kevin Jameson: "Justin is an incredibly hard worker with incredibly dedicated parents. He keeps improving so much every season. With that work ethic, you can see him being a fantastic hurdler by his senior year."

Relay Teams:

4x100 relay team
Cohasset
Ian Kidder- senior
Jared Krupczak- senior
Peter Bunstein- sophomore
Eric Belz- junior

Even after Bunstein joined the team late in the season as a replacement, this squad just kept getting better, peaking with a season best 45.0 timing at the state Class D meet, good for third place and a spot at the All-State track championships… unfortunately, the team did not run at All-States, as the event coincided with CHS graduation…team won South Shore League championship for second year in a row…Cohasset coach Al LaFountain: "Once Peter (Bunstein) got into race shape and he got his confidence, things just really took off for this group. It's going to be tough to replace Jared and Ian, but Eric and Peter are now established and we've got a few strong runners coming in."

4x400 relay team
Hingham
Sean Hagan - senior
Pat Phelan - freshman
Billy Monahan - freshman
Brendan Aucoin - senior

This quartet of two seniors and two freshmen finished 9th at the State Class C Meet, running their fastest time of the season 3:40.21, also the best time in Marinerland this spring…The Harbormen team was second at the Patriot League Championships (3:43.8)…Hagan (a senior) and Phelan (a junior) bring their individual 400-meter skills to the table, while Monahan (a freshman hurdler) and Aucoin (a senior jumper) brought skills from their other events to the relay…All four boys ran legs between 52.0-55.0…Teammate Alex Ramsdell has also run on the relay in dual meets.

4x800 relay team
Marshfield
Justin Pelkowski - junior
TJ Griffis - junior
Tom Connolly - senior
Curtis Sherman - senior

This talented quartet broke the Marshfield High record in the relay twice this season and made it to the All-State Championships…They broke the old mark of 8:30.5 at the State Class B Relays (8:28) and at the State Class B Meet (8:23.06), finishing third each time…All running legs between 2:03 and 2:05, junior Pelkowski's aggressive lead-off leg consistently allowed Griffis (a junior) and Connolly (a senior) to maintain the pace, while Sherman (a senior) powered it home. Freshman Casey Hubbard was an alternate on the team. Marshfield coach Ryan Wagner: "Justin runs a gutsy first leg. He goes hard and holds it. TJ and Tom are both milers at heart, so that distance background really helps pace them. Curtis gives everything he has left in the final kick."

wild pitch a few moments later scored him.

Cohasset's Eric Dmohowski plated Mike Gulinello from third with a sharp single to left in the bottom of the second to tie the game. Gulinello had led off the inning with a walk, stole second and advanced to third on a groundout by Brian Signorelli behind the runner—a textbook example of the type of "small ball" coach Arnold feels his charges will have to play this season if they are to be successful.

"We've talked to the kids a lot about playing this kind of ball," said Arnold. "We've told them to be selective at the plate, make pitchers work, advance runners when we can, take the extra base when we can, and hope our big guys come through at the plate. Tonight that worked pretty well."

Indeed it did. The Post 118ers scored five times with only nine batters reaching base (seven hits, two walks).

It would take a while for the Cohasset bats to start warming up, however, as Braintree hurler Pat Driscoll sat down 10 of the first 12 batters he faced.

Malley was victimized in both the third and fourth innings when he allowed the leadoff hitters to reach, Tom Trall on a walk and Andy Connors on a double that short-hopped the fence in left center. Both would come around to score to make it a 3-1 game.

The hosts would tie things up in the bottom of the fourth with three straight two out hits. After a pair of strikeouts by Driscoll to open the inning, Gulinello singled up the middle, Brian Signorelli put one off the fence in left for a double and Dmohowski plated them both by slashing a single through the hole to left.

Two more runs in the fifth pushed the hosts ahead for good. Ted Straughn led off by working a walk, which ended the day for Driscoll on the mound, as he was relieved by lefty Nick Barese. Straughn then got to second on a passed ball, went to third on a ground out to first base by Malley and scored on Tim Pilczak's seeing eye single through the right side.

Kevin Signorelli then laced a single to right, Pilczak advancing to third. The two then executed a double steal, Signorelli sacrificing himself at second so that Pilczak could score to make it a 5-3 game.

That insurance run proved to be the difference in the game, as Braintree pinch-hitter Matt O'Connell opened the seventh with a blast over the fence in left center to make it a 5-4 game.

Malley, who'd retired seven of eight Braintree batters prior to the O'Connell homer, bounced back to strike out the next hitter, but then leadoff hitter Bob Osgood worked a walk. Gulinello erased the speedy Osgood by ranging far into the hole from his shortstop position to backhand a grounder off the bat of Jim Pierce and fire to second for the force and the second out. A Brendan Daly comebacker then ended the game, with Malley racing to first to record the final out.

"If we play the type of game we did today, we'll have a lot more wins before it's over," asserted Arnold, who saw his team improve to 2-5 with the win. "The guys promised me a win over Braintree for my 10th anniversary (of coaching) and they delivered."

The teams in Zone 6 play 20 games in 9-team league, the teams with the top five records advancing to the playoffs.

Braintree, the defending Zone 6 regular season champs, fell to 3-2-1 in league with the loss, but 3-10-1 overall, as they've dropped numerous games to out-of-state powerhouse teams. Post 86 is without tow of it's top players right now in Matt O'Connell, who continues to be slowed by a pulled hamstring, and number one pitcher Derek Rice, who may miss the entire season with a back injury. Still, Braintree coach Kirk Fredericks made it clear following Monday's loss that he expected more of his players.

"I'm disappointed right now," said Fredericks. "I'm disappointed in the attitude and lack of enthusiasm of some of the players right now. We've got some good players out, but that's no excuse. Other guys need to pick it up."

Legion Notes

Monday's win made it two in a row for the Post 118ers after five losses. The joint Cohasset-Scituate squad also shutout perennial Zone 6 power West Roxbury last Tuesday, 2-0, behind another strong complete game effort on the mound from Malley (five strikeouts, two walks, three hits).

Kevin Signorelli scored both runs. The Thayer Academy sophomore singled, stole second, and came home on a single by Brian Woods in the third inning to open the scoring. Gullinello knocked him home from third with a base hit in the fifth to pad the lead.

In between these two wins, scheduled games with Morrissette and Stoughton were postponed due to wet field conditions.

The team was scheduled to get back into action last night at home versus West Roxbury and then hit the road to face Milton tomorrow (Milton Academy, 5:45 p.m. start) and Weymouth on Sunday (5 p.m. start). They'll be back at home against Quincy on Monday (5:45 p.m.) and then travel to Canton on Wednesday.

"We've got a chance to win a few games in a row with what we've got coming up, I think," said Arnold. "We've still got time to make that playoff push. Let's hope this is the start of something good."

The Coastal Star Mite C1 team finished an outstanding season with a first-place finish and a record of 19-1-3. The trademark of this team throughout the season was strong team defense. Not only did they receive strong goaltending and great positional play from their defensemen but also the forwards proved to be the hardest working back checkers in the league.

The Stars finished the season with a minuscule goal against of 1.00 This trend would continue in the playoffs, as they gave up an average of 1.25 goals against in four playoff games, including the championship.

The Stars opened the playoffs with a 1 to 0 win against Plymouth. The Stars then tied the Seahawks 1 to 1 and lost a tough one against Norwood. However, in the championship game they were facing a Plymouth team that wanted revenge.

Again the Stars won the thrilling defensive battle 1-0 on a goal by Henry Brown. The Stars' strong defense was led by Brian Smith, Joe Lasko, Jake Denton, Coleman Hernon, Jack Kuppens, Joe Kiley and goalie Joe Commesso

The offense was led by Peter Bent, Max Hemmingway, Jack Condon, Ed Tobin, Matt Sullivan, Erin Shea, Ryan McGovern and Henry Brown. Dave Denton was the head coach and Den Bent and Joe Commesso were the assistant coaches. Ed Tobin and Bob Sullivan also helped out as coaches.

The team was made up of 7-, 8- and 9-year-olds from the towns of Marshfield and Cohasset. The C1 Mite team was one of two Coastal Stars' teams to win their division and the playoff championship in the Yankee Conference.

Leary gets kick out of new job

Middle School the last eight years who will move on to become a Phys Ed teacher at Rockland High next fall.

As if that wasn't enough, Leary gets to reunite with best friend Rick Dockendorff, the Cohasset High junior varsity and assistant coach the last six years.

Dockendorff was the starting goalie on the Plymouth State team, Leary a defensive fullback whose job it was to protect the goalie. The two have remained close since their graduation from PSC in 1992, as is witnessed by the fact Dockendorff will be Leary's wedding party later this summer.

When Dave Nigro resigned last fall as CHS's varsity coach after three extremely successful seasons, it was originally thought the popular JV coach would become the new varsity coach, but Dockendorff is working toward his Master's Degree in teaching and had already committed to a fall course load. Fortunately, Dockendorff still feels he'll have enough time left over to continue on with his responsibilities to the JV team.

"Rick and I have worked well in the past," said Leary—who, when he was head boys soccer coach at Rockland High before stepping down to pursue his Master's degree, had Dockendorff as his assistant coach. "I'm sure we can do so again."

The Skippers have finished no worse than third in the South Shore League and won at least one game in the state tourney each of the last three years. Leary is feeling the pressure to continue that recent tradition.

"I know they've lost a lot of good players to graduation the last few years, but Cohasset always seems to produce good soccer talent," said Leary. "I'm banking on that again."

Nigro installed a ball control offense that stressed short accurate passing. Fortunately, this is a system with which Leary is quite comfortable, and would like to continue.

"For the most part, I'll just be looking to build on what Dave has put in place," said Leary. "We'll be a defensive-minded team and try to control everything from the back, but, yeah, basically, I'll be looking to carry over a lot of what's already there."

As for his love for soccer, Leary has found a way to turn it into an almost full-time affair, as he recently signed on to manage a new indoor/outdoor soccer/lacrosse facility in Rockland

The Mass Sports Club is located on VFW Drive next to Cataloni's Restaurant. The facility uses the same state of the art turf that B.U.'s Nickerson Field does which does not inflict floor burns. The larger outdoor facilities will be used for soccer, lacrosse and flag football leagues, and has lights for night games.

"So I'll be around soccer a lot between now and next fall," said Leary. "Just watching will be tough, because I can hardly wait to get going for real with the Cohasset team."

There Is an Alternative to Nursing Home Care

Families today are in search of much needed care for their senior family members. Yet, they know that the institutional environment of a nursing home that focuses on ailments and infirmities is not always a good choice. There is a better senior living alternative—Sunrise Assisted Living.

Here, in a beautiful homelike setting, residents enjoy supportive health care for all the realities of advanced age and the promise of new friendships, too. Sunrise is a positive and lively senior living option, where quality of life is as great a priority as good physical care. And... Sunrise is significantly less expensive than a nursing home. A truly better value and a better life.

The numbers don't lie

CHS lady laxers eye fourth straight postseason berth in 2004

By Lou Molinari
CORRESPONDENT

What number comes to mind when you think of the Cohasset High girls lacrosse team? Humor me — think of a number.

If you said seven, that's great, because that's the number I had in mind.

The Cohasset High girls lacrosse team loses seven senior players to graduation, and guess what — the number of core juniors returning next year just happens to be, you guessed it, seven players.

Of course, we need something stronger than just two reasons for the seven number game.

How about this: the Skippers finished the season with seven wins.

And, how about, the Skippers finished with seven losses.

Here's where we lose the sevens: the Skippers also had two ties as they qualified for the tourney, making it to the first round, losing to Milton, 16-11. It marked the third straight year Cohasset made it to the tourney.

Torin Sweeney has been the coach for the past two years, both times ending the season with a .500 record.

Of the seven seniors graduating, four are defensive players and three are from the offense.

The goalie, Gia Petrakis, is one of the senior defensive players gone. She leaves a big hole, having made more than 900 saves in her four year career, more than 200 of them coming this past season.

"In a couple of games this season, she single-handedly won games," declared coach Sweeney.

The other three defensive seniors include captains Catherine Coyne and Julie Lordan. Nell Brewer is the third senior. Catherine and Julie were four-year varsity starters, Catherine posting 10 goals and four assists.

"They were both exceptional leaders," commented Sweeney.

Rachel Smith is one of seven graduated seniors who'll be deeply missed by the CHS lady laxers next spring.

According to the coach, Nell had an outstanding second half of the season guarding her opponents, and was instrumental in helping her team qualify for the tourney.

The three offensive seniors graduating from the team include Maura McKenney, Rachel Smith and Maura O'Brien. According to Sweeney, McKenney was one of the top players in the strong Pilgrim Conference. She scored 40 goals and 10 assists this past season, and had a career total of 118 goals, noted the coach.

"Her offensive power will be missed," said Sweeney.

Smith, a wing, was a two-year varsity starter, and a key playmaker on the team. O'Brien started her first varsity season and played exceptionally, according to the coach.

The seven juniors who will be back as seniors include Nicole Turgiss, Meghan Marr, Kristen Reardon, Libby Meiklehan, Ashley Faber, Kara Flint and Jessie Giles.

Nicole will be the offensive player the Skippers will count upon next season, having accounted for 38 goals this past season.

"Giles had an injury this past season, but when she was finally able to play, she was outstanding," said Sweeney.

"We expect a big season from Giles next year," the coach added.

The coach also picked out two exceptional younger players who will be back, sophomore Lauren Rizzotti (14 goals) and freshman Lisa Spirito (8 goals).

"All in all, we had a very good season and we're looking to improve on the numbers even more next year," concluded Sweeney.

Cohasset team enters Little League World Series

The Cohasset Little League has entered a team into the 2003 Little League World Series playoffs that begin on July 29.

Each year, for more than 60 years, Little League has sponsored this international tournament that culminates in a world championship in August in Williamsport, PA. Qualifying play kicks off in late June in various districts around the United States. In general, the tournament begins at the district level with a couple of elimination tournaments followed by sectional, state and then regional championships. Each year eight teams from the US go to the Williamsport World Series along with eight international representatives.

Last year's World Series was highlighted by a 10 inning 0-0 game in which one pitcher notched 21 strikeouts and the other 20 strikeouts. A Little League team from the Jesse Burkett Little League in Worcester made it to the US finals.

Cohasset Little League is a member of district 8, which is one of the 16 districts in the state of Massachusetts. The district 8 playoffs are double elimination in the sense that each team must lose twice before being eliminated from the tournament. Last year's district winner was a team from the Braintree American Little League.

Cohasset's first game is on Sunday, June 29 at Sharon Field against Whitman. In addition, this year for the first time Cohasset Little League is actually holding a double header on July 2. Both games begin at 5:45 p.m. with one being hosted at Barnes Field and the other at the new Chase baseball facility. Come down to North Main Street to watch some high caliber Little League baseball.

This year's Cohasset Williamsport All Star Team was selected by the seven Major League head coaches, who evaluated the 11 and 12-year-old players during the regular season.

The team will be coached by Dan Martin, Ralph Berry and Jim Richardson. Players include: Evan Richardson, Adam Berger, Mike Froio, John Sturino, Danny Martin, John Kearney, Robby McCunney, Brendan Doonan, John Giuggio, Jordan Berry, Tom Buckley and Chris Brown.

The following game for the Cohasset Little League team will be Sunday, July 6 at a location and time dependent upon the outcome of their first game against Whitman on June 29.

Attention Little League coaches

Or any other folks involved in Cohasset youth sports. We'd love to hear from you. Please feel free to e-mail your team or league reports as often as you like to mspellman@cnc.com. We like pictures too.

ted he knows little about the team he'll be stepping out onto the court this season. But he is sure of a few things.

"We're building from the ground up, in a tough league, and I think everybody knows that," he said. "I don't feel like anyone's thinking there'll be a State Championship next season. Everyonefs realistic.

"But I do guarantee we'll all be working hard together to tune up this program, and I know the girls are going to play hard. I'm sure they want to make this team as good as we can, too."

SPORTS NOTES

Boys and girls Lacrosse clinics

The Cohasset Recreation Department will soon be taking registrations for both boy's and girl's Lacrosse clinics.

The clinics will be held the week of Monday, July 21, through Friday, July 25, for grades 3 to 6 from 8 to 10 a.m. at Milliken Field. The fee per participant will be $75 and checks may be payable to Town of Cohasset. A few days will run longer than 10 a.m., however, we will advise you of which days.

Mr. Chuck Jaffe will direct this unique opportunity to learn and develop the basic skills and concepts of lacrosse.

Registration forms can be obtained at the Recreation office, first floor, Town Hall in early May.

Summer Hoop Camp 2003

The Cohasset Recreation Department in conjunction with the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club will sponsor a summer Basketball camp, under the direction of Ron Ford.

Based upon age, two camp sessions will be available starting Monday, July 14, through Friday, July 18. Boys and girls, ages 8 through 11, will have camp from 8:30 to 11:30 AM while ages 12 to 15 will be from 12:30 to 3:30 p.m. The cost for both camps will be $100 per participant.

Brochures and registration forms will be available at Cohasset Town Hall, Recreation Department office in early May.

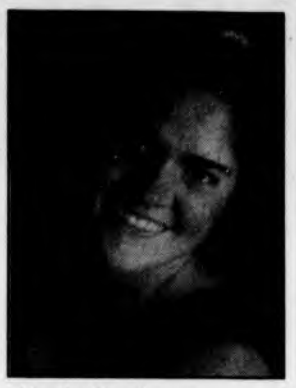
Notre Dame Academy's Cohasset graduates

Jenna E. Fegreus



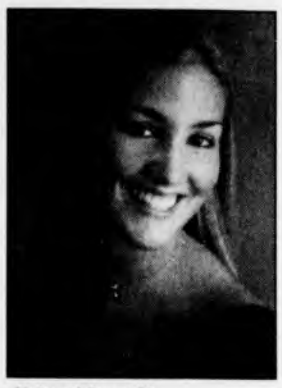
Martha Henderson

Laura Katherine Kondrat

Rachel McElroy

Anna-Jane Murphy

Katherine Roche



Krista Nicynski

Jenna E. Fegreus, a graduate of the Notre Dame Academy Class of 2003 will be attending Providence College in the fall. She was the recipient of the Mary Doyle Book Award at graduation ceremonies held on June 1.

Jenna was the co-president of the Model U.N. Club for three years; founder and president of the Notre Dame Academy Book Club; a member of campus ministry; a CCD teacher for two years at St. Anthony's Church; and a volunteer cook at Father Bill's Homeless Shelter in Quincy. Jenna is also a black-belt in Tae Kwon Do. She is the daughter of Ed and Jane Fegreus.

Martha Henderson will be attending the University of Richmond this fall. While at Notre Dame Academy, Martha served as treasurer of the National Honor Society and secretary of the Spanish National Honor Society. Martha played on NDA's Division I Varsity Soccer Team, was a member of the NDA Campus Ministry, sailing team, Key Club, Drama Club and the A Capella Choir. She was the recipient of the Kodak Young Leadership Award.

The daughter of Jane and David Henderson, Martha has been very involved with Cohasset's American Cancer Society's Relay For Life during the past four years. She is a member of MADD and was chosen to attend the first MADD Massachusetts Youth Summit. At graduation, Martha was awarded the Maribeth Merrigan Memorial Scholarship for her dedicated spirit, vision and character. She was recently chosen to be a summer intern at the Massachusetts State House in the office of Rep. Garrett Bradley.

Laura Katherine Kondrat graduated from Notre Dame Academy in a class of 142 distinguished young women. Secretary of the National Honor Society and president of the A Capella Choir, she was also active in drama, music and service organizations.

Laura received the Senior Class Theology Award and will attend Boston College in September where he will pursue pre-med and music courses. Her parents are Rick and Cheri Kondrat.

Member of the National, Latin and Technology Honors Societies, Rachel McElroy is active in both school and her community. Throughout high school, she was an energetic participant of the Drama Club, the A Capella Choir, the newspaper, the Chamber Choir and the Girl Scouts. She served as president of both the Debate Club and the Model United Nations Club.

Rachel is an avid volunteer. She works regularly with Notre Dame Academy, the Cohasset Community Center and St. Anthony's Parish. She was awarded the Girl Scout Gold Award for her work to improve community water safety in Cohasset and beyond. Recently, she was awarded the Cohasset Lightkeepers' Beacon Award; the Cohasset Veterans of Foreign War Post #9146 Scholarship; the Barbara Pape Memorial Scholarship from Boy Scout Troop 28; and the American Legion George H. Mealy Post #118 Scholarship in recognition of her community service and academic achievements. The daughter of Rachel and Joe McElroy, she will participate in the Honors Program at American University as a Presidential Scholar next year. She plans to major in international relations and pursue a career in diplomacy.

Krista Nicynski, a recent graduate of Notre Dame Academy and daughter of DeeDee and Ron Nicynski, is heading to Northeastern University this autumn. Krista has been actively involved in the campus ministry and is a team captain for Julie Family Learning Center, Father Bill's Place, Harbor House and Leadership Retreat.

Krista has been a community service volunteer as well with St. Anthony's Youth Ministry, Head Start and the Appalachia Service Project.

Katherine Roche will be attending the College of the Holy Cross in Worcester this fall. During her four years at Notre Dame Academy, she was captain of the field hockey team, a member of the A Capella Choir and the Drama Club and was very involved in NDA Campus Ministry.

At graduation, Katherine was awarded the Darling Scholarship, given in memory of Ali and Erin Darling, for her outstanding leadership in both campus ministry and in the Notre Dame community. She is the daughter of Sarah and Adrian Roche.

Anna-Jane Murphy graduated with honors from Notre Dame Academy where she was the editor of the school newspaper for two years. She was also a member of the track and basketball teams and served as a campus minister as well as Eucharistic minister.

In the fall, Anna-Jane plans to attend the University of Connecticut with a major in journalism. She is the daughter of Robert Murphy and Judith Ann Girholm.

John Hopkins' top students

Hundreds of Massachusetts's top academic students including four from Cohasset were honored this spring in special in-state ceremonies to celebrate their academic abilities.

The students participated in a national talent search sponsored by the Johns Hopkins University Center for Talented Youth (CTY). Founded in 1979, CTY identifies America's top students in grades 2 through 8 and provides programs, services, and resources to help them make the most of their special abilities.

These very bright young people were invited to participate in CTY's Talent Search because they scored at the 97th percentile or higher on school standardized test. They then took additional above-grade-level exams, which yielded further information about the verbal and mathematical reasoning abilities of these bright learners.

Seventh and eighth graders who took the college SAT and scored approximately in the top 25 percent compared to all students in the search are being recognized at Awards Ceremonies. Fifth and sixth graders who took the RL US Academic Abilities Assessment and scored approximately in the top 34 percent are honored at Celebrations of Talent. Both ceremonies will recognize students who scored in the top 19 percent of students taking CTY's Special Test Battery (STB), a test assessing spatial reasoning.

Ceremonies were held at Boston College and Clark University in Worcester on June 7, and Boston University on June 8.

Cohasset honorees include: Reed Dickinson, Ryan Ingram, Clifford Musto, Colleen Richardson, all from Cohasset Middle School.

Make way for piping plovers

Shorebird program helps population

By John Galluzzo
CORRESPONDENT

It's another windy, raw day, but for what Massachusetts Audubon Society Director David Clapp has in mind, the weather is just fine.

Leaving his Marshfield office at Audubon's South Shore Sanctuaries' headquarters just on the south side of the North River Bridge on Route 3A, he heads for the beach at Scituate's Third Cliff to check in on this year's piping plover population.

Piping plovers, those controversial little birds that have opened debates on beaches throughout the state, have arrived in Scituate. Accessing the beach at Third Cliff, known by the locals as "The Spit," Clapp leads volunteer Jennifer Quinn, one of the many who will monitor the plovers and other protected shorebirds on the beach this summer, across a wooden footbridge and onto a well-worn path to the water's edge.

The arguments that have arisen over the protection of piping plovers and other shorebirds all center on land usage. Beach-goers want beaches to themselves. Environmentalists would rather see the beaches shared to protect the wildlife. Luckily, most of the arguing has taken place away from the nesting areas themselves, and acts of vandalism against the birds are rare.

Clapp is well aware of the history birds like plovers bring to the beach, but realizes that a balance can be struck between them and the summer population of sun bathers, Frisbee throwers and picnickers that frequent the Spit each year.

"The good thing about plovers is that they choose the rocky areas, areas not chosen by people, as nesting areas," he notes.

A piping plover nest with a new generation of shorebirds.

Walking the length of the beach, as a strong chop throws whitecaps onto the water, the old Fourth Cliff coastal defense observation tower standing sentinel over the mouth of the North River, Clapp and Quinn point to the presence of several other species, least terns, a few greater terns, five or six Bonaparte gulls, willets, ruddy turnstones, and killdeer. Soon, the trademark piping whistle call of the piping plover is heard, from behind the symbolic fencing erected by Audubon Society volunteers earlier this year. George Ord knew what he was talking about when he named the species in 1824.

"Because of the geologic changes taking place on the beach, there's less and less of it suitable for nesting each year."
— David Clapp, Mass. Audubon

"There have been three pair nesting out here this year," says Clapp. "The good news is that the birds are going to be pretty far back because of the cut of the beach at high tide. The bad news is that high tides have already destroyed one nest," he says, pointing out where the water has encroached on the nesting area, washing away a nest, or scrape, and its four eggs.

"Because of the geologic changes taking place on the beach, there's less and less of it suitable for nesting each year." According to Clapp's observations, the beach at Third Cliff is changing before our eyes. It won't be as dramatic as the opening of the mouth of the river during the Portland Gale of 1898, but he can see where the water has already made inroads and started to erode and cut away portions of sand.

Piping plovers and other shorebirds are monitored at 83 sites along the Massachusetts coast as part of the Massachusetts Audubon Society's Coastal Waterbird Program, including eight spots on the South Shore from Hingham to Plymouth. From late March through August, the plover's breeding season, they nest in three sub-populations, the Atlantic area stretching from North Carolina to Newfoundland. Listed as threatened in the United States in 1986, the plover population has increased substantially with protection, from just 790 pairs that year in the Atlantic area to more than 1,300 in 2000. In Massachusetts the population has gone from 137 to 500 pairs. To put it in perspective, the worldwide plover population in 2000 was just over 3,000 pairs, one-tenth of that of the American bald eagle.

Plovers, which can reach fourteen years in age, mostly return to their nesting area of the previous year when they migrate northward from their winter habitats from Florida to the Carolinas, some from the Bahamas and Greater Antilles. Many make the trek with their mates. After selecting the location for their nest, usually on a broad, flat unvegetated, cobbled area, the male sets out to defend approximately a one hundred yard area from other males.

Clapp walks the entire length of the Spit with Quinn, giving her tips on the monitoring process as they go. They pass the two known scrapes that have survived the late spring tides, and fall for the mother birds' diversionary techniques. To draw attention from her eggs, the mother will lead intruders away, running along the beach until she feels her nest is out of danger. Then she will turn around and double-back, hoping that the threat has passed.

A good distance past the fencing, though, that obvious piping sound is heard again. "Uh-oh," says Clapp, reaching for his binoculars. "That may be a new pair, or it may be the same pair that got washed out further up the beach...there it is." Giving sightlines by way of clumps of grass, piles of seaweed and easily discerned rocks and stones, he leads Quinn's eyes to the new nest, and its three eggs.

As they approach to be sure of their find, Clapp and Quinn are treated to another of the mother plover's diversionary techniques. When a threat is what she considers dangerously close to the nest, she will feign a broken wing to draw attention. This one puts on a real show. She has no way of knowing that these folks, though, are some of the best friends she could have. The Massachusetts Audubon Society was formed in 1896 specifically for the protection of shorebirds.

Retracing their steps up the beach, they step over the dunes to a waiting stash of posts, rope and warning signs, all the necessary tools to build more protective fencing around the nest. Driving the posts into the soft sand, they ring the area around the nest, as the mother flops around furiously. Quinn will spend the rest of the morning watching the birds, keeping an exact count the length of the beach and noting their behavior.

On the way back down the path to his car, Clapp spots a blue heron in the salt marsh and speaks positively about the Third Cliff nesting area.

"This is really a neighborhood beach," noting that most of its users feel a sense of guardianship over it. "The real danger comes from people that just don't know what's happening out here. Rarely is it intentional trouble that leads to any problems with the nests." Visiting boaters who come to spend a day on the beach may unknowingly cause damage, unaware that the birds are even there as they enjoy their summer escape. Rainy, cold weather this spring has actually given the plovers a quiet respite by keeping visitors off the beaches.

"These birds just got a tremendous break with the bad weather on Memorial Day weekend," says Clapp.

Within a few weeks, and just days after they are hatched, the fledgling plovers will be running around on the beach, says Clapp. By August, they will fly south, and next spring, those chicks will set up their own nests and begin breeding. The goal is to have the plovers reach a population of 2,000 breeding pairs in the Atlantic area and with the help of Audubon volunteers they're well on their way.

Massachusetts Audubon director David Clapp points out nesting areas of piping lovers on "the Spit" in Scituate. Audubon volunteers will monitor and help protect the plovers during the summer season.

Signs warn beach-goers about the presence of the endangered piping plover.

OBITUARIES

Katherine F. Hanley

Katherine F. (Cahill) Hanley, age 80, of Cohasset and formerly of Weymouth and Westwood, died June 20, 2003 at Harbor House Nursing Home in Hingham, following a long illness.

Born in Charlestown, she was the daughter of James and Julie (Fitzgerald) Cahill and went to the New England Conservatory of Music.

Mrs. Hanley lived in Weymouth 20 years and in Westwood 30 years. She was a Cohasset resident for the past year.

She worked as an administrative assistant at the Massachusetts State Lottery Commission for more than 18 years, retiring in 1989.

Wife of the late Martin J. Hanley, Sr., she leaves her daughter and son-in-law, Maura and John Dunn of Cohasset; her two grandchildren, Kerry Irene and Brittany Katherine Dunn; and five nieces and nephews. She was the mother of the late Martin J. Hanley, Jr.; and the sister of the late James Cahill and his late wife, Barbara of Quincy.

A funeral Mass was celebrated June 24 at St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset. Interment was in Beechwood Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Cohasset.

Donations may be made in Mrs. Hanley's memory to the American Heart Association, 20 Speen St., Framingham 01701.

Robert L. Winsor

Robert L. Winsor, age 90, of Cohasset and formerly of North Carolina, died June 22, 2003 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

Born in New York City, Mr. Winsor was employed by Western Electric (Lucent) for 35 years as an accountant. He retired in 1977. He had lived in Cohasset the past seven years.

He was an active leader in the Alpha Program at St. Stephen's Church, Cohasset and was a strong supporter of the arts. He donated the stained glass windows to the library in Cohasset.

Husband of the late Inglis (MacLennan) Winsor, he leaves his son, Robert L. Winsor, Jr. of Lenox and his daughter, Sandra W. Emler of Hingham; his six grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

A funeral service will be held this Saturday, June 28 at 11 a.m. At St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., Cohasset. A burial service will take place in Oak Hill Cemetery, Nyack, NY for interment of cremated remains.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Pyne Keohane Funeral Home of Hingham.

Donations may be made in Mr. Winsor's memory to the St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Building Fund, 16 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025.

Helen Roubound

Helen (Drummond) Roubound, age 90, of Cohasset and formerly of Norwell, died June 22, 2003 following a brief illness.

Mrs. Roubound was a resident of Norwell for 40 years before moving to Cohasset where she has resided the past 17 years.

She was a graduate of Quincy schools and was educated at the New England School of Art. Her love of art and literature led her to her job as librarian at the James Library in Norwell until she retired at age 64.

She was an active member in the Norwell Garden Club.

The daughter of the late Edward and Agnes Drummond, she was the loving wife of the late Gustave Nils Roubound, who was a renowned South Shore watercolor artist. She leaves her devoted children, Lise D. and husband, Geoffrey O'Brien of Scituate and Anthony Lee Roubound of Tucson, Ariz.; her beloved grandchildren, Lindsey and Timothy O'Brien of Scituate, and Amy and Matt Roubound of Seattle, Wash.

A graveside service will be held at First Parish Cemetery (Route 123, Norwell Center) on Thursday, June 26 at 11:30 a.m. Relatives and friends are invited.

Funeral arrangements made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Norwell.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made in her memory to the Norwell Visiting Nurses Association, 643 Main St., Norwell 02061.

Ann D. Rosano

Ann D. Rosano, 55, of Cohasset, an office administrator, at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home, died June 21, 2003, at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth following a long illness.

She worked at the nursing home more than 25 years and retired in 2001.

Born in Brockton, she attended Bridgewater State College.

She lived in Cohasset for more than 50 years.

She was a member of the Thorough Bred Horse Association. She was an avid reader.

She leaves an aunt, Ann Froberger of Scituate and many cousins.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset. Interment was in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

Donations may be made to the Joslin Diabetes Center, 1 Joslin Place, Boston, 02215.

Warranty Information: For a copy of applicable product warranties, write to: Warranty Information, P.O. Box 12195, RTP, NC 27709, Attn: Dept. JDJA/B203. IBM makes no representation or warranty regarding third-party products or services. †Prices do not include tax or shipping and are subject to change without notice. Reseller prices may vary. For ThinkPad R30 and R31 models, and NetVista models without a separate video card, memory supports both system and video. Accessible system memory may be up to 64MB less than the amount stated, depending on video mode. 1GB = 1,000,000,000 bytes when referring to storage capacity. Accessible capacity is less; up to 3GB is used in service partition. Some software may differ from its retail version (if available) and may not include user manuals or all program functionality. Software license agreements may apply. "If a machine is listed as having "onsite service for select repairs" or "Limited Onsite Service," this means that onsite service is available only for the replacement of select parts. For all other warranty repairs, IBM will provide the customer a replacement part for customer installation. The parts for which onsite service is available varies by machine, but may include the processor, power supply, heat sink, system board or base cover. To determine the complete list of parts for which onsite service is available for a particular machine, contact your IBM representative. IBM will attempt to diagnose and resolve any problems remotely before sending a replacement part or technician. "SuccessLease is offered by third-party providers of business financing approved by IBM Global Financing. SuccessLease terms and conditions provided by the third party. Featured monthly lease payments include prespecified purchase option at end of lease, to qualified business customers only, installing in the U.S. Documentation fee and first month's payment due at lease signing. Taxes are additional. Offer may be withdrawn or changed without notice. Options cannot be leased separately. A $1,000 minimum lease order applies. "Certain Microsoft® software product(s) included with this computer may use technological measures for copy protection. IN SUCH EVENT, YOU WILL NOT BE ABLE TO USE THE PRODUCT IF YOU DO NOT FULLY COMPLY WITH THE PRODUCT ACTIVATION PROCEDURES. Product activation procedures and Microsoft's privacy policy will be detailed during initial launch of the product or upon certain reinstallations of the software product(s) or reconfigurations of the computer and may be completed by Internet or telephone (toll charges may apply). These services are available for machines normally used for business, professional or trade purposes, rather than personal, family or household purposes. Not all machine types and models are covered. Service period begins with the equipment date of purchase. Service must be purchased during the original limited product warranty period. Service levels are response-time objectives and are not guarantees. A service technician is scheduled to arrive at your location within two or four business hours, or the next business day (depending on service) after remote problem determination is completed. For the 9x5x4-hour service, calls dispatched after 1:00 p.m. local time, you can expect the service technician to arrive by the morning of the next business day. For noncritical service requests, a service technician will arrive by the end of the following business day. If the machine problem turns out to be a Customer Replaceable Unit (CRU), IBM will express ship the part to you for quick replacement. Onsite 24x7x2-hour service is not available in all locations. External peripherals, such as racks, tape drives, and channel controllers, require their own separate service coverage. They are not covered under the attached machine. Service activation is required immediately following purchase. For ThinkPad notebooks requiring LCD or other component replacement, IBM may choose to perform service at the depot repair center. For failing non-IBM components, customer must provide replacement part unless IBM has a Technical Support Agreement with the manufacturer. Service does not cover accessories, supply items and certain parts such as batteries, frames and covers. †Standard shipping included when you order online. U.S. only. IT'S HAPPENING

Carillon concerts on the Common

The 79th Annual Series of Summer Carillon Recitals will be given to the 57-bell carillon in the tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset, on eight successive Sunday evenings at 6 p.m., beginning June 29 and continuing through Aug. 17. The public is invited to bring lawn chairs, blankets and picnic suppers to Cohasset Common; to the courtyard off Highland Avenue extension; or to the sunken terrace in the middle of Stagecoach Way; the pedestrian walk that runs off Main Street across from the tower. Printed programs will be distributed on the Common, and may also be found in a stand by the church courtyard. In case of rain, listen from your parked cars.

These hour-long concerts are free of charge. After each program, the public is invited to tour the tower, view a demonstration of the instrument, and perhaps play a tune on the bells if they wish.

The first program on June 29 will be performed by Daniel Kerry Kehoe, Carillonneur of Trinity College in Hartford, Conn. Mr. Kehoe will play a varied program of original carillon repertoire, transcriptions and arrangements of hymns and popular melodies.

Carillonneurs for the remainder of the series are as follows: July 6, Julianne Vanden Wyngaard from the Grand Valley State University, Michigan; on July 13, Carol Jickling Lens of Houston, Texas will play; July 20, Alexander Solovov, Elena Sadina and Sergei Gratchev, three Russian carillonneurs currently living in Mechelen, Belgium; July 27, James Fackenthal of the University of Chicago; Aug. 3, John Agraz of the University of California at Berkeley will perform; Aug. 10, Dionisio Lind, Carillonneur of The Riverside Church in New York City; and the last concert on Aug. 17, will be performed by St. Stephen's own Head Carillonneur, the multi-talented Sally Slade Warner.

For more information, please phone Sally Slade Warner at 978-475-2599; or Mary Kennedy, the assistant carillonneur at 781-383-9599; or the at St. Stephen's Church office, 781-383-1083.

Buttonwood hosts cookbook author

Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset will host cookbook author Lora Brody, "The Cape Cod Table" (Chronicle Books, $35) on Thurs., July 10, from 7-9 p.m. Topher Gudmand, manager, at Cohasset Plaza Liquors, 380 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., will join Brody and will speak about wines and pairing wines with recipes featured in Brody's book. Brody will bring an appetizer that she created, Smoked Salmon Cheesecake, which was featured by Craig Clairborne in the New York Times. Gudmand will bring wine for a tasting.

"The Cape Cod Table" is filled with recipes and pictures of the Cape and the food. The recipes begin with breakfast and continue with dishes for every meal of the day — lunch, dinner, cocktails and dessert. Brody's recipes also address the different types of Cape days. Chowders for the cold, rainy day, clambakes for hot sunny day and elegant yet simple meals for company.

Brody is a best-selling author with 22 books to her credit, including "The Kitchen Survival Guide" and "Basic Baking." Her recipes have appeared in many newspapers and books, including "The New York Times Sunday Magazine" and "The Boston Globe." She was a featured chef in the public television series "Baking With Julia, with Julia Child" and has appeared on "Good Morning America" and "The Today Show." She lives in the Boston area and spends six months of the year at Provincetown on Cape Cod. This is a free event and the public is most welcome. Please call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 to order your signed copy if unable to attend.

Register for 'Sleeping Beauty'

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct another Music Circus Registration for "Sleeping Beauty" on Tuesday, July 1, from 9 a.m. to noon. at the recreation office in the Town Hall for children in the Playground Program.

The Music Circus registrations for children involved in The Playground Program will be held every Tuesday at the recreation office from 9 a.m. to noon and 5 to 7 p.m. at the Recreation office in the Town Hall.

"Sleeping Beauty" will be held at the Music Circus on July 17. Children will be walked down from playground with their counselors.

Band concerts

During the past 11 seasons, concert funding has been provided through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc.

Each June the Board of Directors of the South Shore Music Circus takes under consideration the request of the Recreation Commission, for concert funding, hence, certainty of concert are not absolute until mid-June, each season. The SSMC donations are matched by a grant from the American federation of Musicians, N.Y.C.

Based upon continued SSMC funding, the schedule for the 2003 season is as follows:

Tuesday, July 1, 7:30 p.m. Town Common

Tuesday, July 15, 7:30 p.m. Town Common

Performances will be by the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Mr. Richard P. Whitmarsh. Concerts are held on the Cohasset Common, free of charge and the public is cordially invited. It is a good idea to bring either lawn chairs or blankets to sit on, and from time to time, insect repellent is a good item to have available. You may call the Recreation office at 383-4109 to check on the status of concerts should you be in doubt as to weather conditions.

Yard sale and mini taverna

On Saturday, July 12, the Panagia Church is holding a Church yard sale and mini-taverna on the front lawn of the church. As you go about cleaning up, please set aside those good items that you don't have room for or don't want anymore. Donations during the two weeks prior to the sale will be accepted.

Items may be brought to the church on Friday, July 4 and Saturday, July 5, from 9 a.m. to noon. Pick up service is available June 30 through July 10. Call Father or Marion at the church at 781-383-6380 or Ed Lofgren at 781-749-3250 (3A Marine Service).

Items that sell well are children's clothing up to size 12, giftware, pictures, frames, and lamps, furniture. Exercise equipment, books, tapes, video, CDs, DVDs, toys, complete games and puzzles, tricycles, bicycles, anything antique (50 years old and older)

Please consider that all items that do not sell must be taken to the dump.

The yard sale will run from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and mini-taverna will start at 11:30 a.m. and will continue until 4 p.m.

Band concerts at Nantasket Beach

"Four Guys in Tuxes" will return to the Bernie King Pavilion at Nantasket Beach to kick-off the summer band concert and swing dance series. The annual event was interrupted last year because of the delayed rebuilding of the site, according to a recent announcement from the Nantasket Beach Merchants Association's longtime president and Hull Selectman, Leonard Hersch, who first organized the popular series in the 1970s.

The group will appear on Sunday, July 6 at 2 p.m. as a free, community service at what has become their traditional holiday-weekend event in Hull.

While all efforts are being made to have the M.D.C.'s facility open and ready for this popular event, according to state officials, additional concert dates are pending the final completion of the site.

South Shore guide to local historic sites

Back Roads of the South Shore is a collaborative project of 13 leading historic sites in eight towns along the South Shore of Massachusetts. The group is dedicated to creating an awareness of the area's historic gems and celebrating the heritage and spirit of the region.

The group's first cooperative endeavor is the publication of a joint brochure guiding visitors to historic sites along Plymouth County's Route 3A. The project will be launched on June 28, with an Open House Day and public reception.

On that day, historic sites from Hingham to Plymouth — the Old Ordinary in Hingham, Captain John Wilson House in Cohasset, Cudworth House and Mann House in Scituate, Winslow House in Marshfield, King Caesar House, John Alden House and Gershom Bradford House in Duxbury, Major John Bradford House in Kingston, and the Harlow Old Fort House, Spooner House and Jabez Howland House in Plymouth — will open free of charge to the public from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Pilgrim Hall Museum will offer a special discount day (children 5 to 17 free, adults $4).

Visitors can pick up the new Back Roads of the South Shore map at any of the above-mentioned sites that day. Guided tours will be available, and raffle tickets for special prizes will be sold at each historic site.

The day will conclude with a public reception Historic Winslow House, 644 Careswell St. in Marshfield. The event will feature music, hors d'oeuvres and an opportunity to meet staff and volunteers from historical societies up and down the South Shore. Raffle drawings will take place at the event for the prizes from each historic site.

The "Backroads" group anticipates continued creative collaboration on future programming. For more information, contact Patrick Browne at 781-934-6106.

Carriage House School fun(d)raiser

Student artwork on display

George, Marlena and Ellie Alex; Meg Fitzpatrick and Mary McMeekin are all smiles at the benefit that offered fine fare and music as well as a silent auction.

Parents of new students (starting in September), Caroline and Shawn Sheehy and Matt and Cathy Witkos get acquainted at the event that featured Carriage House School student artwork. The school is located in the First Parish House on North Main Street.

Teachers at the Carriage House School, Sarah Stevens, Georgie Gladdys (director), and Shirley Wallace share a laugh during the recent benefit art show and parent social at the newly renovated preschool. (Not shown is teacher Bev Bruce).

Matt Broderick, Brice Bernsee and Pat Waters enjoy the evening that was such a success, the school may make it an annual event.

Kim and Tom Spicer and Paul and Roberta Kierce enjoy the Carriage House School fundraiser. Donations from Edison Light Beer, Baroni Designs, The Craft Factory, North River Framing Company, Paperscapes, YaYa Designs, Feet of Clay, South Shore Art Center, Jean Comerford, Liz Richardson Photography and Arthur Roebuck helped make the event a hit.

Mel Brooks musical brings Boag home

'The Producers' plays Colonial Theatre through Sept. 13

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

As lead tenor in the national tour of the musical comedy "The Producers," John Boag commands center stage as an S.S. Officer in the show's biggest production number, "Springtime for Hitler," but even his parents may not recognize Boag right away.

"I've dyed my hair blonde and even lightened my eyebrows for this part," explained Boag during a rehearsal break last week while the show was in previews at Boston's Colonial Theatre. "There has even been talk of providing me with blue contact lenses, although that hasn't happened yet."

Actor John Boag will be summering in Green Harbor with his family between shows in his role as lead tenor in the award-winning Broadway musical comedy "The Producers.

While "The Producers — The New Mel Brooks Musical" is in Boston, John and Kay Boag will have ample opportunity to adjust to their only son's new look.

Originally from Vancouver, Boag's family moved to Marshfield 11 years ago, the summer before he left for college. He expects they will see a lot of each other this summer. Older sister, Tana, will be down from Vancouver with her own family to cheer her brother on.

"My mother will probably be responsible for at least one percent of all Mel Brooks' business while we're here. She's very proud of her son."

Based on Mel Brooks' Academy Award-winning 1968 feature film of the same name, "The Producers" received a record-breaking 12 Tony Awards in 2001, the most ever awarded to a single show in Broadway history. With a book by Brooks and Thomas Meehan, music and lyrics by Brooks and direction and choreography by five-time Tony Award winner Susan Stroman, "The Producers" tells the story of down-on-his-luck theatrical producer Max Bialystock and mild-mannered accountant Leo Bloom. Together the pair plot the ultimate scam: raise more money than they need for a sure-fire Broadway flop. Their seemingly guaranteed money-loser: none other than the spectacular spectacle "Springtime for Hitler."

"My parents live in Green Harbor, and I'll be staying with them, so I'm looking forward to spending some time at the beach."
Actor John Boag

In a look at what might have happened if Busby Berkley had choreographed the Third Reich, "Springtime for Hitler" features a Judy Garland-channeling Fuhrer flanked by beer stein-and bratwurst-wearing chorus girls with the newly fair-haired Boag on lead vocals.

"As far as Mel Brooks' fans are concerned, this number is the moment they've been waiting for and I'm lucky enough to be basically the lead voice on the song," says Boag. "I've never thought of myself as looking particularly Aryan, so I wasn't even sure I was suited for this role. With the new hair color, however, I look more like my predecessors in the role which is what the casting people for this tour wanted."

A 1996 graduate of Catholic University, Boag has appeared in the German production of "Miss Saigon" as well as several regional theater productions.

"This is my first national tour, but I've known I wanted to be a professional performer since I was 14. I'm an actor first, because it is paramount as a performer to have that ability, but I'm also someone who sings and dances. It's great to be in the ensemble of this show. Many very funny people collaborated on this production. It's very tight and well put-together, because it has been refined along the way to this tour."

Broadway favorites Nathan Lane and Matthew Broderick had the lead roles when the show opened in New York, but Boag believes star power isn't essential to propel the show.

"Nathan and Matthew are geniuses in their own right. They earned the acclaim they received for their performances, but the show works beautifully without them as well. It's such a funny show that it even makes those of us in the company laugh."

When he isn't on the road, Boag makes his home in New York where he can be near his girlfriend and fellow performer, Brittany Marcin. Through early fall, however, he'll be spending his nights on stage at the Colonial and his days on the South Shore.

"My parents live in Green Harbor, and I'll be staying with them, so I'm looking forward to spending some time at the beach."

Hulk takes on the U.S. military.

'Hulk' gets Ang-sted

Art house movie director Ang Lee recreates 'Hulk'

By Ed Symkus
ESYMKUS@CNC.COM.

Name the director who should be entrusted with transforming "Hulk" from a comic book legend into the next summer movie blockbuster. James Cameron? Ridley Scott? Steven Spielberg?

Ang Lee probably isn't on your list. After all, he's the art house darling who gave a tender touch to "Eat Drink Man Woman," "The Ice Storm" and "Sense and Sensibility." Even "Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon," was, at its heart, more a sad story about unattainable love than a martial arts flick.

So which audience is "Hulk" going to attract — escapist-craving teens or serious-minded adults? "Hulk" is more about troubled human relationships — father-daughter, father-son, husband-wife, ex-lovers — than about the big green guy. Oh, he gets plenty of screen time and destroys pretty much anything that gets in his way. But he doesn't even make an appearance until 45 minutes into the proceedings.

"I didn't want to bring Hulk on at the beginning, with lots of action sequences," says Lee. "Because then there would be no emotional payoff or drama, which is what I do. I wanted to do a modern-day Greek tragedy. I just borrowed the form of the comic book."

Veteran character actor Sam Elliott plays General Ross, one of the film's stalwart bad guys. Elliott believes that Lee had every frame of the film in his head — the real characters and the imagined ones — before he started.

"That was the dance Ang was confronted with here," he says. "He wanted to do this film, and be true to his vision — which is immense — and bring this reality, this human story and this myth, together. He verbalized that to me more than once: 'I gotta do both.' And he did both, that's the mind-boggling part. He did it and I don't know how he did it."

Up-and-coming actor Josh Lucas ("Sweet Home Alabama"), who plays another villain, Glenn Talbot, gets starry eyed when talking about Lee.

"How do you describe or explain a Yoda unless you meet them?" he asks.

He adds that Lee's deft touch was even

"Cookin' at the Cookery" brings Alberta Hunter to life at Huntington

The fascinating life of legendary jazz and blues singer Alberta Hunter is warmly depicted in the funny, touching and beautifully realized "Cookin' at the Cookery," currently being presented by the Huntington Theatre Company.

Jazz singer Alberta Hunter.

In a career spanning seven decades and two continents, Alberta Hunter shared the stage with such musical giants such as Louis Armstrong, Josephine Baker and Eubie Blake. Born in 1885 in Memphis, Hunter ran away to Chicago at age 12 and began her career singing in bars before earning early acclaim on the cabaret circuit. Moving to New York in 1921, Hunter began writing many of the songs she performed in Manhattan supper clubs and as a nightclub headliner all over Europe throughout the next 20 years. Broadway and the occasional feature film followed, and Hunter also made several USO tours during both World War II and the Korean conflict.

Hunter continued to perform until 1956 when — believing she was no longer appreciated — she opted to leave show business. Taking 12 years off her age, Hunter earned a nursing degree and embarked on a career in health care at age 61. She worked as a nurse until being forced to retire by a hospital which believed she was 70. Hunter was actually 82 and would soon resurface on the New York cabaret scene — most notably at the "Cookery" in Greenwich Village — where she earned raves and a legion of new admirers.

Hunter was still very much a headliner when she died in 1984 at the age of 89. With "Cookin' at the Cookery," playwright and director Marion J. Caffrey has crafted a near perfect biography of a true music original. Using just two actors — the charming and talented young Montego Glover and the magnificent Ernestine Jackson — Caffrey brings Hunter to vivid life from her days as a little girl in Tennessee to her late-in-life performing renaissance in a musical that is a wonderful gift at the end of an already strong Huntington season.

"Cookin' at the Cookery" is scheduled to run only through Sunday, June 29 on the Huntington mainstage, 264 Huntington Avenue, Boston. For tickets and information, call 617/266-0800 or visit www.huntingtontheatre.org

Cherry tomatoes two ways

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

It is virtually impossible to purchase a good tomato in the supermarket with the exception of cherry or grape tomatoes. Having taste-tested plum tomatoes, vine-ripened tomatoes, hydroponic tomatoes, and the ubiquitous beefsteak tomatoes, I can honestly say that it is rare to find even a trace of tomato flavor. Cherry-size tomatoes, however, are another story – they actually taste like something. My goal was to find the best technique for pairing them – both cooked and uncooked — with pasta.

No matter how small the tomatoes, they need to be halved. I tried cooking even the tiniest grape tomatoes without cutting them and they became bitterly overcooked before they had popped and exuded juice. Along with being halved the tomatoes were best if covered during the cooking – they stayed juicier and cooked faster. To dress one pound of pasta I needed three pints (6 cups) of tomatoes.

As for the olive oil, a nice fruity olive oil was my fat of choice. I used 1 1/2 tablespoons in the pan at the beginning of the recipe and another 1 1/2 tablespoons at the finish. (Since cooking removes most of the subtle flavor of olive oil, raw oil added after cooking is always a good idea when making a pasta sauce.) Basil was my favorite herb but I also tried several others including parsley, chives, oregano, thyme, mint, and tarragon and the only one that was worth using was the oregano (although basil was better). Unlike what I do with most cooked sauces, I preferred to add the basil at the beginning of the recipe since it added more flavor to the tomatoes. For the six cups of tomatoes I used 1/2 cup loosely packed basil leaves, coarsely chopped. If using oregano I would reduce it to 1/3 cup.

I knew I wanted garlic in the sauce and instead of mincing or pressing I went for a couple of smashed cloves. This was not only simpler but flavor was pleasantly mild since the large cloves can be picked out before serving. I also used 1/2-teaspoon salt and freshly ground pepper and in the instance that the tomatoes were not very sweet, I used a pinch of sugar. If using the tomatoes as an accompaniment to chicken or fish, I liked the addition of mild vinegar or lemon juice. I also liked the addition of a pinch of hot pepper flakes.

The method is so simple it hardly needs a recipe. I started with half the oil in a Dutch oven or sauté pan fitted with a cover. Next I added the garlic, basil and optional red pepper flakes. After about a minute, I added the tomatoes, covered the pan and let them cook for about 5 minutes, stirring a couple of times. I cooked the tomatoes until they were softened and had started to release juice. The tomatoes are best if left to sit for about 10 minutes once they have finished cooking. They soften further and the flavors meld.

QUICK-COOKED CHERRY TOMATO SAUCE

You may use cherry, grape or cocktail tomatoes in the recipe. If they don't taste very sweet add 1/4-teaspoon sugar to the pot along with the tomatoes. This recipe makes enough to sauce one pound of pasta. If using the tomatoes as a side dish or accompaniment to grilled fish or chicken, you can halve the recipe.

3 tablespoons best quality olive oil

2 large cloves garlic smashed

1/2 cup loosely packed torn basil leaves

Generous pinch of red pepper flakes (optional)

6 cups cherry tomatoes, halved

1/2 teaspoon salt

Freshly ground black pepper to taste

Place a Dutch oven or sauté pan fitted with a lid over medium-low heat. When hot, add half the oil, garlic, basil and optional red pepper flakes. Cook for about a minute or until aromatic. Add the tomatoes, salt and pepper to the pan. Cover and cook, stirring occasionally, until the tomatoes are slightly softened and have begun to release some juice, about 5 minutes. Off heat, let sit covered for 10 minutes to allow flavors to meld. Remove the garlic and add the remaining olive oil. Taste for seasoning adding salt and pepper if necessary and serve immediately.

Serves 4 as a sauce for one pound of pasta or halved serves 4 to 6 as a side dish.

CHERRY TOMATOES WITH ANCHOVY, CAPERS, AND OLIVES

Add 3 anchovy fillets along with the garlic, basil and red pepper flakes. Add two tablespoons of capers along with the tomatoes and reduce the salt to 1/4 teaspoon. Add 1/4-cup coarsely chopped kalamata or oil-cured black olives to the pot just before the 10-minute resting period.

CHERRY TOMATOES WITH BAY LEAF, OREGANO AND LEMON JUICE

Substitute 1/3-cup fresh oregano leaves for the basil. Add 2 bay leaves along with the garlic, oregano and red pepper flakes. Just before serving, remove the bay leaves and add a tablespoon fresh lemon juice.

CHERRY TOMATOES WITH FRESH MOZZARELLA

Include optional red pepper flakes. Chop one fist-sized piece of fresh mozzarella (buffala preferred) into 1/2-inch dice. Toss with hot pasta and tomatoes and serve immediately.

RAW CHERRY TOMATO SAUCE

Serve this with one pound of cooked pasta.

5 cups cherry tomatoes halved or quartered into small bite-sized pieces

1/2 teaspoon salt

3 tablespoons best quality olive oil

1 small clove garlic minced or pressed and/or

2 medium shallots very thinly sliced or 1/2 red onion very thinly sliced

1/3 cup loosely packed torn basil leaves

Freshly ground pepper to taste

1 cup coarsely chopped arugula (optional)

6 ounces crumbled goat cheese or feta cheese (optional)

Place the tomatoes and salt in a large bowl and let sit until a puddle of juice is accumulated in the bottom of the bowl, about 20 to 30 minutes. Add the oil, garlic and/or shallots or onion, basil and pepper and stir to combine. The tomatoes can sit out at room temperature for up to 2 hours. Just before serving, add the optional arugula and cheese. Taste for seasonings, adding salt and pepper if necessary. Serve immediately.

Serves 4 over one pound of pasta.

more impressive in light of the "phenomenal" pressure the director faced.

"But somehow Ang is dead calm in the middle of wild pressure and a wild amount of tension and energy that's coming at him every single second," says Lucas.

Screenwriter James Schamus has been the director's creative partner for years. "Hulk" is the seventh film he's written for Lee.

"Ang is the kind of guy who does not want to look back, and whose life has become this constant, eternal film school," says Schamus. "With Ang, it's always trying to figure out a way to dare him to the next thing.

"And that extends to the screenwriting itself," he adds. "I try to create big messes for him, not well-crafted things that he can just shoot. I try to create situations that are so scary, he'll be motivated to get into them. Today's metaphor is I try to create the cell, throw him in there, lock the door, turn on the tap, let the water start to rise and see if he can get out."

Lee seems to relish that kind of treatment, but admits it sometimes gets to him.

"Sometimes I get ambitious and take on something that's bigger than me," he says. "I've been motivated to do one after another like that, and constantly I've thought that this might be where I fall. I don't want to kill myself, but it has to feel like I'm killing myself to do that. I think fear and aggression bring out some of my best."

Some of his best in this case involved Lee donning a motion-capture suit, which recorded his movements on computer, where they could be recreated by special effects artists. On many occasions the usually low-key Lee could be seen stomping around the set, jumping up and down, grimacing and roaring, then calmly explaining to his crew that this was what he wanted Hulk to do. On top of that was the responsibility of directing his actors, getting the story told, then literally redirecting the film when effects were added. It's no wonder that Lee says, with a laugh, "I feel like I just walked through the Trojan War. I am drained. I just saw the finished film four days ago, and I could watch it like a story. I had only seen segments before. So it was a big emotional moment for me. I don't know how other people responded yet, but I can finally be at peace with myself."

He may be happy with the film, but that doesn't mean he can explain why actors want to work with him.

"I don't know," he says. Then he adds, "I think they like my ideas when I describe my visions. I think my credits helped. Before I came aboard, they liked my movies. I talked to them about drama. I talked to the actors about Greek tragedy and about their inner Hulk. I think they thought they were being respected, that they were doing something inspiring."

He stops and smiles meekly and says, "And I think I'm a nice guy."

"Hulk" opened June 20.

Captivating container gardens

Green thumbs up

Part 2

By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

With the passing of the summer solstice, gardeners throughout the Northeast are hopeful that the dreary, soggy spring of 2003 may soon become only a fleeting memory. A promising forecast for this coming week should provide a critical boost for warm weather annual and vegetable transplants and a desperately needed psychological boost for those who tend them. Although a number of plants may have rotted, drowned or succumbed to fungal diseases, those that managed to survive this spring's deluges, slugs and chilly temperatures should recover dramatically given a prolonged stretch of warmth and sunshine.

It seemed only fitting that Mother Nature bring the last weekend of a dismal spring season to a close with a soaking exclamation point. As I gazed out my window on a soggy Sunday afternoon, expansive puddles dotted the landscape and many perennials lay flattened by the torrential downpours. Experience has taught me to anticipate a heavy rainfall each year to coincide with the blooming of those voluptuous, double peonies and tall bearded iris resulting in these late spring bloomers to sprawl and flop in every direction even when supported by hoops and stakes. Despite their unsightly appearance, many will perk up again when the monsoons subside.

Until the gardens dry out enough to continue weeding, edging and planting new treasures, I plan to focus on filling more than a dozen containers with vegetables and colorful annuals. For several years, my vegetable garden has consisted of a vast array of planters scattered about the deck that surrounds our sunroom. Tomatoes, zucchini, summer squash, cucumbers, peppers, and eggplant have all flourished and even late in the evening, the fresh produce can be readily plucked and prepared for a midnight snack. The woodchucks have yet to climb the stairs to feast on my portable garden so this season I have added broccoli to the pot patch and it appears to be prospering. By summer's end, these sizable pots are overflowing which requires frequent fertilization and watering but the rewards are worth the labor. When frost threatens, a few pots are pulled into the sunroom and we continue to harvest tomatoes and peppers into November.

Several smaller pots contain herbs including basil that always seemed to be devoured by slugs when planted in the ground and a large container of rosemary that is brought inside during the winter months and grown on a sunny windowsill. A decorative dish garden of mixed herbs makes a handsome addition to a sunny deck or patio.

Regardless of the size of your gardening space, there is always room for a hanging basket, decorative urn, or an attractive window box to brighten an entryway, walk, patio or deck. Geraniums, marigolds, petunias and trailing vinca are typically selected for sunny locations. Impatiens remains one of the few choices for shady spots. Although these stalwart annuals provide reliable color all summer, nurseries are still offering with a wide variety of exciting alternatives to add greater diversity to your window boxes and barrels as well as offering handsome, unique containers in which to display these treasures.

For the most effective arrangement, look for a few taller plants to give vertical dimension to your container. Dracaena is a popular choice for a taller plant having spiky leaves which slightly arch while providing a see-through quality. Other possible selections might include the heavenly, vanilla-scented lavender or purple blooms of Heliotrope or unique Salvias that are available in a wide range of vibrant colors including intense, electric blue, dazzling red and soft shades of pink and salmon. These salvias are not your typical bedding salvias, which also come in a diversity of luscious colors. Bronze fennel provides a marvelous, upright, textural appearance with delicate, feathery bronze foliage and an appealing licorice scent when brushed. A personal favorite is the elegant annual purple fountain grass (Pennisetum rubrum) that creates a graceful mound of reddish-brown foliage and spectacular fuzzy seed heads that resemble giant fluffy caterpillars.

The cheerful blooms of daisies and their attractive ferny foliage add a delightful touch to any container. Marguerites or Boston daisies in yellow or white bloom prolifically all summer. Cosmos are available in several heights and colors and will attract butterflies.

Slightly more difficult to locate but worth the search are the stunning violet purple and silver streaked leaves of Persian Shield (Strobilanthes) or the heavenly sky-blue panicles of Plumgago. Flowering maples (Abutilon) grow quickly to offer a taller focal point and are irresistible to hummingbirds. Look for Angel's Trumpet (Brugmansia) for an especially unique, fast-growing specimen that will reach 4 to 5 feet by summer's end from a 12-inch cutting and will be covered with giant, dangling trumpet-shaped flowers in shades of yellow, pink or white. During the afternoon and evening hours the fragrance of these blooms is truly intoxicating.

Shady locations pose a greater challenge for taller plant material. Handsome Coleus cultivars have been introduced that will flourish in sun or shade, their colorful leaves offering beauty throughout the growing season. Upright forms of fuchsia such as F. 'Gartenmeister' provide pretty foliage and bright tubular flowers that attract hummingbirds. Cannas are dramatic tropical plants that furnish stunning additions to large containers in sun or shade; many demonstrate bronze or variegated leaves that create sensational focal points. Taro (Colocasia) and Caladiums feature exciting, large leaves and thrive in moist, shady sites.

Use your imagination and try something new this summer. You may find creating container gardens the perfect solution for this difficult growing season.

LISTEN To Life
by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

AN ALL-TOO-FAMILIAR RINGING

Millions of Americans suffer from tinnitus, with its symptomatic incessant ringing, hissing and buzzing in the ears. This annoying and disruptive affliction is one of the first signs of noise-induced hearing loss and, thus, is becoming more prevalent in our noisy culture. While tinnitus affects several age groups, it is now evident in more and more young people than ever before. To help those so afflicted, there is a device that is similar in size and shape to a hearing instrument that emits a tone of a slightly lower volume than the tinnitus. The brain gradually ceases to hear the lesser tone (sometimes over the course of a few to several months) and, over a longer time, ceases to hear the tinnitus.

Some hearing problems like tinnitus are impossible to ignore while others sneak up slowly on unwary victims. Don't bury your head in the sand and think it can't happen to you. At FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, we'll stake our reputation on your complete satisfaction and make sure you are happy with whichever hearing device best suits your needs. Call us at 781-337-1144 to arrange a hearing test at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. We offer FREE hearing evaluations, FREE batteries for the life of any hearing instrument purchased, and FREE repairs of any make of hearing aid.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 25

After the recent barrage of planetary activity, influences calm down considerably today, giving you an opportunity to rest and regroup. The Taurus moon aligns with Jupiter at 9:41 a.m. and becomes inactive for the remainder of the day. Catch up on projects already begun, handle routine chores and errands. Lighten up, relax, mellow out completely this evening.

THURSDAY, JUNE 26

An inactive Taurus moon can make for a slow start to this day. Yesterday's advice applies to this morning as well. Finish old projects rather than starting anything new. At 12:13 p.m. the moon enters lively Gemini, bringing an energy boost. This moon forms challenging 90-degree alignments to Uranus and Mars, however. Give greater attention to accuracy and details. Use extra caution if you are operating machinery; drive defensively. Don't take chances or do anything risky.

FRIDAY, JUNE 27

Bright and sunny astrological weather prevails today. The moon travels in versatile Gemini. The green light is on for starting new activities. Today's influences are ideal for work that requires communicating with people. Make phone calls, send letters, faxes and e-mails. You will be most productive, if you handle a variety of projects rather than one that demands intense concentration. A lunar alignment to Jupiter makes this evening prime for partying. Forget your troubles and go for the good times.

SATURDAY, JUNE 28

Yesterday's planetary influences affect today as well. The moon continues to travel in Gemini, active until 10:31 p.m. It may be difficult to focus on work projects, especially if you are taking on jobs that are tedious and time-consuming. Others will be outgoing and talkative. This day is great for vacationing, socializing and enjoying favorite leisure activities. At 11:52 p.m. the final windup to a new moon begins, when the moon enters the sign Cancer.

SUNDAY, JUNE 29

The dark side of a new moon is in full force and effect until 2:39 p.m., when it culminates. Wake up in a good mood. Focus on the positives in your life instead of getting caught up in the limitations. Others may be moody, pensive, disagreeable. Spend time alone; listen to music, create art or poetry, enjoy nature. The planet Mercury moves into Cancer at 6:17 a.m., remaining there until July 13.

MONDAY, JUNE 30

The planet Mercury is in the spotlight today and tomorrow, because it forms three major alignments to planets. It may bring a focus on news, communications, study, travel. Today Mercury aligns with Uranus and Saturn. That combination prompts you to change your thinking; be open to new ideas. Let go of fears, worries; open your mind to new possibilities. The moon continues inactive travel in Cancer, placing new beginnings in business and your external life off limits.

TUESDAY, JULY 1, 2003

July begins with mild and sunny astrological weather. Storm clouds will move in during the last few days of this month, when the action planet Mars begins retrograde travel. For the most favorable planetary influences, you should begin important enterprises during the first three weeks of this month.

Today the moon enters optimistic Leo at 9:13 a.m. In addition, harmonious alignments of Jupiter-Pluto and Mercury-Mars occur. This combination tops the charts for new starts in your business and personal life. Go for the gold.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 2

A Leo moon continues to generate an upbeat mood today. However, a lunar polarity to Neptune at 8:39 a.m. can make for a slow start this morning. After that the green light for new beginnings goes on; start new activities, make important decisions, plans or purchases. The moon and Jupiter conjoin this evening, setting the stage for parties. Gather with friends and enjoy life to the max.

THURSDAY, JULY 3

A playful Leo moon continues active travel, making this morning ideal for socializing, vacationing. At 2:06 p.m. the moon aligns with Venus and becomes inactive. A practical Virgo moon takes over at 4:16 p.m., and a lunar polarity to Uranus may disrupt the flow of the evening. Keep it light; be more easygoing and adaptable.

FRIDAY, JULY 4

Planetary influences today are better for working than they are for vacationing. The moon travels in meticulous Virgo, and forms harmonious contacts to Mercury and the sun. In addition, the sun prepares to align with Mercury. This combination is prime for analyzing situations and making practical decisions, or for focusing on jobs that require accuracy and attention to detail. On the other hand, it may be difficult to relax and mellow out. The planet Venus moves into Cancer at 1:39 p.m., remaining there until July 29. A lunar alignment to Pluto warns you to avoid late-night bickering. Know when it's time to call it a night.

from 6-9 p.m. The Sparrow Hawk Museum is located at 42 Summer Street in Plymouth. For hours and information call (508) 747-1240.

Avalon flushes out new septic design

Boards seek more detail

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

While it's unclear if AvalonBay's new plans for wastewater disposal at its proposed 200-unit apartment complex off Route 3A will pass muster with state and local officials — one thing is for sure, the Zoning Board of Appeals is going to learn a lot about septic systems in the process.

The new system Avalon proposes would incorporate a treatment plant with a leaching field under Title 5, the state's environmental code governing septic systems.

In a room packed with engineers, hydrologists, lawyers and other consultants, who were hired by Avalon or the town, there was ample disagreement over the feasibility of the more traditional system depending on which side had the floor during Monday's hearing.

The new plans come on the heels of Avalon's prior proposal to seek a surface-water permit, which the Water Commission and Health Board opposed because of fears the surface water would pollute Lily Pond, the town's drinking water supply. There was also a question

Some simple rules to help Little Harbor in summertime

Wildlife, boats and people can co-exist

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Little Harbor's beautiful scenery attracts much attention throughout the year. During the summer, as boaters float by in their canoes and kayaks, they may get a closer look at birds nesting on the shores.

But with the additional attention the harbor receives during the summer months, it is important to remember the rules that need to be followed, to make it a safe place for everyone to enjoy. That is why concerned residents of the Little Harbor area, along with the Open Space Committee and Harbormaster have sent out a notice to remind people of what a special area it is and how to keep all wildlife safe.

"We're trying to make everyone share the harbor, even the wildlife."
— June Hubbard, Beach Street

Cohasset bylaws state that all water vehicles "shall not be operated at a speed in excess of 12 mph while in the confines of the harbor." This rule is extremely important not only for the purpose of keeping people safe in canoes or kayaks who are not able to move quickly, but certain birds that migrate to the area as well, officials say.

June Hubbard has been watching the birds from her Beach Street home since 1968. A flock of eight eiders, which are a type of sea duck, have been returning for the past 12 years and have provided many hours of fascinating bird-watching. She said she can tell it is the same group of birds because there is one female with distinct markings on her back who is easily spotted.

Over the years, Hubbard has seen the continuous moving about of the different species of birds.

Village people split on streetscape plan

Some like it, others don't

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Looking out their windows onto South Main and Elm streets, many local shop owners have a bird's-eye view of the markings painted on the asphalt for potential "bump-outs" proposed as part of the Village Revitalization Project. With their storefronts potentially at the mercy of construction, some are concerned about the outcome these changes could bring.

"If anyone, including the police, wants to sit in our front picture window and take a look at what goes on, they're welcome to."
— Sue Straley, Cards & Shards

The Board of Selectmen have decided to move forward with plans drawn by the Waterfield Group, for an underground-wiring system in the Village that would also include new sidewalks incorporating bump-outs at the crosswalks.

Bump-outs are expanded portions of the sidewalk, which would potentially allow pedestrians better visibility at crosswalks by allowing them to stay on the curb and see past parked cars. The selectmen believe the current crosswalks pose a safety issue because they force pedestrians onto the street in order to check for oncoming traffic before crossing.

Selectmen are also looking at raising the crosswalks to define them even further, and hopefully make drivers more cautious.

Residents and shop owners have a wide range of views about what should be done.

Sue Straley who has owned and operated Cards & Shards for roughly the last 25 years, sees some potentially positive aspects to the revitalization project.

This week in COHASSET

Upcoming meetings

The following meetings were posted at Town Hall as of Monday, June 30.

Cohasset Common Historic District Commission, July 7, 7 p.m.

Conservation Commission, July 10, July 24, 7:30 p.m.,

Harbor Committee, July 15, 7 p.m.

School Committee, July 10, 7 p.m.

Water Commission, July 10, 8 p.m., King St. treatment plant

All meetings are at Town Hall unless posted otherwise.

School Committee on AvalonBay project

Members of the School Committee will send a finalized draft of a letter to the Zoning Board, stating what they believe should be considered when addressing the AvalonBay project. The letter is meant to be strictly recommendations, with no positive or negative opinions within. The letter addresses the possible addition of children to the schools, and what possible impact that could have. Sample financial situations have been figured including the cost of an additional bus, if needed and the potential tax increase for the average Cohasset home if 25 new students enter the system.

Planning Board gets schooled

Author and land-use consultant, Bob Lemire gave a lecture to members of the Planning Board, and members of other town boards and residents last week. Hosted by the Growth and Development Committee, Lemire spoke about various long range planning that can take place in a town to ensure the needs of the entire community are met.

Stating five principals that have proved successful in his own town of Lincoln, Lemire believes any town can be effective in visualizing the future it wants, and carry it out successfully.

Lemire's five principals are:

• Save what needs to be saved. If you don't take care of your natural resources, the town will suffer.

• Build what needs to be built. To accommodate the needs of a growing town, you have to build, and if you don't build, it will be harder to save what needs to be saved.

• Commit yourself to dealing with the financial interests of landowners in town. If landowners have been approached in advance by the town and have been treated fairly and openly, they will be more likely to come to the town when they want to sell. Lemire believes this is Lincoln's secret to its success, because the town makes it a priority to help landowners who want to sell achieve the best profit possible while finding a way to develop the land in accordance to town wishes.

• You have to take into consideration the private sector as well as the public. Equal amounts of money can be made by a landowner by seeking out different options for buyers.

• It's not enough for a town to take a reactive approach. Don't wait until the landowners show up at the town meeting wanting to sell, take the initiative to contact them first.

Lemire recommended Cohasset adopt some long range plans by looking at where change can take place. He also suggests the town define a role that a Cohasset land trust could play in those plans. His own town has built residential housing in commercial zones, and suggests Cohasset take a look at its own commercial zones and see if expansion could happen there. "You've got opportunities you're not taking advantage of," he said.

Golf carts off the course

The CMHS athletic department will be participating in a trial conducted by Pathway Research, underwritten by General Motors, to determine the benefits of the use of golf carts in institutional settings.

There will be no charge for participation and the cart will only be used on school grounds. The school currently has one cart, but a second could potentially be reserved for the athletic trainer, in the event there is an injury on the field.

The carts are different from those used on a golf course, and are specifically designed for the study to determine the benefits and need for a service such as this. The company will drop the cart off at the school and will pick it up at the end of the year. Students will not be allowed to drive the cart.

Meet the town's two newest paramedics

By Samantha Brown

Cohasset's new paramedics Sharon Leone and Dan Smith.

As part of an effort by the Cohasset Fire Department to provide better care during emergency situations, including Advanced Life Support, Sharon Leone and Dan Smith, both paramedics, have been hired as Cohasset's newest members of the department.

The two new paramedics made it through a physically intense 11-week training program run by the Massachusetts Firefighting Academy, which is conducted much like boot camp for the Army, and began working in Cohasset June 16.

For Leone, a 31-year-old Hanover resident, who had never even been on a fire truck before attending the Academy, her new occupation has been a big adjustment.

Leone began to look into the medical field after losing her brother in a car accident five years ago. She had earned a degree from Bridgewater State College in speech pathology and audiology four years prior, but her interests began to shift as she searched for answers to her brother's death.

She enrolled in an Emergency Medical Technician class and received her license, which enabled her to provide basic life support to patients while working for the Auxiliary Medical Services.

While taking care of patients in the towns of Brockton, Waltham, Middleboro and Taunton, she was also taking care of some furry friends at the Roberts Animal Hospital in Hanover. Being able to provide advanced life support to animals, Leone eventually began to pursue becoming a paramedic, in order to help people in the same way.

While she does spend much time at the station, Leone also teaches paramedic and EMT classes, and still works at the Roberts Animal Hospital as a veterinary technician.

"Most people in this field do something on the side," she said, noting that the shifts can be 24 hours long, leaving you with days off in a row.

Working with the animals for the past 16 years, it's a passion she can't seem to get away from. "It's one of those things that follows me," she said.

Sitting in a box in the firehouse is a little bird. Leone came across the bird, who had fallen out of its nest, while learning the streets of Cohasset. Unable to find its nest, she picked it up and brought it with her.

"I couldn't just leave it there in the middle of the road," she said.

But this is not the first time she has rescued an animal in the short time she has been on the department. After hearing of a snapping turtle in the road on 3A, Leone walked up the street and brought the turtle back to the station. She then asked the animal rescue league to pick it up.

Leone jokes that she has had a successful "first two saves" since being on the department.

With her caring nature, it's no surprise to find out that Leone is a single mother of two. Daughter Courtney is 7 years old, and son Jake is 5 years old.

As a result of all the training she has participated in, Leone said she has "missed a lot of the past couple months," but her children "think it's really neat" to have a fire-fighting mom.

The addition of Leone to the department makes a total of three females. When the new firehouse is finished, there will be separate facilities for both men and women, but with her experience Leone said she is used to sharing with the guys.

Leone said she has never been treated differently because she is a woman. While training at the Academy, she said everyone is treated equally regardless of their gender.

"They don't make any allowances. You have to be able to save the person — end of story," she said.

Working alongside Leone is former National Guardsman, Dan Smith. The 24-year-old graduate of Weymouth High School was a member of the 1058th Transportation Company, which has since been deployed to Iraq.

Smith left the Guard to pursue his "lifelong dream" of becoming a firefighter, and his unit was deployed one month later.

"It's what I've always wanted to do," he said.

Smith earned an associate's degree in fire science from Massasoit Community College, learning everything from the chemistry of how fire works and the different methods for putting out fires depending on the structure, to the prevention of fire and fire laws. While Smith admits some of the more technical classes wouldn't be exciting for those not pursuing the field, for him they were perfect training.

It seems Smith has made a good first impression with his enthusiasm, as Haddad, who interviewed Smith for the position said, "I've never seen anyone so excited to be a firefighter."

After Massasoit, Smith earned his EMT and paramedic licenses before going off to the fire academy. He recently bought a house in Rockland, where he lives with his wife.

The movement toward offering ALS service began in 1998, when Town Manager Mark Haddad negotiated with the fire department union to have the next eight people hired be trained paramedics. The goal was to bring the number of paramedics on the town payroll up to eight, to help ensure paramedics are on every shift.

Currently, out of the 24 members on the department, nine are paramedics, with two additional members in the final stages of the certification process. Haddad said the new goal is to have two paramedics on every shift, to work alongside EMTs to provide the best care possible.

Having paramedics on staff allows the department to provide more advanced treatment. Without ALS, a heart-attack victim, for example, would have to endure a 20-minute ride to South Shore Hospital before they were treated with life-saving drugs. Paramedics are able to administer those drugs, as well as employ a heart defibrillator.

Melee breaks out over parked car

Sgt. William Quigley responded to a call at about 9 p.m. from an officer, who was serving a detail outside Atlantica restaurant, for a parking problem.

A parking complaint on Border Street Saturday night led to a brouhaha of near-epic proportions for the seaside location.

Sgt. William Quigley responded to a call at about 9 p.m. from Norfolk County Sheriff Deputy Bryan Connolly, who was serving a detail outside Atlantica restaurant, for a parking problem.

Connolly told Quigley that Jack Silvia, 51, was demanding the police tow a Saab that was parked on his property at 43 Border St. Silvia told Connolly that the Atlantic valet service had parked the car in "his spot," according the police report.

Quigley said he told Connolly the car, while opposite the Silvia property, appeared to be on town property.

Connolly told Quigley that Silvia was "extremely upset" and demanded that the Atlantica valet service park his minivan for him. He then allegedly abandoned the minivan in the middle of the street and left the area.

The valet service did eventually park Silvia's van for him, across the street at fishermen's wharf.

But that was only the beginning.

About 9:30 p.m., units were called back to Atlantica, Quigley said. Connolly said Silvia returned to Atlantica and became enraged when the saw this parking spot was not clear of the Saab.

Silvia then got into his minivan and allegedly drove erratically across the street, screeching his tires and attempted to back into "his parking spot" in front of his home. According to the police report, Connolly said Silvia then purposely backed his minivan into the Saab, pushing it about one foot backwards, and into another vehicle that was parked behind the Saab.

As Connolly was briefing Quigley as to the events, Silvia emerged from his property, making wild hand gestures, yelling and swearing about his parking spot, according to the police report. Quigley asked Silvia for his driver's license and registration because he had allegedly caused a motor vehicle accident.

Silvia allegedly refused using expletives. After three requests for Silvia's license and registration, Quigley said he warned Silvia he would be arrested. At this time Officer Francis Yannizzi had arrived at the scene.

The officers advised Silvia he was under arrest and stepped toward him. When Quigley attempted to grab Silvia's arm, he allegedly began to swing his arms wildly and pulled away, walking backwards. Police said the three officers attempted to restrain Silvia and a violent struggle ensued, with Silvia being tackled to the ground. According to the police report a large crowd gathered and traffic was stopped on Border Street with the officers struggling with Silvia, who was allegedly violently resisting arrest refusing to comply with verbal demands. As Officer Yannizzi and Deputy Connolly fought with Silvia, two males came running toward the officers who were both on the ground. The males were later identified as Kenneth and Dale Silvia, Jack Silvia's brothers. Quigley said when Dale Silvia charged at the officers who were on the ground he was ordered to keep back and was told his brother was under arrest. Dale Silvia then allegedly charged at Yannizzi from behind while Yannizzi was on his knees trying to handcuff Jack Silvia. Quigley said he activated his emergency radio button and put out a call for "officers in trouble." Dale Silvia got within one foot of Yannizzi's handgun, Quigley said. Quigley said he pushed Dale Silvia back five feet and warned him to stay back or he would be maced.

After Dale Silvia allegedly charged Yannizzi again, Quigley sprayed him with mace pepper spray in the face. Dale Silvia then stepped back about 15 feet, took his shirt off to wipe off his face. Seconds later, he allegedly emerged from his property with a large fire extinguisher and pointed the extinguisher and sprayed it at the officers trying to handcuff Jack Silvia. The powder from the extinguisher began to choke the officers, Quigley said.

Several minutes later, a handcuffed Jack Silvia was put into the rear of the cruiser. Additional officers were called to the scene along with mutual aid from Scituate police. Dale Silvia was advised that he was also under arrest, but he allegedly ran away from the officers and into the Silvia compound. He allegedly threw his mace-soaked T-shirt in Quigley's face.

Kenneth Silvia was also yelling at the officers and was advised he was creating a disturbance and was subject to arrest. Other members of the Silvia family then allegedly began surrounding the officers. One unidentified male tried to insight the Silvia family and other onlookers; he disappeared into the crowd and the officers began to regain control of the situation.

Jack Silvia was charged with failure to produce a driver's license for a police officer, assault, resisting arrest and disorderly conduct. He was treated by a paramedic at the station for pepper spray exposure and a scrape to his left wrist and knuckle. An arrest warrant was sought for Dale Silvia for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon (fire extinguisher), assault and battery with a dangerous weapon (mace), assault and battery on a police officer, disorderly conduct, and resisting arrest.

Dale Silvia was arrested at Quincy District Court by Officer Rick Grassie when he brought his brother Jack to court. Both men were arraigned on their respective charges and will return in mid August for a pre-trial conference.

The police officers were treated for exposure to mace pepper spray, and for minor cuts and bruises.

The owner of the Saab, which sustained minor damage, was advised to contact Deputy Connolly.

Nancy and Tom Hamilton are pleased to announce Bill Good of Cohasset is the newest member of the sales team at Dean and Hamilton Realtors. A real estate broker for over 20 years, Bill has been involved across the South Shore in a number of home design-build and renovation projects. A resident of Cohasset for 27 years, Bill previously lived in Scituate for four years. A graduate of Boston Latin School and Saint Anselm College, Bill and his wife, Betsy Reardon Good, a teacher at the South Shore Community Center, are the parents of three grown children.

An outdoor enthusiast, Bill grew up in West Roxbury and spent summers at Green Harbor in Marshfield. Active in boating circles throughout his life, he has been a member of the Cohasset Yacht Club for 18 years. He has also been involved in youth, civic, and town government activities for over 20 years. He was appointed to the Personnel Committee in Cohasset in 1983 and elected to three five-year terms on the Cohasset Planning Board, beginning in 1989. Bill is currently the Planning Board Vice Chairman and he also serves on the town's Growth and Development Committee.

Working in real estate transactions with Bill provides clients with an experience that sets him apart from everyone else, and he looks forward to serving new clients in the future.

Plans underway for CHS Class of 1984 reunion

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

HAPPY FOURTH!

I want to start off this week by wishing everyone a safe and happy Fourth of July weekend! It is finally warm and toasty as summer should be and the parades, cookouts and fireworks have started and will continue right through the weekend. Have fun with friends and family!

IT'S A BOY!

Conner Bruce Allen Fitzgerald was born on June 27.. The proud parents are Doug and Gwen Fitzgerald. Connor joins his big brother Jackson and big, big, sister Megan. Everyone is doing fine. Welcome to your family and our town Conner!

BABY GIRL

Welcome to the world sweet Caroline Grace Donohue! Little Caroline was born on June 15, 2003 to Kim and Jim Donohue (son of James and Grace Donohue from Cohasset). Not only did Caroline arrive on Fathers Day, she also made her debut on her Mom and Dad's first wedding anniversary. Congratulations on Caroline's birth!

BENEFIT FOR MARY KRAFT

How many people could dance the night away at their 20th high school reunion while almost eight months pregnant? This feat was a simple achievement for Mary Walsh Kraft (CHS class of 1979) in July of 1999 just because of her sheer love of life. Although they miss Cohasset and their many friends here, Mary and her husband, Dean Kraft (CHS class of 1978) have been living a very fulfilling life in Colorado with their sons Colin (almost four) and Tyler (two). Regrettably, life has taken an unfortunate turn as Mary was recently diagnosed with an inoperable brain tumor. While her situation is extremely serious, there is also tremendous hope. Many people are asking what they can do to help Mary and her family. As you can imagine, the medical bills associated with treating Mary's illness are staggering. In an effort to assist Mary and Dean, a fundraiser will be held that is anticipated to not only help defray their expenses, but provide some much appreciated inspiration. The event will be held at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, July 15,. at Mackenzie's restaurant which is located at Widow's Walk Golf Course, 250 The Driftway, Scituate. The cost is $25 per person and the event will feature a raffle, an auction, food and a cash bar. If you are unable to attend but would like to contribute, please send a donation to: The Mary Kraft Fund, c/o Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, 48 South Main St., Cohasset MA 02025. All donations are considered gifts and therefore not tax deductible. If you have any questions or would like to help with the benefit, please contact Mary Sease (781-383-8318) or Lisa Swain (781-383-2953.)

TALENTED STUDENTS

Four Cohasset Middle Schools students, Reed Dickinson, Ryan Ingram, Cliff Musto, and Colleen Richardson were honored at Boston University on June 8 for their outstanding academic abilities. These students participated in a national talent search sponsored by Johns Hopkins University Center for Talented Youth (CTY). They then took the college SAT and scored in the top 25 percent compared to all students in the search. Congratulations!

PILGRIM AWARDS

CHS graduates Curtis Kahn, left, and Thomas Anderson show off plaques heralding the $2,500 scholarships they were awarded by the Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham. The Cohasset residents were among 13 are high school graduates awarded Pilgrim Arena scholarships this spring.

HONORS GRADUATE

Jared Ford, Cohasset High School class of 1999, has graduated, cum laude, with a bachelor of science in Computer Information Systems from Roger Williams University in Bristol, R.I.. Jared was editor of the college year-book for his junior and senior years, and was responsible for the 2001 and 2002 Roger Williams float in the Bristol 4th of July Parade, the oldest 4th of July parade in the country. The 2001 float, which was a replica of the Mount Hope Bridge, was voted Most Creative and the 2002 float, titled "Snapshots of America" received the honor of most creative. Jared was selected as Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges, as well as being inducted into Sigma Beta Delta, an international honor society for business students. Jared, all these are fantastic accomplishments and you should be as proud of them as your parents are of you! Congratulations!

GOLF BENEFIT

South Shore Hospital's 14th annual golf tournament at Cohasset Golf Club raised $120,000 to help establish a neonatal intensive care unit to care for sick and premature infants. David Hannan, left, of Hingham, president and CEO of South Shore Health and Educational Corporation – the hospital's parent – accepts the proceeds from tournament chairman Gary Adams of Cohasset, vice president of Anchor/Russell Capital Advisors.

1984 CHS REUNION

Calling all members of the CHS Class of 1984 Do you know that next year is our 20th Class Reunion? I know that I was a bit shocked to remember that "Wow, has it been 20 years already?" Anyway, Jackie (Plante) Collari and the planning committee have started planning this reunion weekend and the first step is to get as many members together in an email group with names, addresses, phone and email. Please make sure to contact Jackie by phone or email and send your information on to her as well as any classmates info that you may have. Please also send any ideas that you may have on events for the weekend. You can reach Jackie by email at: collarifamily@earthlink.net or by phone at: (781)545-3480. The reunion will have something for everyone throughout the weekend so make plans to come back home to Cohasset with your family and enjoy the weekend or stay a bit longer next summer.

adjacent to Our World and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Sohier Street. The playground will be open year round and free to all who visit. The playground along with the museum will be a wonderful fit with the new library and together will be an invaluable resource for our community. One of the ways Project Playground will be raising funds for this new play area is through the Brick by Brick program. Your donation of $100 to the Brick by Brick program will be recognized with an engraved brick. You can have your name, your family's name, loved one or your business name celebrated in brick. If you prefer, you also have the opportunity to donate a larger engraved paver or a beautiful hardwood bench complete with an engraved brass plate. Engraved bricks and pavers will be used in walkways and as accents throughout the surrounding areas of the playground. All funds generated by the Brick by Brick program will go directly to the designing and purchasing of play structures, landscaping of the play area and on-going maintenance. Through supporters like you, each brick, paver and bench will become a part of the playground's lasting character and serve as a permanent reminder of your commitment to this project. For information on how to participate in the Brick by Brick program, please call Debbie Kuppens at (781) 383-6399.If you have any questions about Project Playground, or would like to make a larger contribution, please call Logan Bernstein at (781) 383-6165 or Muffy Antico at (781) 383-8303.

That is all the news for this holiday week. Please make sure to have all news, photos and event information in to me no later than Mondays at noon.

The May 5 Jazz Concert, sponsored by the CP Harvey Memorial Jazz Fund, resulted in a great performance by the Cohasset Middle High School Jazz Ensemble. John DeWaal has been recognized as the outstanding performer of the Ensemble and awarded the first CP Harvey Memorial Jazz Award. Showing off the award with John is band teacher, Stephanie Hoskin.

Hingham parade for one and all

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Hingham is gearing up for a fun-filled and, hopefully, sunny Fourth of July celebration.

The parade, featuring lively bands, a dozen colorful floats, and antique cars, will step out from Hingham High School at 10 a.m. and then travel down Middle Street to Main and on to downtown Hingham, ending up at the Station Street parking lot. Thousands of spectators of all ages will line the parade route, many decked out in red, white, and blue outfits and waving flags.

"I get butterflies seeing all the people cheering, laughing, and calling out to their friends," said Parade Committee Chairman Shanna Nicholson, who was named this year's Grand Marshal. "There's a real sense of community spirit. It's a magical event."

The much looked-forward-to Fourth of July weekend festivities begin on July 4 with an early road race organized by the Hingham Recreation Commission and a pancake breakfast on Hingham Common hosted by the Kiwanis Club. The breakfast, which attracts a good crowd, begins at 7 a.m. and runs until the parade begins.

This year's theme, "Freedom's Trail," has drawn a large number of participants. Awards will be presented for floats in four categories – Best of Parade, Most Beautiful, Most Unique, and Most Patriotic. Judging begins at 8:45 a.m. Because the usual large crowd of residents of Hingham and other South Shore communities and out-of-town visitors is expected, spectators are encouraged to arrive early and avoid parking along the parade route.

"It's going to be a big parade," said Nicholson. "This is a time for the whole town to pull together."

Families from Hingham's 1058th Transportation Company will participate, along with a Civil War reenactment group pulling a cannon, Hingham Police Department Honor Guard, a drum and bugle corps, V.F.W. Color Guard, and Hingham Citizen of the Year Robert Falvey.

Best of all, a surprise is planned for the end of the parade. "This is going to be a winner, a terrific ending," Nicholson said.

Enthusiastic Rotary Club members will sell parade sponsorship buttons to raise funds for the event. The recent Selectmen's Golf Tournament, which fortunately was scheduled for what turned out to be one of the only sunny days in recent weeks, was organized by Pat Casey, Ron Sherwood, and other volunteers. The event raised $20,000 for future parades. "The event really paved the way for future parades," Nicholson said. "Now we will have more money for bands."

The parade wouldn't be possible without the efforts of dedicated Parade Committee members, who Nicholson called a "tight-knit group" of volunteers who appreciate each other's roles and the significance of Hingham's traditional parade, which brings out the patriotic spirit in spectators of all ages.

"It's a folksy town parade, drawing people from all over the South Shore and even farther away because some communities don't have parades of their own," Nicholson said. "It's going to be a great event. Everyone is excited about it."

The celebration extends into July 5, with band concerts and spectacular fireworks at Hingham Harbor (see related sidebar).

Fourth of July events

Festivities surrounding Hingham's upcoming Fourth of July celebration include:

Friday, July 4 — 7 a.m., Hingham July 4th Road Race, organized by Friends of Hingham Recreation Commission. Registration begins at 5 a.m. at Hingham Middle School, 1103 Main St. For further information, call the Recreation Department at 741-1464.

7 a.m. until start of parade – Kiwanis Club pancake breakfast on Hingham Common.

10 a.m., Hingham's traditional parade with the theme, "Freedom's Trail," steps out from Hingham High School. Judging of the floats begins at 8:45 a.m. in four categories – Best of Parade, Most Patriotic, Most Unique, and Most Beautiful.

Saturday, July 5 — Fireworks, sponsored by Hingham Lion's Club, will be launched from Button Island beginning at 9 p.m. The display will be bigger than last year's spectacular event. A rock and roll concert is scheduled from 6 to 7:15 p.m., followed by other performers, including the Satuit Band. Vendors will offer sausages, fried dough, Italian slush, and other items. The Lion's Club will sell T-shirts and conduct a 50-50 raffle to help sponsor the fireworks and Lion's Club charities. The rain date is Sunday, July 6.

Parade detour

On Friday, July 4, there will be no parking on the following streets.

- North Street from Station Street to Lincoln Street
- Station Street "in area of sewer building"
- Main Street, from the Square to Cold Corner
- South Street, from Central Street to North Street
- Spring Street
- School Street
- Pleasant Street from Middle Street to School Street
- Middle Street

Parade route

Parade will start at 10 a.m. from the Hingham High School on Pleasant Street, travel East on Pleasant Street, turn left onto Middle Street, and will head North on Main Street, to Hingham Square. Parade will turn right onto North Street, and finish at Station Street

Pleasant Street will be "one way only" heading in an easterly direction from Main Street, towards Middle Street starting at 7:30 a.m. July 4.

Pleasant Street will only be used for parade personnel. Large float: will be parking on the southerly side of Pleasant Street.

whether Avalon could obtain a surface-water permit from the state Department of Environmental Protection because the DEP does not issue surface-water permits for Class A (drinking water) watersheds. However, Avalon maintained it had evidence the proposed system site was in the Weir River Watershed, not Lily Pond.

Nevertheless, encouraged to seek an alternative wastewater treatment system, Avalon presented an overview of its new septic system, which incorporates a ground-water disposal system. The proposed system still incorporates a treatment plant but one that would send the effluent into a leaching field rather than discharge it on top of the ground.

Avalon officials claim to have found favorable soils around the site of the existing leaching field on the property that pass percolation tests. The plan includes a series of monitoring wells both up grade and down grade from the new 40,000-square-foot leaching field.

Avalon officials claim to have found favorable soils around the site of the existing leaching field on the property that pass percolation tests.

The system would still need to be reviewed by MEPA (Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act) and meet DEP design guidelines.

The size of the system is not unprecedented. Avalon consultant Mike Giggey said the DEP has issued 100 permits for systems that generate 20,000-50,000 gallons per day. Avalon's average flow would be 20,000-25,000 gallons per day.

The septic system would include biological treatment and tanks to equalize the flow over 24 hours into the leaching field. Avalon said the level of treatment would have the water close to drinking water standards by the time it leaves the Avalon site.

But the Water Commission, Board of Health and Planning Board said they do not have enough information and want to see more detailed plans.

Avalon agreed to share information on its perc tests and borings with the boards, which are concerned that the groundwater from the leaching field may actually turn into surface water at some points as it seeps toward Lily Pond because of the hydrology of the area.

Avalon is seeking a comprehensive permit under Chapter 40B, the state affordable housing law, that allows developers to skirt local zoning laws in exchange for providing 20-25 percent of the project as affordable housing. Avalon has applied to the Zoning Board for a comprehensive permit.

The ZBA, however, has the authority to reject the project if the board determines the project would damage the environment and water supplies rate high in environmental terms, a town consultant said. Therefore, approval of the wastewater plan is critical to the future of the project.

ZBA 40-B consultant Mark Bobrowski said the ZBA did not have to simply turn the issue over to the DEP and had the right to ask for mitigating conditions elsewhere. He cited an example of a project being added to a sewer system and then helping to correct problems with leaks in other parts of the system.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis, speaking for the Water Commission and Planning Board, said the ZBA had the right to a lot more information and described the current plans as a "nebulous." He asked for more information and an opportunity for other town boards to review and comment on the plan.

Steven Schwartz, an attorney for Avalon, took umbrage with DeRensis's "nebulous" remark describing it as "unfair and inaccurate."

"We were charged by this board to look for alternative systems" which Avalon did at significant cost and expense, he said. Schwartz said the real issue is if the soils are sufficient to accommodate the discharge, and noted there were a plethora of standards out there that would flush that out.

Water Commission Chairman John McNabb said the perc tests needed independent evaluation. If it is then determined the septic system is feasible then it's on to the Board of Health to set standards — but if the soils aren't sufficient, then there is no wastewater plan, he said.

It is not clear if Avalon would be responsible for developing a hydrological plan for what happens to the groundwater once it leaves the Avalon property, as suggested by several town consultants. Lily Pond is about a mile from Avalon, officials said.

"We can't control what goes on beyond our boundary," said Scott Dale Avalon vice president. Dale said the wastewater system would adhere to the objective standards in the industry and Avalon was concerned the ZBA was seeking "veto power" over a DEP permit. Avalon consultants said the three- to six-month long DEP permit process would provide opportunity for "healthy dialogue" about the wastewater plan.

The ZBA took the matter under advisement and continued the hearing, which will likely resume in August.

"I watch all the birds migrate," she said

Hubbard has seen egrets, cormorants, and terns, which have just recently begun nesting in the Little Harbor area again.

"We lost the terns for a while, but we're grateful they're back," she said.

Hubbard is especially concerned for the safety of the elders, of which some are crippled. The notice sent out to the neighbors of Little Harbor asks, "Please respect their inability to fly or move quickly out of the path of speeding boars, etc. They are old and fragile and are loved and watched by many of us."

Another bylaw concerning Little Harbor states, "No person shall operate a small boat in Little Harbor while towing a water skier, aqua plane, or other similar device except on even numbered days."

An easy way to remember that rule is, even has four letters and so does fast and the word slow has an "O" in it, and so does odd.

The purpose for designating the even/odd days is to help people learn to share the water space, which acting Harbormaster John Muncey backs completely. He thinks it is a great idea to get the word out that there are rules which everyone needs to respect.

By presenting a compromise, both residents who like to keep things quiet and boaters who like to enjoy the scenery can use the harbor, but it is still very important that whether a slow or fast day, the wildlife be respected, Muncey said.

Many birds nest on the shores, so it is important their nests do not get trampled during on land exploration. It is also vitally important that during the late summer, when the birds feed heavily in preparation for their winter migration, they are not disturbed by curious dogs. Having to expend their energy to get away from chasing dogs, the birds can't store enough fat and use up energy reserves needed for migrating.

The harbor is a beautiful place that should be shared equally by all who use it. Hubbard said the harbor is visited by swans from time to time, who are often an unwelcome sight. While beautiful to look at, they come with huge appetites, and eat enough food for many different varieties of smaller birds.

"We're trying to make everyone share the harbor, even the wildlife," she said.

While everyone is always welcome to use the space, it is important to remember humans need not act like swans. By respecting others who use the waterway as well as the wildlife who live there, Little Harbor is sure to remain a Cohasset treasure for years to come, officials say.

"Little Harbor is large, but not that large. It doesn't take too many large boats to disrupt everything," Hubbard said.

The fields of Little Harbor

Little Harbor was not always the open waterway it is today. Oliver H. Howe M.D., who wrote an article on the history of the harbor, writes that back in 1741, a dam was built where Cunningham Bridge on Atlantic Avenue now is. The dam kept the saltwater out of the harbor and an artificial channel allowed surface water to drain at low tide. Little Harbor was kept dry and served as a field with several winding creeks running through it.

Howe writes the dam was put into place when 36 salt marsh owners with adjoining flats signed an agreement to build the dam and channel, as a way to farm much needed hay for the livestock. Much of the lands in those days were forests, and the harbor became a protected area through "The Proprietors of the Meadows and Flats in the Little Harbor of Cohasset."

Cohasset resident Sandra Durant said when the tide is low, you can still see the remainders of an old stone wall in the middle of the harbor. Boaters beware!

Howe's article also said there was a road running through the harbor, which led from the head of the common, across the harbor to Beach Island.

According to Howe, the fields of the harbor stayed as they were until the great storm of 1851, which brought down the original Minot's Lighthouse. The storm nearly destroyed the dam and the gates and channel were filled with gravel and debris. At this time, the harbor became "offensive" and the dam and channel were opened, allowing for the waterway we enjoy today.

Sandy Beach is open for the summer

Sandy Beach officially has opened for the 2003 summer season. Lifeguards will be on duty 9a.m. to 7 p.m. daily through Labor Day (Sept. 1). Bathhouse facilities are available for use during the same hours. The following guidelines are issued to assure the safety of beach visitors and to protect the environment:

- Parking available for vehicles displaying a Town of Cohasset sticker.
- Alcoholic beverages are prohibited
- Glass containers are prohibited
- Pets are prohibited
- Flotation devices are prohibited
- Water-craft are prohibited in the marked swim area
- Rock climbing is prohibited
- Respect the sand dunes by avoiding trampling of dune grass

Despite the rules, beach visitors are invited to enjoy many days at the "jewel of Cohasset" in a safe and environmentally sound manner.

John Adams' prophecy came true

Braintree's John Adams suspected that he would not receive his proper due from posterity for his role in America's successful fight for independence.

"The whole history of this Revolution will be a lie, from beginning to end," he wrote.

Adams, who described himself as "obnoxious and disliked," was keenly aware that his colleagues Benjamin Franklin and George Washington possessed the charisma which leads to legendary status.

"It will be certified that Franklin did this, Franklin did that, Franklin did some another damned thing," Adams sourly predicted. "Franklin smote the ground and out sprang George Washington, fully grown and on his horse. Franklin then electrified him with his miraculous lightning rod, and the three of them—Franklin, Washington, and the horse—conducted the entire Revolution by themselves."

Thanks in large part to "John Adams," David McCullough's superb, Pulitzer Prize winning biography, there has been a resurgence of interest in our first vice president and second president.

Here's something about Adams that you may not have learned in school.

If Washington was the "Father of His Country" and James Madison was the "Father of the Constitution," a case can be made that Adams deserves to be called the "Father of the Fourth of July."

In a July 3, 1776 letter to his wife Abigail, of whom Weymouth is so proud, Adams made an extraordinary prophecy in which he described the way Independence Day would be observed in the future.

Adams wrote:

"I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival.

"It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty.

"It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, guns, bells, bonfires, and illumination, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward forevermore.

"You will think me transported with enthusiasm, but I am not. I am well aware of the toil and blood and treasure that it will cost us to maintain this Declaration and support and defend these states.

"Yet, through all the gloom, I can see the rays of ravishing light and glory.

"I can see that the end is more than worth all the means.

"I can see that posterity will triumph in that day's transaction, even although we should rue it, which I trust God we shall not."

The Fourth of July celebrations all across America in honor of our independence serve as our annual reminder that John Adams's prophecy came true.

Incidentally, McCullough is part of a campaign to preserve Massachusetts' role in the Declaration of Independence.

The goal is to raise up to $100,000 for Adams National Historical Park in Quincy, a part of the National Park Service, to preserve John Quincy Adams' commissioned proof copy of the Declaration.

(John Quincy Adams, the son of John and Abigail, was our sixth president. John and John Quincy, therefore, join George Herbert Walker Bush and George W. Bush as the only father and son Presidential combinations in American history.)

In 1823, when John Quincy Adams saw that the original Declaration was deteriorating, he commissioned duplicates to be made with the goal of preserving it for generations to come.

Adams National Historical Park will use the remainder of the money to preserve other notable artifacts related to Massachusetts's role in independence.

According to a 2001 National Parks Conservation Association report, 55,900 (or 64 percent) of the park's 87,300 historical artifacts, including John Quincy Adams' proof copy of the Declaration, are in fair to poor condition.

At the same time, annual visitation to Adams National Historical Park increased from 64,516 in 1998 to 176,890 in 2002, adding increased stress to the park's resources.

Today (July 2) at the park from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m., McCullough is scheduled to read a passage from the Declaration as local children sign a large copy of the document to signify its importance to the area.

How appropriate. The timing couldn't possibly be better.

We hope that this fundraising campaign will be a success.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thanks to all for festival support

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the South Shore Art Center and its Board of Directors, we would like to thank the hundreds of people and the weather for making the 48th annual Arts Festival a tremendous success.

There are three individuals in particular who take on tremendous responsibility and we truly "couldn't do it without them." They are incredibly generous with their time and commitment — a million thanks to Mary Foley, Linda Bolster and Beverly Bielewicz and their families!

Our sincerest thanks to Cohasset town officials and administrators – especially Mark Haddad, Ellen Wynne, Dr. Joseph Godzik, Bob Egan, Cohasset Highway Dept., Dr. Ted Malvey, Chief Jackson and Chief Noonan. Others who come through for us every year include Wallace St. John; Graham Waste; Rod Hobson; Vince Longo and the South Shore Music Circus; Pat Cannon Electric; Chris Draves and the Scituate Boy Scouts Troop 5.

To the more than 100 volunteers — from demonstrating artists to roaming photographers, from those who help us jury artwork in May to those who work throughout Festival—many, many thanks!

Kudos to the bands who played and added so much to the Arts Festival, especially Steve Biagini and the "not-at-all" Rusty Skippers, Hingham High School Jazz Ensemble, Ana Buckley, and Howie Altholtz, Mark Lehman, Vic Lanzilotti, Chuck Furtado, Brian Betzger, Anne Czerkowski, and Will Graefe. Thanks to the St. Stephen's Carilloneurs Mary Kennedy and Sally Slade Warner for the lovely noontime music over the weekend.

For their annual support of our *off*Common party, we are indebted to Debbie and John Flanagan, Edward Jones Investments, and Karen Hurd; Andrea and Joe Kinnealey, Kinnealey Meats; Lorraine Bachman, On the Rocks Catering; Franny Andahazy, Party by Design; and Mullaney's Fish Market. Thanks also to sponsors Hingham Institution for Savings; Megan, Carolyn, Chris Pratt; South Shore Hospital; Image Resolutions; Peacock Press; Portland Pottery Supply; and Plymouth County Convention and Visitors Bureau.

The Festival principal sponsors — Community Newspaper Company and Fleet — make it possible for the Art Center to present a Festival that not only showcases great art, but also celebrates the process of making art and the wonderful community of the South Shore.

Tourist infrastructure

SELECTMEN:

If you and most of the townspeople are in favor of burying the wires and it works out to be feasible, then that aspect of the "revitalization" can be considered a real aesthetic improvement.

As for the rest of the "revitalization improvements", I hope decisions will be thoughtfully made in full realization of where the town may be headed. In my cynical view developed from travels in this country and abroad, the changes as proposed, amount to a tourist infrastructure.

Once we have become commercially quaint enough with our walkways, lamp posts and traffic patterns, I can envision motel and inn vehicles meeting commuter boats during the summer season, drop-off and pick-up vans at Sandy Beach, fishing and sightseeing excursions from private docks and marinas, package weekends including Music Circus tickets, even tour buses traversing the "Gold Coast" with running commentary on homes and their occupants.

I hope I am wrong. I am sure you don't want that scenario either. As many letter writers attest, Cohasset is a treasure of a beautiful, safe, family- oriented, perhaps a bit seedy (but expensive) small town with unique ambiance that many endure long winters and a tough commute to be able to live in.

Village plans lack common sense

TO MR. MARK HADDAD, TOWN MANAGER, BOARD OF SELECTMEN:

Yes here I go again. The village proposal by the Waterfield Group is absurd — you know it — I know it — and residents and visitors know it. They're doing a job they're getting paid to do. They could care less about Cohasset, the Town Manager, the Board of Selectmen and residents. All you have to do is go and look at these absurd "bumpouts." Who came up with that term? The idea? Now any group like Waterfield or CRC latches on to that because it's in their manual of design terms. People think they're intelligent because they use "bumpout" and many other pretty non-technical terms peculiar to the village, street, park, etc., design world.

Let's get down to common sense — you have it — I have it— the residents of Cohasset have it — common sense. We don't need firms like Waterfield to tell us what to do. Before we begin to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars on the current Waterfield proposal, which is absurd, let's begin again using basic common sense in designing.

We know what we have now at Depot Court and Main Street, at South Main Street and Elm Street, at Brook Street and South Main Street. We know where the crosswalks are and how to improve them by lining and painting. We know that the sidewalks are in bad need of "redoing." We know that the streets — a bit of N. Main Street — South Main Street — a piece of Elm Street need "redoing." We know our sidewalk needs are peculiar to Cohasset. We know that the town voted at the last town election not to become involved with burying the wires. This is a debatable issue and if some group wants to foot the bill (put the cash in a bank account for safe keeping) then let's do it, otherwise forget burying the wires.

What I'm trying to say to you, the Town Manager, the Board of Selectmen, and other town boards involved, is use your intelligence, use your common sense, use your head, listen to others, admit that there may be, that there are some very good ideas out there in the heads of residents of Cohasset that could be used, be picked out and jelled into a good proposal that will make Cohasset a simple, beautiful New England village. It will draw people because of its simplicity, its allure. Believe me they'll come to see us, the harbor, the restaurants, the inns, the historic buildings and Minot Light, and we'll welcome them.

Dreamcatcher

Inside a dreamcatcher,
lies all the dreadful dreams caught in children's minds.

Inside a dreamcatcher,
monsters and shadows come alive.
Inside a dreamcatcher,
tosses the dreadful scene of young men dying for freedom.

Inside a dreamcatcher,
screams a young voice calling for its parent to come back and find it.

Inside a dreamcatcher,
rests a peaceful valley with clouds moving forever through the beautiful sky.
The valley fears nothing, for there is nothing to fear.
The valley is endless in time.

Inside a dreamcatcher,
lies the sight of flowers blooming with joy because they now have life.

Inside a dreamcatcher,
the touch of a warm breeze
smoothes across your face, barely touching your nose.

Inside a dreamcatcher,
all of the dreams between nightmares and fairytales are stored forever.

Inside a dreamcatcher
lies trust, sweet dreams
and lights out.

HEALTH NOTES

Protecting against West Nile Virus

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The good news is: so far, no cases of West Nile Virus have been reported in Massachusetts this year. WNV is a mosquito-carried virus that usually causes mild or no illness in humans. In rare cases, WNV can cause encephalitis (swelling of the brain) or meningitis (swelling of the lining of the brain and spinal cord). In previous years, Since 1999, WNV has been found in Massachusetts in birds, mosquitoes, horses and humans. This is the first year since onset of the disease that no cases have been detected this late in the summer season. 2002 was a bad year for WNV in the south, but evidence indicates that the disease is becoming increasingly rare in New England.

WNV is most commonly spread to people by the bite of an infected mosquito. A mosquito can become infected by biting a bird that carries the virus. It may also be spread through blood transfusions or organ transplants. There are reports that WNV may be passed from pregnant or breastfeeding women to their babies. The risk to the unborn baby is still unknown.

It is still important to report the location of dead birds to the Massachusetts Department of Public Health by calling 1-866-MASS WNV (627-7968). While most dead birds will not be collected and tested for WNV, keeping track of their locations plays an important role in guiding further bird, mosquito and human surveillance activities. So far, this year, of the 447 reported this year, only seven birds were tested and all tests were negative.

Illnesses caused by mosquito bites are very rare. Very few mosquito bites carry any risk. People who are bitten by mosquitoes carrying the WNV will usually experience no illness or very mild illness. However, you should see a health care provider immediately if you develop symptoms such as:

- high fever
- severe headache
- confusion
- stiff neck
- muscle weakness
- sensitivity to light

Patients with mild symptoms usually recover completely and do not require any specific medication or laboratory testing. Less than 1 percent of people infected with WNV develop serious illness. Persons older than 50 years of age have a higher risk of developing severe illness such as encephalitis.

Protect yourself

Your risk of getting ill from WNV is low, but you can lower your risk even more. Since there is no human vaccine for WNV, the best way to protect yourself is, to keep mosquitoes from biting you. Follow these simple steps and protect yourself:

Limit outdoor activities between dusk and dawn.

If you must be outdoors, wear a long-sleeved shirt, long pants and socks.

Consider using a mosquito repellent that contains DEET (the chemical NN-diethyl-meta-toluamide) and follow the directions on the label. Never use DEET on infants. .

Avoid using repellents with DEET concentrations above 10-15 percent for children and above 30-35 percent for adults. Cream, lotion or stick formulas are best for use on skin.

Make sure window and door screens do not have holes in them.

Remove standing water

Mosquitoes grow in standing (stagnant) water. Getting rid of that water helps to lower the number of mosquitoes in your area. Look around outside your house for containers and other things that might collect water and turn them over, regularly empty them, or dispose of them.

For other information on WNV call the Massachusetts Department of Public Health Information Line at 1-866-MASS WNV (627-7968), see the MDPH website from a link on the MDPH homepage at http://www.state. ma.us/dph or call the Cohasset Board of Health.

LIBRARY CORNER

Four new trees

The Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library wish to thank the members of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset for the donation of four trees to be used in the development of the Library's landscaping plan. These Cornus Kousa (Chinese Dogwood) were given in honor of the Club's second, third and fourth presidents, Mrs. Newell W. Rogers (Daisy), Mrs. Thomas G. Churchill (Celeste), and Mrs. John J. Gregg (Barbara). Please look for them as they were planted on the Sohier Street side and will soon be in bloom.

The Trustees are also most grateful to the Cohasset Town Tree and Park staff for planting the trees, and for our spring cleanup and mulching. For this help and all the other work in getting our new library ready, we thank Andy Swanson, Chris Murray, Herb Marsh, and Bob Piepenbrink, all of whom don't let the rain deter them!

Power of reading!

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library presents Keith Michael Johnson and his "Hat's Off to Reading" show. It will take place on Tuesday, July 8 at 7p.m.

Check out the museum passes available to you at the library, compliments of the Friends of the Cohasset Library. Reserve the John F. Kennedy Library and Museum pass. From May until October 31, 2002 the Museum is featuring a special exhibit commemorating the 50th wedding anniversary of Jacqueline Bouvier and John F. Kennedy. Highlights include Mrs. Kennedy's wedding dress, her engagement ring and rare color footage of the reception. Telephone the library at 781 383-1348 for more details.

Efforts being made to ensure construction is harmonious

CONSERVATORY BEAT

DAVID W. BRYAN

Construction began earlier this month on South Shore Conservatory's expan...on of learning space at its Hingham campus. The first signs of change were orange strings tied around trees and white rectangles painted on the ground. Then came the arrival of the green and white office trailer and white dumpster, followed by the yellow back hoe and excavator. The colorful equipment replaced the colorful preschool play yard which was carefully removed and stored for reinstallation in the fall. Several cedars and oaks were removed with amazing speed to make room for the new building and additional parking. After grading the ground, trenches are dug for the foundation and the elevator shaft is in preparation. There are dramatic changes every day.

Regular classes, programming and concerts will continue throughout the construction period although we recognize that even with very careful planning, there may be some confusion and last minute rescheduling. The sounds of construction can sometimes be a little too insistent but we are trying to think of them as percussion fanfares in preparation for the completion of the 10,000 square foot building next spring.

All this activity is occurring because the demand for the Conservatory's services has far outstripped the current facility's ability to accommodate the lessons, classes and performances needed for 3200 students. For example, about one third of the Work is underway on the new addition at the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham.

Conservatory's students are part of the Arts Partners outreach program which brings music and drama into 12 schools and two social service agencies. Often students who are introduced to music and drama in these settings develop a bond with their teacher and then come to South Shore Conservatory to advance their studies with one-on-one lessons and more performance opportunities. Their final performance in the Jane Cheever Carr Amphitheater occurred on one of the few warm sunny evenings in mid-June and included concerts by the MVP Band for students with less than one year of study and the Varsity Band for students with more than one year. A highlight was a specially commissioned percussion ensemble work by faculty members Michael Lewis and Carl Puglisi.

Watching these students perform with such determination and enthusiasm is an important reminder why the expansion is so important. It will give more students an opportunity to reach to discover a new means of self-expression, self-discipline and camaraderie. Stop by to see the progress and how you may become involved.

David W. Bryan is a Trustee and Past President of South Shore Conservatory. He serves as co-chair of the Capital Campaign, Building the Future. He may be reached through 781-749-7565, ext. 23.

CHS art grant

TO THE EDITOR:

Once again, the South Shore Playhouse Associates have granted the Cohasset High School Arts Boosters a generous grant of $1,000. This grant will help to fund our operating expenses for the upcoming school year. The money raised by Arts Boosters goes directly to the students in the form of enriching the arts and music curriculum with extra supplies, paying entry fees for drama competitions and granting requests from the teachers for special events or projects which are not included in the school budget. This grant will enable us to begin the year on a sound financial basis.

The South Shore Playhouse Associates and the South Shore Music Circus are true assets to the town of Cohasset. The faculty, students and parents of Cohasset High School thank them for their generosity and sincerely hope that the 2003 season will be a huge success.

Close beach gate

TO THE SELECTMEN:

Your decision to leave the second (north) gate open during the day came as a surprise to me and many other concerned mothers. We have renewed concern about the safety of our children at the beach because of some incidents that occurred. There was a situation two years ago involving a few 5-year-old girls. In one incident a man from another town was at the beach parking lot trying to lure the young girls in his truck by offering them candy. Thank God the children knew better not to go with him. This is on record at the police station and we know there have been some other unreported instances. We realize Cohasset is a safe town but if closing the north gate deters someone from harming our children then we should give this idea serious consideration.

We urge you to have the gate closed again and to place an attendant at the front gate at all times checking stickers. It would not hurt to have a police officer continually patrolling the beach and the parking lot as well.

Footnote to the 4th of July

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

It's just a curious footnote on an historic page this Fourth of July 227 years later.

But the words of the Declaration of Independence were still new on everyone's lips when the British made a half-hearted try to rescind the declaration and return the so-called Americans back to the status of British subjects.

The proposal was made by Admiral Richard Lord Howe, the British naval commander in New York, by way of General John Sullivan, a captured Continental officer, to the Continental Congress meeting in Philadelphia.

The Congress reluctantly dispatched a three-member delegation of Edward Rutledge, Benjamin Franklin and John Adams to meet with Lord Howe in Staten Island to see what he wanted. Whatever it was, it was doomed from the start.

It took the delegation two days to go from Philadelphia to Staten Island. Howe greeted them cordially for he truly liked the American colonists, even treated them to a repast of cold ham, tongue and mutton topped off by a good claret.

"Lord Howe was profuse in his expressions of gratitude to the state of Massachusetts, for erecting a marble monument in Westminster Abbey to his elder brother, Lord Howe, who was killed in America in the last French war, saying 'he esteemed that honour in his family, above all things in this world,'" Adams wrote in his memoirs.

"That such was his gratitude and affection to this country on that account that he felt for America as for a brother and if America should fall, he should feel and lament it, like the loss of a brother."

"My Lord, we will do our utmost endeavors to save your lordship that mortification," replied Franklin, which alarmed Adams, who was always a little suspicious of Franklin's free-wheeling ways and sense of humor.

The conference was barely underway, when it foundered on one word.

"When his lordship observed to us that he could not confer with us as members of Congress or public characters, but only as private persons and British subjects, Mr. John Adams answered somewhat quickly:

"Your lordship may consider me in what light you please, and indeed I should be willing to consider myself, for a few moments, in any character which would be agreeable to your lordship, except that of a British subject," wrote Adams, who frequently referred to himself in the third person.

With that, Howe turned to Rutledge and Franklin and said, "Mr. Adams is a decided character," and the meeting ended shortly after that.

Howe had the authority to pardon any one of the rebels he saw fit but Adams, as ambassador to Great Britain after the war, learned that there were a number of exceptions — and he was one of them.

"I was informed in England afterward that a number were expressly excepted by name from pardon, by the privy council, and that John Adams was one of them. And that this list of exceptions was given as an instruction to the two Howes with their commission," he wrote.

"If this is true it will account for his lordship's gloomy denunciation of me as 'a decided character.'"

As ambassador, Adams was invited to attend the queen's birthday ball in London but he couldn't find his seats.

"Fortunately," he wrote, "meeting Lord Howe at the door, I asked his lordship where were the ambassadors' seats. His lordship, with his usual politeness, and an unusual smile of good humour, pointed to the seats, and manifestly alluding to the conversation on Staten Island, said:

"'Ay, now, we must turn you away among the foreigners.'"

POLITICAL NOTES

O'Donnell is new Republican chairman

At the June meeting of the Cohasset Republican Town Committee elections were held. Kevin O'Donnell was elected as chairman, David Farrag as vice-chairman and Peter Guild became the assistant treasurer.

As new chairman, O'Donnell is looking forward to working with a dynamic group toward the committee's mission of electing Republican candidates. He intends to continue increasing the associate membership and encouraging members to commit to a specific task.

A vote of thanks was extended to former chairman Janet Fogarty for her dedication and energy during the five years she served leading the committee. Fogarty has been recognized by the state committee as one of the top town chairman for her involvement in and support of the GOP.

The next monthly meeting will be July 29 at the Lightkeeper's Cottage.

Mark your calendar — Sunday, Aug.17 — for the annual Republican Cookout which will be at Julie Guild's house. Enjoy good food and scintillating conversation with some of your favorite Republicans. For reservations and further information call Heather Palmer at 781-383-3339.

Bulger and budget stories vie for top billing on Beacon Hill

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

An analysis and recap of the week in state government.

The Battle of the Bulger continued, again trumping the budget war as the major attention-getter on Beacon Hill.

The budget was expected to be the biggest story of the last week of the fiscal year. But the hallmark of the truly seasoned government observer is dubiousness about the expected. And so it should have been no surprise that the tongues of the truly seasoned wound up wagging more about a power struggle at the bottom of Beacon Hill, in the UMass president's office at One Beacon Street, than the one at the top of Beacon Hill, where the governor said the budget before him is $200 million out of balance. Can Bulger hold on? Why would he want to? Those were the uppermost questions in the Statehouse hallways. As always in his long career, the UMass president has the votes. As expected the UMass Board of Trustees met to support Bulger; and 51 percent of legislators are not going to support forced retirement.

But Bulger, who led by consensus much more than was commonly understood during his record-long run as Senate president, has the politician's feel for critical mass and tipping points – dynamics it makes no sense to ignore in politics, however the votes stack up. Disinclined to be told what to do, he nonetheless is faced with an unmistakable, and growing, momentum behind the idea that it's time for him to leave.

The problems posed caused by the budget situation are ultimately far more significant but, diffused as they are among hundreds of programs and hundreds of thousands of people, much less evocative of concentrated comment. Still, the fallout was startling – and perhaps no more so than at the very institution Bulger leads.

For the first time, perhaps anywhere in the nation, tenured professors are about to be laid off from a public institution of higher education, undermining its stature in a way nothing else could. The athletic program, or at least a big part of it, might become a private charity. The journalism department, which has trained a healthy proportion of the state's media backbone, faces elimination.

In other days, in other states, the university president would be working full time to save as many jobs as possible on the campuses he leads. But for now, Bulger's attention must be diverted to saving his own. That division of attention may eliminate the support he needs from within the UMass system — a system suffering a disproportionate share of the pain being inflicted by the budget cuts.

Can Bulger hold on? Why would he want to? Those were the uppermost questions in the Statehouse hallways. As always in his long career, the UMass president has the votes.

Bulger's pain is the glamorous kind – the type that will continue to make the front page and the top of the talk shows. But the statewide suffering not communicated in tabloid typeface is the actual story – quieter, and more dramatic.

Bulger, budget, and . . . it wouldn't be a complete week without some news on the other "B," the Big Dig.

• Romney supports Big Dig commission idea — The governor backed the concept, unveiled by Sen. Marc Pacheco, of a seven-member commission to look into how much money the state should try to recoup from contractors on the Big Dig for mistakes and abuse. Romney said he would only support a model under which the commission's staff would be independent of the turnpike authority, which runs the project but has come under withering criticism for the small amount that's been recouped from contractors.

• I-93 South to open ahead of time, but at a price — Big Dig managers announced they can open the Big Dig tunnel south well ahead of schedule – and well ahead of the throngs that will pour into the city in advance of the Democratic National Convention – by riding herd on contractors and spending an additional $4.7 million. Ultimately that added cost could save money by preventing extra expense associated with any convention mitigation need if the tunnel weren't fully open and most of the existing Central Artery torn down, managers said.

• Governor mulls vetoes, seems anti-clean elections — The governor is expected to take the full 10 days allowed him to decide on his vetoes, but signaled the Clean Elections system is doomed. "I do not want to put in our budget, particularly in a year with the financial challenges we have, money going into a Clean Elections fund." Romney said accounting mistakes and other errors left the budget $200 million out of balance, and he'll address the problem with corresponding cuts. Democratic leaders responded with criticism of his choice to go public with his problems instead of negotiating solutions in private.

• Romney backs expansion of bottle law — The consistently pro-environment administration once again opposed business interests by announcing its support for an expansion of the bottle bill to cover non-carbonated beverages. Romney proposed the expansion in his budget plan. Democrats in the Legislature did not include it in the bill on his desk.

• O'brien and McGee propose health-insurance imposition — Rep. Thomas O'Brien, D-Kingston, and Sen. Thomas McGee, D-Lynn, proposed legislation to require any employer of more than 99 workers to offer health insurance or pay a penalty to the state that would be used to bolster programs that pay for care provided to the uninsured. Health care advocates hailed the idea, reminiscent of the old Dukakis health-care-for-all plan, but business lobbyists said cost containment, not new business levies, should be pursued.

• Chapter 40b moratorium unlikely, but changes coming — At a hearing of the Housing and Urban Development Committee, it became evident the Chapter 40B anti-snob zoning law is staying on the books in its present form for a while, despite calls from suburban legislators for its repeal. The law, which allows big new developments in places without much affordable housing, has drawn the wrath of many lawmakers. But both Douglas Foy, Romney's director of Commonwealth Development, and the committee chairs made plain that they are amenable to a carefully-constructed reform of 40B, but nothing close to a repeal in the near future.

• Sponsors of ads promoting Romney fined — John W. Childs and Robert A. Maginn were each fined $500 by the Office of Campaign and Political Finance for inaccurately reporting the source of funding for radio advertisements used to promote Mitt Romney during his run for the Corner Office last year. In a disposition agreement, the two men acknowledged personally paying $25,000 each for a series of radio ads promoting Romney, after listing "Citizens for Good Government," a private organization, as the source on an expenditure account during the campaign.

• Romney's first judicial pick a shoo-in — He'll no doubt make more controversial choices, but Gov. Romney started the easy way, as Frederick Taub enjoyed a unanimous vote of the Governor's Council granting him a three-year term on the Industrial Accident Board. Taub is used to provisional appointments, and was delighted with the lengthy authorization: "Three years feels like forever to me," he said.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

By Bob Katzen
beaconhill@aol.com
June 27, 2003

Senator Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth) (617) 722-1646 Room 413F

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2120 Room 472

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for over 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' votes on two roll calls and local senators' votes on one roll call from prior sessions on consideration of each branch's version of a municipal relief package designed to give cities and towns more fiscal and management flexibility and revenue raising options. The House and Senate have yet to agree on a compromise version of the plan. There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.

ANNUAL STREET LISTING (H 4002)

House 124-33, approved an amendment requiring cities and towns to continue to conduct an annual street listing of residents. The amendment would replace a proposal requiring communities to only do so every two years. Amendment supporters said an annual street listing is a key tool used by communities to comply with the National Voter Registration Act and to provide a current list of residents to the state's Jury Commissioner in order to select people for jury duty. They argued that the reduction to a biennial requirement may result in a violation of federal voting laws and would make it more difficult to assemble juries in a timely manner. Amendment opponents said jury lists can easily be compiled from biennial street lists. They argued that communities are tired of unfunded state mandates and noted a biennial requirement would reduce costs for cities and town and allow them to spend the savings on important core services. (A "Yea" vote is for the annual requirement. A "Nay" vote is against the annual requirement).

$1 FEE FOR AGRICULTURAL FAIR VISITORS (H 4002)

House 54-100, rejected an amendment striking a section that imposes a $1 fee on every person who attends an agricultural or horticultural fair that runs more than three days and has a majority of exhibits that are competitive in nature. The revenue would go into a newly created "Visitor Impact Fund" operated by the state that would give the money to the city or town that hosted the fair. Amendment supporters said using private, non-profit organizations that run these fairs to impose a tax on individuals is outrageous and sets a bad precedent. They said it could reduce attendance at the fairs and also lead to communities asking for legislation to impose the tax on other local nonprofit organizations that charge an admission fee. Amendment opponents said the fee is a fair one that will help raise desperately needed revenue for communities that spend a lot of time and money on hosting these fairs. They noted that this fee is only a small part of a comprehensive section that also imposes fees on visitors to state parks, forests and reservations and gives the revenue to the community or communities in which the facility is located. (A "Yea" vote is for striking the $1 fee for visitors to agricultural fairs. A "Nay" vote is against striking the fee and is in favor of the fee).

LAID OFF FIREFIGHTERS (S 2010)

Senate 36-1, approved an amendment exempting a laid off firefighter, hired by a new city or town, from complying with any residency requirement mandating that he reside in the new community. Amendment supporters said that firefighters who are laid off but rehired by another community should not have to uproot their lives and move to a new city or town. They said this is the least the state can do for brave firefighters who are laid off because of the budget crisis and local aid cuts. Amendment opponents offered no arguments. (A "Yea" vote is for the exemption. A "Nay" vote is against the exemption).

ALSO UPON BEACON HILL

BAN SMOKING IN TAXIS (S 1389)- The Public Safety Committee gave a favorable report to and sent to the Senate legislation prohibiting smoking in taxicabs.

FINNERAN WEBSITE- Speaker Tom Finneran (D-Boston) announced the launch of a new website www.Tom Finneran.com. In a press release, Finneran said that the site is designed to give citizens and advocates access to timely information about the state, the legislative process and government services.

FREE HEARING TESTS (S 623)- The Health Care Committee held a hearing on a proposal requiring most health care plans to cover an annual hearing test for senior citizens. The state would bear the cost of any test not covered by a plan.

BREASTFEEDING (S 44)- The Commerce and Labor Committee held a hearing on a measure allowing a mother to breastfeed her baby in any public or private location "irrespective of whether or not the nipple of the mother's breast is covered during or incidental to the feeding."

CELL PHONES AND CARS- The Public Safety Committee sent to the House a bill banning the use of hand-held cellular phones while driving and allowing drivers to use only hands-free ones. The measure also bans the use of any cell phone by drivers under the age of 18. Penalties on drivers over 18 include a $250 fine for a first offense and $500 for a second offense. Anyone under 18 who uses a cell phone would face a one-year loss of license.

Charging rec dept. fees for use of school facilities

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

When school is out for summer, the buildings don't necessarily go on vacation. With various Recreation Department programs using the schools' facilities for a good portion of the summer, the School Committee is worried proper cleaning cannot be accomplished by the time classes are in session next fall.

With the already stretched cleaning budget and no compensation from the Recreation Department, the School Committee is considering ideas to impose some kind of facilities-use charge to help cover the costs that arise over the summer.

However, the committee is sensitive to the fact the Recreation Department has had its funding significantly cut already, and that most of the children who participate in the programs attend Cohasset schools as well.

"We want to be fair, but we need to cover the cost," said committee member Pat Martin.

"We want to be fair, but we need to cover the cost."
— Pat Martin, School Committee

Issues of concern included the use of schools during inclement weather as well as use of the restrooms. When children come running inside due to the rain, their feet will be muddy and they will track that inside.

"If you use the school as a rainy day backup, cleaning is needed more," said committee member Chartis Tebbetts.

Also, children need to use the restrooms, which in turn will need to be cleaned. When the additional cost of water is added every time they flush or wash their hands, it makes for a potentially hefty bill for the schools.

There is no way to tell how much the schools will be needed during the summer season, which led the committee to discuss starting a "weather contingency" fund. Schools would be paid a fee for the run of the program, and the Recreation Department would get a percentage back, depending on how much the buildings were used. This plan is similar to paying an up-front security deposit on a rental property.

Recreation Department Director Jack Worley said he had spoken with the school department in the past about use of the facilities, but was assured he would be contacted if the current system should change.

Other possibilities for funding options included paying for the use of facilities by the hour or the day at a set rate.

Supt. Edward Malvey said the summer cleaning issue will be an ongoing discussion for the School Committee, which has not yet made a final decision.

Board members sought for ConCom

There are openings on the Conservation Commission, selectmen said Monday. Interested citizens should contact the selectmen's office at 781-383-4105, or stop by the office at Town Hall.

Brush chipping

Residential brush will be accepted at the DPW parking area from 7:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. on the following Saturdays this summer: July 26, Aug. 30, Sept. 27 and Oct. 25.

No trees more than two-inches in diameter and no contractors are allowed.

Septic system is OK'd for 3 Jerusalem Lane

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Phil and Mary Anne Ayers, owners of 3 Jerusalem Lane, were back in Town Hall Monday, but not to talk about zoning. The controversial property, on which the Ayers built an 8,000 square foot home needs a new septic system.

At issue, however, with the neighbors, who want the home downsized so it doesn't block their views, and is not out of character with the neighborhood, is how the health board counts the number of bedrooms. The count determines the size of the septic system.

Jack McCarthy of 278 Jerusalem Road is concerned that the Board of Health is not interpreting the rooms correctly and wonders what the purpose of having a code is, if the interpretation can be disputed so widely. He compared getting a ticket when speeding as a rule that can not be bent, with the rules of the Board, and said, "what are we doing if we don't ticket."

Board of Health Clerk, Peggy Chapman ran the meeting because Chairman Steve Bobo had recused himself due to his house being in close proximity to the Ayers' property. She said the codes have always been open to interpretation and the board does the best they can to be consistent.

When looking at plans, Chapman said it's not the room size that acts as the deciding factor, but the location.

"A hallway is not likely to become a bedroom," she said, noting that a basement could also be refurbished to become a bedroom, but most people won't.

When looking at plans, Peggy Chapman said it's not the room size that acts as the deciding factor, but the location.

When building a new house, all the board can do is take a look at the plans and take into consideration where the room is located, and decide whether it could potentially have another use, which many rooms obviously do not.

"A dressing room off a master bedroom is what it is," she said.

Chapman also said she knows the board can make a decision, be legally challenged and lose, but they do the best they can with the information provided.

Other discussion focused on the prior system in place on the property, which some said did not work. Chapman said the board had no evidence that the original system had failed, and in fact stated that the evidence upon digging it up states just the opposite. Upon inspection, everything appears to have been in working order.

While neighbors spoke of unusually high, lush vegetation and problems with foul odors on the street with the prior system, board member Robin Lawrence said, "Old systems are not on the table," stating whatever had been in effect prior, had no relation to the new system that would be put in.

The board approved the Ayers' new plan for a three-bedroom septic system including a number of variances on the grounds that there was no place else to install it.

The Ayers had planned on participating in a pilot program to test a new kind of septic system by Geo Flow, but the company decided the property would not provide an environment that would work for the system because it does not have natural material.

"We have what we have and there is nothing we can do to change the site," said Phil.

At the end of the meeting, the Ayers' engineer, Neil Murphy thanked the Board saying, "You've restored our faith in the community."

Village people are split on new streetscape plan

"If anyone, including the police, wants to sit in our front picture window and take a look at what goes on, they're welcome to," she said.

Noticing the many U-turns and other traffic violations that occur outside her shop, Straley's major concern is safety, and she is for anything that will help keep people out of harm's way.

Across the street at Cohasset Hardware, the view is much different.

"The people who designed this aren't here every day," said store manager, Phil Rose.

Rose has worked at the hardware store for "many years" and said he sees no reason for the change.

"There hasn't been a pedestrian accident here since I can remember," he said.

Patron Jeff Gray agreed completely with Rose. "I think it's a horrible idea. Anything you do to restrict traffic is a bad idea. It can only have a negative effect," he said.

While the plan insists there will only be one parking space lost to the new construction, Rose and Gray believe the bump-outs will cause traffic problems, especially for the large trucks that deliver supplies to many of the merchants. They think the trucks will have trouble getting around the bump-outs when driving and will also have trouble finding space to pull up to unload.

"This is a main artery of town," said Gray.

"Yeah, and they're giving it cholesterol," quipped Rose.

Christa Hagearty, who is president of Dependable Cleaners as well as a Cohasset resident, believes the proposed changes will only enhance the charming qualities the Village has.

"As long as they keep the parking fairly consistent, I think the changes are going to be positive. I think it's going to have a great look," she said.

She also hopes the changes will draw people to the Village "for more than just one-stop shopping," noting that tourism brings people from all over to visit. She has met many people while on vacation herself, that will ask her where she is from and know exactly where Cohasset is.

"I am amazed at how many people know our little town," she said.

Frank Smith, who has owned Fleming's since 1983, believes today's consumers want the luxury of being able to pull in, buy what they need and pull out. As a merchant, he has witnessed this growing trend in his store and hopes the changes will make the Village accessible for both cars and people. He is excited about the prospect of a revitalization after all the years of talk and said, "this is the closest we have ever gotten."

While construction is going on, Smith said he realizes there is the potential that business could suffer, but believes that, "in order to get better, we have to go through this process."

Looking out onto the sidewalk, Smith said it is "a mess" with potholes that could easily cause someone to trip.

"It's a hazard right now and it's not getting better," he said.

Overall, Smith thinks the project is a great idea and hopes everyone will be able to come to some kind of general consensus.

"We all can't agree on what everything should look like," he said, but maybe through compromise, an agreement can be made.

"As a merchant, I don't want to see business lost," but believes that in the long run, the project will have the opposite effect.

Anne Gabanelle, who has owned French Memories with her husband Jean Jacques for the past 11 years, believes the initial ideas were better because they were much simpler when talk began years ago. "Little by little it's gotten bigger and bigger," she said.

She doesn't see Cohasset as a major tourist area in need of major expansion. "It's not set up for that," she said.

In Europe, Gabanelle said there are very beautiful small villages on the seashore, much like Cohasset. People want to preserve them overseas, and she believes authenticity is important here as well. "Keep it New England," she said.

She thinks most of the merchants believe the plans have grown too much, and for something that is "supposed to be for us in the Village, it's not what we want," she said.

"There is so much that could be done without spending so much money," she said. Using her own shop as an example, she recently bought some colorful tablecloths and has been asked by numerous people what she has done because the shop looks great.

"I can't believe that's all it takes," Gabanelle said.

If flowers and benches, and perhaps some lights were added, she believes the Village will look much better without the cost.

Not only have the plans become too big, Gabanelle thinks they have gone on for too long, and merchants are getting tired of it. "It's been over seven years. It's getting ridiculous," she said.

Regardless of the changes that occur, Straley at Cards and Shards believes everyone in the local shops want the same thing. To have patrons who enjoy the village because they've found something unique. When speaking with tourists who visit her shop Straley said, "I'm talking to people who say just that."

Lower Depot Court bump-outs

While "bump-outs" have become part of the Village Revitalization Project lexicon — it is not clear if they will be included on lower Depot Court by the South Shore Community Center Playground.

Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris insisted cost estimates for the crosswalk with bump-outs — which are wide sidewalk areas at crosswalks that allow pedestrians to see traffic before venturing across the street — be included at lower Depot Court, one of the trickiest crossings in the village.

The Depot Court crossing would add nearly $27,500 to the cost of the project.

The available budget for the scaled down village streetscape project is about $1.87 million including the state PWED and St. Stephen's sidewalk grants and $200,000 in private funds. Estimates for expenditures including design and engineering and construction management, along with village streetscape work come to just $8,000 shy of that figure, not enough for lower Depot Court.

The Depot Court crossing would add nearly $27,500 to the cost of the project.

However, Town Manager Mark Haddad said, "You never know what will happen until a project goes out to bid," meaning current estimates could in fact come back lower than expected.

Haddad also noted that deciding on a final plan will help determine the costs, because knowing what money will be spent on will help prioritize what can and should be done.

In a related matter, Waterfield Design Group, the town design consultants for the project, have recommended against raising the crosswalks to slow down traffic because the raised crosswalks would be awkward for vehicles parked in the adjacent angled parking spaces to back up over.

Selectman Michael Sullivan pushed for the raised crosswalks as a way to "calm traffic" during a walk-around of the village and subsequent selectmen's meetings.

With a vote of 4-1, Selectmen approved Waterfield's draft village plans two weeks ago. The company said it will need to submit 100 percent construction documents by mid-July in order to start construction by Sept. 1. Construction could take anywhere from nine months to a year, taking into consideration unpredictable winter weather, Haddad said.

Haddad also said he was able to get a written extension on the PWED grant until June 2005.

The so-called library sidewalk extension from the village to the old Paul Pratt Library at a cost of $24,000 will fit into the budget because Red Lion Inn owner Gerde Ordelheide has offered to pay for the sidewalk work (about $22,000) in front of the inn, leaving money in the budget for the sidewalk work on the other side of the street to the Pratt building, which is now headquarters of the Cohasset Historical Society.

Village litter is a problem

During a recent walk around the village to look at proposed sidewalks and "bump-outs", selectmen also noticed a lot of litter, in particular cigarettes on the ground.

The board asked Town Manager Mark Haddad to write to business owners, making them aware of the problem and to ask shop owners to take responsibility for the upkeep and cleanliness of their storefronts.

If this doesn't solve the problem, selectmen will consider making cleaner storefronts part of the licensing agreement with the shops.

According to Haddad, the town currently provides trash pickup three or four days a week. It is not within the budget to provide Saturday or Sunday pickup, so he hopes this letter will prompt owners to take the initiative to help keep their own areas clean, especially on the weekends.

In addition to asking store owners to take care of their storefronts, Haddad also wrote a letter to the Cohasset Management Investment Trust, who owns the pocket park between Tedeschi's and French Memories. The park is filled with gravel which ends up on the sidewalk when people walk or bring baby strollers through. The loose gravel could potentially cause someone to slip.

Haddad asked that the owners either consider alternative materials for their courtyard, or find a way to keep the gravel on their property and off the sidewalk, and has not yet received a response.

'Waging peace' during troubled times

Education is goal of group

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

The South Shore Peace Forum is on a "waging peace" campaign.

The goal is to continue to educate its members and their communities about the United States' role in the world and what the group considers to be impediments to peace.

The Forum continues to hold weekly vigils Tuesdays from 11:30 a.m. to noon in front of the downtown Post Office. "We're continuing the vigils because there is no peace yet and it's important to exercise our civil liberties," said Forum member Laura Burns at a recent brainstorming session.

In addition to the vigils, Forum members and participants — from Hingham, Cohasset, Weymouth, Quincy, and other neighboring communities — are planning further forums focusing on "Education for Peace." The group's recent ones on the Iraq crisis were well attended and led to lively discussions between peace activists and those with differing opinions.

"It's important to reach people with differing ideas in order to better understand their points of view," said Hingham resident June Freedman, who attended the session.

To that end, the group plans to host further educational, non-political community discussions featuring guest speakers on such topics as United States Foreign Policy, the United States' relationship to the United Nations, and the Bill of Rights. The last subject would involve a discussion of the potential risks of trading civil liberties for security.

"There needs to be a vision of where we can go to move toward peace," said Forum member Mary Thomas.

In an effort to support the troops, the Forum is considering a petition drive related to the issue of depleted uranium and its impact on United States military personnel, veterans, and civilians in other countries. Munitions using uranium cast off from nuclear power plants pose a serious health hazard to those who are exposed for years afterward. The Forum is also concerned about veterans' benefits in light of recent budget cuts. "We're looking for meaningful ways to support the troops," said Burns.

The group is also considering starting a Giving Circle. Participants would contribute a given amount each month to support a jointly agreed upon charity or cause. This provides an opportunity for participants to make a difference through what Forum members call "venture philanthropy."

Some Forum members will be marching in Hingham's Fourth of July parade in celebration of this year's theme, "Freedom's Trail." Its members will carry "Support the Bill of Rights" and "Work for Peace" signs and large, colorful paper cranes to symbolize their wish for peace.

For further information about the Giving Circle or the South Shore Peace Forum and its activities, call Shirley Brown, 749-9358, e-mail southshore-peace@earthlink.net, or visit southshorepeace.org on the Web.

The Forum was formed in the early 1990s when talk about a possible Gulf War broke out. The group was active throughout that conflict, hosting forums and vigils. The Forum was reactivated last year in response to talk of a potential war with Iraq.

American Legion raffles Vespa motor scooters

The George H. Mealy Post of the American Legion in Cohasset is sponsoring a most unusual raffle for the benefit of its Christine Burke scholarship fund. The lucky winner will drive away with two Vespa ET2 motor scooters or $5,000. The choice is theirs. The Vespa motor scooters have a retail value of $3,295 each. They don't require a special drivers license nor do they need to be registered. The winner may have their choice of any available colors. An anonymous friend of the Legion and Herb Chambers who, along with 25 automobile dealerships, owns Vespa of Boston donated the Vespa motor scooters. Chances for the raffle are $10 each and only 1,000 will be sold. They may be purchased at the Legion post at 98 Summer St. at 781-383-9657. The drawing will be held at the Legion's annual clambake on Sandy Beach on Sept. 6 or 7 (rain date). The Christine Burke scholarships are awarded to deserving high school seniors on the South Shore who are going on to a higher education. In 2003, $14,000 in scholarships were awarded.

New playground takes shape at Community Center

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Amid piles of rocks and mulch, volunteers came together Saturday to begin construction of a new playground at the South Shore Community Center Nursery School. Plastic shovels in hand, children helped adults move sand into wheelbarrows as the outlines of climbing structures began to take shape.

While many volunteers had signed up to help, the first warm weekend of the summer must have drawn people to the beach, leaving the few workers that did show up too busy to stop for a break.

"I was there from Friday at 12 until Sunday at six," said Nursery School Director, Sheila O'Neil.

With a core group of roughly 10 workers, and the addition of helpers who came throughout the weekend, the play structure has been completed, but there are still many pieces to be added, as well as surfacing to be done.

Through money earned by fundraising, the new playground, which will have climbing structures, swings, ride on horses, a small stage for dramatic performances and a sand box with a fitted cover, is sure to spark the imaginations of both children attending the nursery school and those residents who come to play during after-school hours.

Originally setting a fundraising goal of $50,000, the school raised $65,000 to cover the many costs involved. Through brick sales, a silent auction and other fundraisers, the needs were more than met.

With such an increase in funding, O'Neil said the plans were dramatically changed to include among other things, the addition of a sailboat for children to play on, the new "wood carpet" surfacing, and the changing of the original chosen structure which was made of wood, to one made of recycled plastic. O'Neil said plastic is thought to be more safe, as wood structures can contain arsenic, making plastic a more healthy alternative.

Of much help to the cause are local residents, Hap Pompeo, who provided all the engineering, Bob Driscoll, who will be building the stage, Joe Sestito who will help with the landscaping once the playground is finished, and Brendan St. John, who will be laying the brick walkway as a final step in the project. Many other families donated materials and time to the cause and their help is much appreciated.

The school began to look into building a new playground last fall, because the old one was outdated and needed to be brought up to code. The area was also prone to flooding and freezing. It is hoped the new playground will be finished within a month.

There will be more volunteer opportunities as the playground continues to take shape, including the spreading of ground cover and the painting of a trike path. There will also be a grand opening ribbon cutting ceremony for the playground this September.

Cohasset Post 118 drops twin bill to fall into last place

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Scott Arnold figured there'd be days like this. It's just his bad luck one of those days fell with a doubleheader on the schedule.

The Cohasset Post 118 baseball team fell to 2-9 on the season, dropping lopsided decisions on Sunday to Weymouth and Stoughton.

"I tell you, I really do like the long term picture. That's the future we're seeing out there right now, and the future looks pretty good, especially the pitching."
Post 118 Legion coach Scott Arnold

"I'm not even sure what the scores were," said Arnold, the 10th year Post 118 coach. "They were just ugly games where not a lot went right. Those were both teams I think we could have beaten if we played to our potential as a team, but we weren't even close to that."

The game with Stoughton (4-6-1) was originally scheduled for June 19, but was rained out, and thus moved to Sunday afternoon.

Post 118 was missing several key players for both games on Sunday, a few playing in AAU Tournaments and a few others working. Still, coach Arnold noted, things were just not clicking for his team right now.

"The bats have been pretty silent lately regardless of

CHS girls tennis senior class provided invaluable intangibles in state title run

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

Teammates on a football team are brothers. Teammates on a field hockey team are sisters. Team chemistry is so vital to sports such as these because of how essential team components like communication and field vision are.

But why, one might ask, would chemistry be important on a more individual-based sport, team tennis? One needs only to look at the 24-0 State Championship season turned in by the 2003 girls tennis team, and how that close-knit group rooted each other on to the greatest single season the tennis program in Cohasset has ever had.

Behind every team with such a tremendous amount of camaraderie, there is always great leadership. For this Lady Skippers team, the leadership was provided by senior captain starters Lindsay Grossman, Julie Shea, Taylor O'Brien and Molly Flanagan.

"It has been a particularly tight group this year," said 12th year coach Gigi Meehan, "and [the seniors] all did so much for me."

Meehan also mentioned the startlingly high number of freshmen on this year's team, indicating a difficulty in establishing team sistership. However, she noted, "all the upperclassmen adopted a freshman and took them into the fold."

Lindsay Grossman spent the majority of her year at second singles, graciously stepping into the role when sophomore sensation Elizabeth Stone came up the ranks. Grossman was willing to play (and play extraordinary tennis) at either first or second singles. For her, it was always a matter of what was best for the team.

Stone was sidelined with a sprained ankle the final two weeks of the regular season, precisely the time when Meehan had scheduled the team's toughest matches as a gear-up for the postseason. Grossman was bumped up to first singles and proved her leadership skills through both her tennis skills and her off-court demeanor.

All-Scholastic girls track team

Cohasset's Buckley, Silvia, 4x800 relay team named among area's elite

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

Several of the young women you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement, among them Cohasset high senior captain La'Raine Langford and junior Nicole Whitney.

However, in the end, we limited ourselves to a team of just 15 individuals and three relay squads, and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top female tracksters in Marinerland for this honor:

Cohasset junior Jenn Buckley (#396) qualified for states in two solo events and as part of CHS's 4x800 relay team, making her a no-brainer choice for her second consecutive Mariner All-Scholastic track team.

Jenn Buckley - Junior (Capt.)
Mile/Javelin - Cohasset

Jenn Buckley

The junior captain qualified for states in two solo events and as part of the 4x800 relay team...finished fifth in the mile at the state Class D meet, running a season best 5:29.69. Unfortunately, this was one spot short of qualifying for the All-State meet...took eighth in javelin at the Class D meet with a throw of 100-feet-9-inches...was able to advance to All-States along with the 4x800 team, though, as the Cohasset quartet took third at the Class D meet and then a solid 16th at All-States, running a season best 10:03.99... was one of the Lady Skippers unquestioned team leaders, as well as their most accomplished and versatile athlete...in fact, coach Al LaFontain noted her off-track leadership was as important to the team as her on-track heroics...South Shore League All-Star...Jenn is now a three-time Mariner All-Scholastic selection (also named '02 track team and '02 soccer team)... had a statistical hand in nearly half of the Lady Skippers goals this past fall, scoring 12 and assisting on four...Cohasset coach Al LaFontain: "Jenn is just a great athlete, obviously, but she's also a total leader. She really is committed to the team effort. She spends a lot of time working with her

A belated spring cleaning

EXTRA POINTS
MIKE SPELLMAN

It's never too late to perform a touch of spring cleaning.

I figure it's high time I clear a lot of these yellow stickies off my computer monitor, mainly the ones I've been jotting random thoughts and observations on over the last several months.

Where to start...

It says here Danny Ainge was a good hire as new Chief of Basketball Operations (CBO) for the Boston Celtics. Loved him as a player and a coach. And, in the limited dealings I had with him covering the Celtics way back when, I liked what I saw from the person too. Though it's far too early to say anything definitive regarding his skill as an evaluator of basketball talent, I'd be willing to bet he does a good job and sticks around for a good, long while.

One thing there's no denying, at least in my mind: Danny can't do any worse than his predecessors. Despite the best efforts of Chris Wallace to distance himself from Rick Pitino during the last two and a half seasons, it became crystal clear that they were birds of a feather. Pitino and Wallace are swans...or ostriches...or whatever kind of bird you envision looking down its bill at the rest of its avian brethren.

The height of arrogance these two birds displayed in the moves they made during their tenures, collective and respective, simply defied all bounds.

We should have known real quick this franchise was in big trouble when Ricky and Chris relinquished rights to Rick Fox, David Wesley (two guys still enjoying extremely fruitful careers) and five, that's right, count 'em, five other players for Travis Knight. That's right: Travis Knight!

Everyone else— including the Lakers, who'd used something like the 27th draft pick on Knight the year before—saw a skinny 6-11 kid with pretty good hoop skills but not much in the way of intestinal fortitude, toughness or athletic ability. Ricky and Chris figured they saw something no one else did, or could get something out of him no one else could. Even they had to admit what a horrible choice this was less than a year later when they dumped Travis for the NBA version of a bag of day old donuts.

It wouldn't have been so bad if Ricky and Chris had learned from their mistakes, or at least been humbled just a smidgen. Naturally, they didn't even skip a beat.

College coaches and NBA scouts said Chauncey Billups would never be a point guard. Ricky and Chris thought otherwise, then traded him away a year later when they found out the majority position was again dead on for about 30 cents on the dollar of what a sixth overall draft pick should draw.

Kenny Anderson had worn out his welcome in New Jersey, Charlotte and Portland. When he refused to report to Toronto, teammates, and helping them through things."

Mary Silvia - Cohasset
800 - Sophomore

Mary Silvia

Silvia wrapped up her sensational solo campaign in style, racing to a ninth place finish in the 800 at All-States, tying her personal best time of 2:22.75, which is now the Cohasset High record…took second at the state Class D meet in the 800 a week earlier (2:24.34)…also part of 4x800 relay team that took third at Class D and 16th at All-States, the team shaving a remarkable 15 seconds of its personal best time at that latter event to finish 10:03.99…South Shore League All-Star…also plays soccer for Cohasset High and manages the CHS wrestling team…currently playing in a summer soccer league…Honor Roll student…Cohasset coach Al LaFontain: "Mary is one of those athletes who has done everything we've asked of her this year, and she's done it all extremely well. She has a real passion for running that you don't often see. When you gave her advice, she just did it without thinking about it. She was just kind of a natural at picking things up."

Christine Fay - Senior (Capt.)
Long jump - Marshfield

Christine Fay

Track was truly a labor of love for this OCL All-star…A five-year mulit-event workhorse on the MHS team, the sprinter/jumper battled tendentious and back injuries throughout her career, but ended it with a bang this season…Fay was third in the long jump at the State Class B Meet (16'8") and second to only Hubbard at the Old Colony League Championships (16' 10 3/4"), a personal best…Also ran 12.9 in the 100-meters this season, jumps 5' in the high jump, and ran a leg on Marshfield's record-setting 4x100-meter relay (49.77)…Was named to the Atlantic Coast League "Super Six" team her sophomore season…Went to New Englands with the 4x200 indoor team last winter…Fay plans to attend Northeastern University to study Business Management and Marketing. Marshfield coach Larry Nangle: "She had ankle tendentious and basically ran right through it. She kept working at the long jump and really had a good year."

Ashley Hubbard - Junior
400/LJ - Marshfield

No question here…One year after dominating the 200-meter scene, Hubbard made the jump to the 400 and did the same… The junior won the All-State 400 meter title this spring with a personal best 55.70…She went on to take second at the New Englands (56.36) and anchored home Marsh-field's 4x400 relay, which took seventh… Also won the 400 at State Class B Meet (56.99) and Old Colony League Championships… Also a talented jumper, Hubbard won the long jump at the OCL's (17' 4 1/2"), Class B's (17'0"), and South Shore Principal's (17'2")…There, she also won the 200-meters in a PR time of 24.9 and was named Outstanding Female Athlete…The OCL All-star won the 300-meter indoor title and was 10th in the 400-meters at the indoor Nationals…Hubbard also plays field hockey at MHS and is already determined to run track in college. Marshfield coach Larry Nangle: "She's had an unbelievable year. She's very determined and is like most track runners who have a desire to win. Everything she's done over the last couple of years has been accomplished through hard work and determination. It's scary to think that she's only a junior."

Ashley Hubbard

100 - Rockland

Melissa Murphy

Another highly recognizable sprinter on the South Shore, Murphy capped her track career at the New England Championships, finishing 11th in the 100-meters…Murphy won the South Shore Principal's Meet for the second-straight year (12.5) and captured her third-straight Patriot League Championship title in the event…Murphy won the 100 at the State Class C Meet (12.67) and finished a tight fourth at All-States…Also a talented jumper, Murphy went perfect in PL in the long and triple jumps for three years, and was never beaten in the 100 meters…A three-sport athlete at RHS, Murphy achieved a milestone this winter, scoring her 1,000 career point, and led the cheering squad to its second-straight Div. 3 state title…Murphy plans to attend the University of New Hampshire where she will continue her running career and study to become a teacher. Rockland coach Peter Woodward: "It's been a great year for Melissa. She's really progressed beautifully in all of her events throughout the season and it's mainly due to the fact that she was willing to put in the extra time in the off-season."

800 - Rockland

Coming off an impressive indoor season in the 1,000 meters, Christoforo capped her RHS career with a solid outdoor season in the 800 meters…A miler last year, Christoforo won the 800 at the Patriot League Championships and at the State Class C Meet, running a PR time of 2:20.82… The National Honor Society president, Christoforo elected to attend her RHS graduation, instead of competing at the All-State Championships…A three-sport runner at RHS (cross country, indoor and outdoor track) and multiple PL All-star is a major loss to the program… Christoforo plans to attend Colgate University and continue her running career.

Nicole Christoforo

Laura Goggin - Senior Javelin - Rockland

Laura Goggin

Surprised even herself this season in the javelin, capturing the State Class C title in the event with a personal best throw of 114'6"…Goggin was third in the event at the Patriot League Championships (109'3"), behind rival Rachel Lincoln of Hingham…Her Class victory was a bit of revenge, as Lincoln was third…Goggin went on to competed at the All-State Championships…Just a two-year track athlete, Goggin is making her first appearance on the track All-Scholastic team…She is better known for her basketball talents and is a two-time hoop All-Scholastic…Goggin plans to attend college.

Rachel Lincoln - Junior
Javelin - Hingham

This Patriot League All-star dominated the javelin competition for much of the season, going unbeaten in dual-meets and winning the PL Championship (113'10")…The senior also won the event at the South Shore Principal's with an HHS record-breaking throw of 116'7"… Lincoln finished third at the State Class C Meet (113'7"), falling victim to personal best throws from PL rivals Laura Goggin (of Rockland) and Hilary Birch (of Scituate)…Lincoln went on to compete at the All-State Championships…Just a junior, Lincoln is one of the top performers returning to Hingham's field next season.

Rachel Lincoln

Jocelyn Traina - Freshman
Jumps - Hingham

Jocelyn Traina

A newcomer to the Harborwomen squad this season, Traina made her impact felt loudly… The freshman competed in several events for Hingham, but excelled mostly in the jumps…Traina won the triple jump (33'9") at the Patriot League Championships, edging rival Melissa Murphy of Rockland…She was second to Murphy in the 100-meters (13.0)…Traina took fourth in the long jump (15' 10 1/4") at the State Class C Meet, advancing her to the All-State Championships…Traina was sixth in the long jump at the South Shore Principal's (16'1") and fifth in the 100 (12.9)…A PL All-star this season, Traina also runs cross country and indoor track at HHS.

Ashley Mills - Sophomore
Discus - Hingham

An interracial part of the Harborwomen field team, Mills won the discus at the Patriot League Championships with a toss of 101'5"…Went on to the State Class C Meet and finished third there with a throw of 103'8", qualifying her for the All-State Championships…Mills also threw the shot put for Hingham, which won the PL Meet with 137.5 points…The sophomore improved throughout the year, throwing in the low 90's before consistently throwing in the 100's at the end of the season…Just a sophomore, Mills will be among the top performers returning to the field next season.

Becca MacDonald - Freshman
Mile - Weymouth

Becca MacDonald

Already a two-year runner for Weymouth, MacDonald capped a stellar spring campaign at the All-State Championships…The freshman Bay State Carey All-star was second at the State Class A Meet, running a personal best time of 5:21.53…She was seeded 5th in the meet at 5:31…Indoors, MacDonald was fourth at the State Class A's (5:26) and went to All-States…A cross country All-Scholastic last fall, MacDonald won her second-straight State Coaches' Invitational Div. 1 freshman race…She is a two-time BSC All-star in cross country…Just a freshman, MacDonald still has a lot of running to do at WHS.

Hillary Birch - Senior Javelin - Scituate

Hillary Birch

The senior saved the best throw of her distinguished 4-year career for the end, as she threw the javelin a career best 115-feet-7-inches at the All-State track meet, good for sixth place overall and a trip to the New England Track and Field championships…finished second at the state Class C championships with a throw of 114-04…a four year track standout for the Sailors, both indoor and out…missed class meet last year due to confusion over time her event went off… also an avid snow boarder…interested in journalism…had grade point average of 3.0…will enter Suffolk University this fall and study either communications or a pre-law curriculum… Scituate coach Dave Jewett: "After having a disappointing end to the regular season with a loss at the Patriot League Championship, Hillary has come on strong, proving to be the best in her event on the South Shore. I'm really proud of her. When the pressure was on, she came on like I knew she could."

Hannah Rapalee - Sophomore
800 meters - Silver Lake

Hannah qualified for her third consecutive New England track and field championships this spring by taking first in the 800 at the state Class A meet and third at the All-State meet…finished 10th at New England's, two spots lower than she finished last spring, though her time of 2:18.74 was an improvement…set a new personal best in the 800 at All-States (2:17.35)…finished fourth in the 1,000 at this winter's indoor New England championships with a personal best time of 2:57.31…undisputed 800-meter champ in the Old Colony League, as she finished first in all duel meets and won at the OCL championship meet…also ran the mile and 400 from time to time, and competed in the long jump…OCL all-star… was a member of the 4x400 relay team that finished seventh at the Class A meet, two spots shy of qualifying for All-States…also a standout soccer player who made the SL varsity starting lineup as a freshman and led the team in scoring this past fall…plays soccer year round as a member of the South Shore Select club team…Silver Lake coach Joe Darche: "She's very focussed for her age, so it really looks like she has a bright future. I'm really pleased with the way Hannah progressed this season. I think she puts lot pressure on her self, and some of it is self imposed. But she really thrives under pressure."

Hannah Rapalee

Felicia Hawthorne - Senior (Capt.)
Long Jump - Norwell

Felicia Hawthorne

A sensational year round track performer for Norwell High since her freshman year… qualified for the state Class D meet in both the long jump and high jump…took 10th in the high jump (4-feet-10-inches), as she was unable to match her season best leap of 5-feet, which would have qualified her for the All-State meet…finished 12th in the high jump with a leap of 14-07.75. Again, her season best leap (15-11) would have been good enough to qualify her for All-States…Felicia also had impressive personal bests of 33-6 in the triple jump and 52.3 seconds in the 300-meter hurdles…top point producer for the Lady Clippers in bot the indoor and outdoor track seasons…Norwell coach Chuck Martin feels Felicia could be a very good hurdle racer at the next level… South Shore League All-Star… has runs track year round at NHS since her freshman year (Cross country in the fall, indoor track in the winter)…also a Mariner All-Scholastic for cross country this past fall…will attend Clemson University in the Fall, and will try to make that school's Div. 1 track program as a walk-on… will carry a math/biology double major and has an eye toward becoming a Pediatrician…Norwell coach Chuck Martin: "Felicia has been

Triple Jump - Braintree

Jill Sullivan

Jill capped a strong 4-year track career by making it to the finals in the triple jump competition at the state Class A meet with a best ever triple jump of 33-feet-11-3/4-inches, good for an impressive eighth place in an extremely strong field...also competed in the long jump and 100-meter hurdles for the Lady Wamps, running a personal best 17.3 this spring...Jill improved in the triple jump by over 2-feet over the course of the season...had a habit of winning the triple jump on her last of three leaps...her spring season highlight was upsetting league best Linda Kropp (Framingham) in due' meet competition by 2-inches on her last jump...Jill also knocked Kropp out of the finals in the class A meet...Bay State Conference All-Star... also won the Braintree indoor and outdoor trophy for girls track...ran indoor and outdoor track in her last two years of high school...played B.H.S. soccer as a freshman and sophomore...will be continuing her education at the University of Miami, and intends to major in Biology with an eye toward studying to become a Veterinarian...Braintree coach Bob Chute: "If I had to pick someone in a particular event to win the meet for Braintree, it would be Jill Sullivan. Jill has no fear and is one of the best clutch performers I have ever coached. She's a true competitor."

Joanne Gueverra - junior
Ashley Hubbard - junior

Thrown together before the State Class B Meet, this quartet took its talents all the way to the New England Championships and finished seventh...The group broke the MHS record in the event twice this season, running 4:07.65 at the State Class B Meet (seeded at 4:18) and 4:02.68 at All-States and finished third both times...All four girls ran personal best times each week, Catarius, Keneally, and Gueverra running just over .60, with state 400-meter champ Hubbard anchoring it home...All four girls will return to the track next season. Marshfield coach Larry Nangle: "They all improved drastically. Each week they ran better and I'm amazed at what they were able to do. They extended their season three weeks. They worked hard and I'm very happy for them."

Jenn Buckley - Junior
Nicole Whitney- Junior
Mary Silvia- Sophomore
Lisa Musto- Freshman

This team of two juniors , a sophomore and a freshman took third at the state Class D meet and then 16th at the All-State meet, shaving a remarkable 15 seconds of its personal best time at that latter event to finish 10:03.99...this time also shattered the Cohasset High school record...that mark should not last long, however, as all four girls return next spring...two of the squad's members, Silvia and Buckley, were also named All-Scholastics for their solo efforts this spring...Al LaFountain: "This team really peaked at the end of the season, and I'm looking forward to seeing what they can do with another year of experience. There was a good, friendly rivalry between those four girls. They ran the track together and none of them ever wanted to finish last in those races."

Phillstros top Devil Jays in youth softball all-star game

What a game! The "Devil Jays", made up of all-star Devil Rays and all-star Blue Jays, played the "Phillstros", made up of all-star Phillies and all-star Astros.

There were so many talented softball players in the league, it was hard to choose the all-stars. All of the players displayed fine skills and sportswomanship. At the end, the Phillstros had more runs, but all were winners. Visors off to the 2003 Little League softball all-stars.

Before the all-star game, there was a hitting contest. First place went to Sally Meehan. Second place went to Rachel McMorris, and third went to Kristin Monaco.

who's been swinging them," assessed Arnold, "and we've had to move some guys around defensively to replace guys who haven't been there, and that's resulted in a few mistakes. It's kind of snowballed a little bit"

The two losses, coupled with a 6-3 loss to Milton on Friday and then a 5-3 loss to Quincy on Monday, dropped Post 118 to 2-10 on the season and into last place in Zone 6.

Scituate High junior-to-be Jack O'Leary is one of the few Post 118ers who has swung a hot bat of late.

One of the few Cohasset highlights in the Milton loss was three strong innings of relief pitching from lefthander Brandon Stella. The Scituate High junior was brought in to work his way out of a no-out, bases loaded jam and surrendered just two runs doing so. He then kept Milton off the board in the next two innings to keep his team in the game.

In the second loss Sunday, Weymouth's Parker Harrington went the distance on the mound, striking out 11.

Centerfielder Chris McDonough went 5-for-5 at the plate to pace the attack for second place Weymouth (7-3-1), while veteran shortstop Mike Gulinello had two hits for Post 118.

In the 6-3 loss to Milton on the road Friday, Post 118's frustrations mounted when it lost key outfielder and middle of the order slugger Eric Dmohowski early on when he was hit on the head on a pitch from his friend and B.C. High teammate. Dmohowski missed both games on Sunday, as he left for college orientation to St. Joseph's University on Saturday.

Playing well on Sunday for Post 118 was Cohasset High junior-to-be Tim Pilczak, the team's number three catcher who was called into duty with the top two backstops absent.

"Tim did a great job back there, especially considering how little time he's had at catcher recently," said Arnold. "He didn't do anything back there to hurt us. He really bailed us out."

With veteran Alex Knight out of the lineup due to injury, Scituate High junior-to-be Mike Barba has stepped in and done a solid job at second base, according to coach Arnold. Ditto for Xaverian junior-to-be Ben Murphy in left field in place of Ted Straughn, who has been playing in an AAU tourney for the last several days.

Meanwhile, Jack O'Leary continues to wield the hottest bat on the team. The Scituate High junior-to-be went 4-for-7 on Sunday and broke up a no-hit bid on Monday in the fifth inning of Post 118's 5-3 loss to Quincy.

"The kids are carrying us right now," said Arnold, taking note of all the contributions from underclassmen. "We've got veterans who aren't around right now for one reason or another, and the kids are getting their chances and making the most of them.

"I tell you, I really do like the long term picture. That's the future we're seeing out there right now, and the future looks pretty good, especially the pitching."

Thayer High juniors-to-be Greg Malley and Kevin Signorelli have both pitched well in the last week. Malley has both of the team's wins and Signorelli went the distance in Monday's loss. Quincy did most of the damage early against him, with the help of a few errors, but then settled down to keep his team in the game.

"You look a year or two down the road with Malley and Signorelli and O'Leary, and a few others, and we've got the makings for a really strong pitching staff," said Arnold.

Of course, the veteran Post 118 coach knew this would be something of a rebuilding year, as he lost several key players from last year's team that reached the second round of the state tourney. He was quick to point out, though, that team morale remained high with nine games to go.

"We've got a lot of younger players out there right now who are gaining some great experience, and they're holding their heads high," reported Carroll. "Yeah, we've taken our lumps as a team a little bit, but these guys are showing up ready to play."

Emilie Sullivan and Corey Evans, who made up the second doubles team that played such a huge part in the team's state championship run this spring, are just two of the underclassmen who clearly benefited from the leadership provided by a strong senior core.

Class Act

"The turning point of the season was when Liz went down," admitted Meehan. "They all pulled together, and it showed that everyone was able to play at a higher position."

(For those who were not following the team at the time, the team went 4-0 against Notre Dame, Norwell, Hingham, and Norwell again, all playoff teams, without their top player.)

Julie Shea has been a leader for the team throughout all her years with the program. She has been an all-star doubles player for three years now, able to play terrific despite three different partners. With junior Courtney Caron, the Lady Skippers could always count on the first doubles as a point for the Cohasset side, regardless of who they played.

The only loss Shea suffered this year was in the State semi-final match against Manchester-Essex, when she and Caron dropped a three-setter to Kara and Marni Powers. Shea and Caron were the only ones who even won a set off the Powers twins during the Gemini's run of 70 straight wins.

O'Brien and Flanagan, although not regulars in the starting line-up, were valuable contributors in doubles, consistently scoring points in league play. The captains were vital to the success of the team, further proof that the leadership of this team extended beyond the court.

It's never easy to live up to a state title season. Although the 2004 edition of this squad will need to replace just two starters, it will be losing a grade that contributed immeasurable intangibles to an amazing season.

HoopCamp 2003

The Cohasset Recreation Department in conjunction with the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club will sponsor a summer Basketball camp, under the direction of Ron Ford.

NBA GMs wouldn't even take calls from his agent. Rick and Chris not only took the call, they gave up on Billups (now a very solid NBA shooting guard) to get him.

College scouts said Jerome Moiso had talent but no heart. Ricky and Chris thought otherwise. They thought they'd be the ones to bring it all out of Jerome. Didn't take them long to discover that royal faux pas either.

So Ricky finally realized during the dog days of winter two and a half years ago that he could not win here given the situation he'd created almost entirely on his own (not that he'd ever admit to that).

So Chris somehow convinces the powers that be that he never had the final say on any of those moves. He then pulls off a trade that makes every other move he and Ricky had made together look, by comparison, like another Joe Barry Carroll for Robert Parish and Kevin McHale swiping.

The Vin Baker trade appeared merely a tragedy when it was first perpetrated. It took on even greater levels of egregiousness once we saw Vin on the floor. Once we learned it was common knowledge around the NBA even before the trade that Vin had a "serious drinking problem," a mere firing seemed inadequate for Chris— indeed, a firing squad would've been a more satisfactory choice in many of our minds.

One could almost imagine Chris saying, yet again, that he'd be the one that transformed Vin, not only as a basketball player, but as a person. Wonder if the Celtics GM thought he could touch Vin's abdomen and heal his liver too.

Fortunately, that's the ex-Celtics GM now.

Please don't do it, Theo. Eschew the modus operandi established by Lou Gorman and Dan Duquette: don't trade top prospects for quick fixes.

I used to buy the company line about damning the future if there were real possibilities now. But, come on, what has that approach gotten us over the last 15 or so years? No championships. No pennants. Lots of regret. Lots of heartache. We don't have any of the players we got in exchange for Jeff Bagwell, Jeff Suppan or Tony Armas, Jr, to name just a few. All three would look pretty good in a Red Sox uniform right now.

The Angels, Mariners, Twins and Blue Jays are showing the rest of the MLB how to do things: be patient with prospects, trade for good team guys like David Ortiz, Kevin Millar and Bill Mueller, and hang onto your top prospects. It makes financial sense, and it makes baseball sense.

If most of the Sox scouts are saying Casey Fossum, Freddy Sanchez, Kelly Shoppach, Hanley Ramirez and Kevin Youkilis have long term possibilities, hang on to them. If the pervasive thought is any one of these guys is a secondary prospect, by all means trade him if you think it can help the team.

At the very least: let's hope Theo doesn't panic. Let's hope he waits until Casey Fossum, Chad Fox and Robert Person come back. Let's also hope he waits to see what Ryan Rupe does with a few more starts, and if Alan Embree, Mike Timlin and Brandon Lyon continue to perform the way they have in relatively set roles over the last few weeks.

Pedro has looked good in his first two starts back from the DL and Derek Lowe has had four quality starts in his last five. If these two are right, the Sox top three match up pretty evenly with what their main competition can throw at them.

I know this goes against popular opinion, but the feeling here is the addition of Byung-Hyun Kim might well be the last piece of the puzzle the Sox needed. Put BK in a regular role—closer or starter—and all the other pieces might well begin falling into place.

It was a clean sweep for Marinerland lacrosse coaches. Congratulations to Andrew Curran, Nate Balboni and Kevin Orcutt, all of whom were deservedly named "Lacrosse Coaches of the Year" by the Boston Globe this week, Div. 1, Div. 2 and Div. 3, respectively.

Curran led his Braintree High team to a 16-3 season, a Bay State League championship and into the semifinals of the Div. 1 state championship semifinals, where the Wamps fell to eventual state champ Beverly. All this in just the third year for the program in varsity play.

Ba!boni, in his first year as head coach at Marshfield, took a team that hadn't even qualified for the state tourney a year ago all the way to the Div. 2 Eastern Mass championship final. The Rams finished with an overall record of 17-4.

Cohasset's Straughn to play with SSBC's Seadogs in Select Six 2003 Tourney

HINGHAM, Mass. - The South Shore Baseball Club's 16-and-Under Seadogs/AAU traveling team will host the 4th annual "Select Six 2003" tournament July 2-6 at Strong Field in East Bridgewater. Cohasset's Ted Straughn is one of 17 top local players chosen for the Seadogs.

The five incoming clubs are 2-time defending champion East Cobb Astros (Georgia), the top youth baseball program in the country according to Baseball America, Team Connecticut Bombers (Meridian), Maryland Outlaws, Virginia Junior Bombers, and Long Island Tigers (New York).

Fifteen players from teams that participated in the 2001 Select Six are today playing Division 1 college baseball or in the minor leagues. Nineteen Select Six alumni players are expected to be playing Div. 1 or pro ball this season. More than 20 players from last year's tourney, including a half-dozen potential first-round draft picks, are projected as Div. 1 or pro prospects next year.

The "Select Six 2003" features round robin action Wednesday through Saturday, July 2-6, with games played at 9 a.m., 12 noon, 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. Pairings for Sunday's championship round will be based on series results with the No. 5 & No. 6 seeds starting at 9 a.m., followed by the championship game at noon with the top two seeds, and the "Bronze" game at 3 p.m. pitting the No. 3 & No. 4 seeded clubs.

The Seadogs program is part of the South Shore Baseball Club, which been a member of the Massachusetts Association of the Amateur Athletic Union since 1994. The South Shore Baseball Club is a year round, full service club and training facility for baseball and softball players (boys and girls), ages five and older, in Hingham. For more information about SSBC or the Seadogs call 1.888.749.6466/781.749.6466 or visit its Web site at www.ssbc.com.

Police make drug arrest

Police arrested a 18-year-old Randolph man on marijuana charges in the wee hours of last Friday morning.

Kirwin Mikell was charged with possession of marijuana with intent to distribute and being a minor in possession of alcohol.

While on patrol, Officer Jeffrey Treanor observed a white male exit a black Nissan and approach the Exxon Station at the corner of Beechwood Street and Rte. 3A at about 1 a.m. The station was closed and in darkness.

Treanor investigated further, approached the vehicle and subsequently arrested the four occupants.

Laura Kelly, 17, of Randolph; Andrew Benefit, 17, of Randolph and Tania Melenduz, 18, of Randolph were charged with being minors in possession of liquor after Treanor and back-up officers Francis Yannizzi and David Cogill discovered a quantity of alcohol in the car and trunk.

Treanor also observed several plastic baggies enclosed in larger baggies containing a green leafy vegetable matter believed to be marijuana. None of the teens were able to make bail or call for money, so they spent the night in jail and were arraigned later Friday morning in Quincy District Court.

IT'S HAPPENING

Monoprint workshop

Robert Siegelman, art instructor at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts Boston, the Art New England school at Bennington College, Tufts University and the Eliot School in Jamaica Plain, will conduct an intensive workshop exploring printmaking at the South Shore Art Center. While many printmaking classes focus on technical development, this class, for artists of all ability levels, will focus on content and image development within one's work. Students will create easily produced monoprints and monotypes, and will have the opportunity to work independently while receiving individual attention and support. Demonstrations of various techniques will be given, as well as projects designed to push creative growth and process. Experimentation is encouraged, while regular critiques and discussions will enliven the classes.

Siegelman's exhibition experience includes the Gallery NAGA, Boston, The Mills Gallery in Boston, The Fitchburg Art Museum and the Cambridge Art Association's National Prize Show.

The workshop meets Friday, Aug. 1 through Sunday Aug. 3, from 10 a.m.- 4 p.m., the cost is $275 ($250 for members of the South Shore Art Center). For more information visit www.ssac.org or to register call 781-383-2787.

Michigan carillonneur

The second program in the 79th season of Summer Carillon Recitals on the Cohasset Carillon will be given Sunday evening, July 6, by Julianne Vanden Wyngaard, carillonneur of Grand Valley State University, Mich. Vanden Wyngaard's program will include music originally composed for carillon, as well as arrangements and transcriptions of familiar music. The 57-bell instrument is located in the tower of St. Stephen Episcopal Church overlooking the Cohasset Common.

The hour-long recital begins at 6 p.m. and is free of charge. It will take place regardless of weather conditions, and in case of rain, the bells may be heard from your parked cars. Printed programs, schedules and brochures will be distributed on the Cohasset Common and will also be available in a stand by the courtyard of St. Stephen Church on Highland Avenue extension. Listeners are invited to bring chairs, blankets and picnics to the common or the church courtyard.

Further information may be obtained by calling St. Stephen's Church, 781-383-1083; the Church Carillonneur, Sally Slade Warner, 978-475-2599; or the Assistant Carillonneur, Mary Kennedy, 781-383-9599.

Band concerts at Nantasket Beach

"Four Guys in Tuxes" will return to the Bernie King Pavilion at Nantasket Beach to kick-off the summer band concert and swing dance series. The annual event was interrupted last year because of the delayed rebuilding of the site, according to a recent announcement from the Nantasket Beach Merchants Association's longtime president and Hull Selectman, Leonard Hersch, who first organized the popular series in the 1970s.

The group will appear on Sunday, July 6 at 2 p.m. as a free, community service at what has become their traditional holiday-weekend event in Hull.

While all efforts are being made to have the M.D.C.'s facility open and ready for this popular event, according to state officials, additional concert dates are pending the final completion of the site.

Garage dance

Are you feeling hot, hot, hot in the summer sun? Cool off at a dance at the Garage, Friday, July 11, from 7-10 p.m. This dance is for current fifth-graders who will be attending sixth grade this fall and all above grades. The door charge is $5 per person and snacks and refreshments will be sold as well.

Garage hours

During summer vacation, the Garage will be open the following days/times:

Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, 3 to 7 p.m.; Fridays, 4 to 10 p.m.

Every first and third Saturdays, 5 to 10 p.m.

The Garage will not be open Friday, July 4, or Saturday, July 5.

'Cinderella' signups

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct Music Circus registration for "Cinderella" Tuesday, July 8, from 9 a.m.-noon and again from 5 -7 p.m. at the Recreation office at Town Hall for children in the Playground Program.

Music Circus registrations for children involved in the Playground Program will be held every Tuesday at the Recreation office from 9 a.m.-noon and from 5-7 p.m. at the Recreation office at Town Hall.

"Cinderella" will be held at the Music Circus, July 24. Children will be walked down from Playground with their counselors.

Band concerts

During the past 11 seasons, concert funding has been provided through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc.

Each June the Board of Directors of the South Shore Music Circus takes under consideration the request of the Recreation Commission, for concert funding, hence, certainty of concert are not absolute until mid-June, each season. The SSMC donations are matched by a grant from the American federation of Musicians, N.Y.C.

Based upon continued SSMC funding, the schedule for the 2003 season is as follows:

Tuesday, July 15, 7:30 p.m. Town Common

Performances will be by the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Mr. Richard P. Whitmarsh. Concerts are held on the Cohasset Common, free of charge and the public is cordially invited. It is a good idea to bring either lawn chairs or blankets to sit on, and from time to time, insect repellent is a good item to have available. You may call the Recreation office at 383-4109 to check on the status of concerts should you be in doubt as to weather conditions.

Buttonwood hosts cookbook author

Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset will host cookbook author Lora Brody, "The Cape Cod Table" (Chronicle Books, $35) on Thurs., July 10, from 7-9 p.m. Topher Gudmand, manager, at Cohasset Plaza Liquors, 380 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., will join Brody and will speak about wines and pairing wines with recipes featured in Brody's book. Brody will bring an appetizer that she created, Smoked Salmon Cheesecake, which was featured by Craig Clairborne in the New York Times. Gudmand will bring wine for a tasting.

"The Cape Cod Table" is filled with recipes and pictures of the Cape and the food. The recipes begin with breakfast and continue with dishes for every meal of the day — lunch, dinner, cocktails and dessert. Brody's recipes also address the different types of Cape days. Chowders for the cold, rainy day, clambakes for hot sunny day and elegant yet simple meals for company.

Brody is a best-selling author with 22 books to her credit, including "The Kitchen Survival Guide" and "Basic Baking." Her recipes have appeared in many newspapers and books, including "The New York Times Sunday Magazine" and "The Boston Globe." She was a featured chef in the public television series "Baking With Julia, with Julia Child" and has appeared on "Good Morning America" and "The Today Show." She lives in the Boston area and spends six months of the year at Provincetown on Cape Cod. This is a free event and the public is most welcome. Please call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 to order your signed copy if unable to attend.

Painter finds her place by the sea

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

Summer's here and the time is right for, among other things, going to places by the sea.

Such places are more than compatible for artistic rendering through oil on canvas, as Hingham painter Diane Scott has discovered in her various travels to locations from her hometown to Tuscany, Italy in the past seven years.

Much of the best of Scott's work produced in her journeying captures scenes of summer, giving an additional timely theme to her one-person show, Places By the Sea, on view at the Hingham Public Library's Dolphin Gallery through Aug. 15. The exhibit is also the latest in the Hingham Library's ongoing gallery series showcasing artist members of Marshfield's North River Arts Society.

Scott, 52, a Toronto native and former nurse, is the winner of numerous local and regional artistic prizes, including a best oil prize in the Cape Cod Art Association's All New England show and other best oil awards. She also taught intermediate oil painting classes at NRAS until retiring from that to pursue her own painting full-time a year ago.

True to the exhibit's title, Scott's 32 works included offer a variety from beachside, dockside and bayside scenes to inland views through woodlands, meadows, townships and villages presumably not far from the oceanfront. On most of her pieces, the artist displays a rich, sensitive touch, a palpable breezy effect conveyed by scenes featuring a blue water element and even an appropriately cooling chill amidst the scattering of snow/ice-laden winter portraits.

Diane Scott will display her art at the Hingham Public Library's Dolphin Gallery through Aug. 15.

"What am I working on lately? I have been focusing on refining my compositional skills," said Scott. "The paintings must read from a distance before the viewer even knows what he is looking at."

"Also I'm trying to get more interest in the paintings I am doing lately by varying the vantage point instead of always being at eye level and looking straight on at the view. It's amazing how much more dynamic you can make an image just by climbing up a few feet to look down on something or getting low and looking up at the subject," the artist said.

Scott's concept of experimental views is pervasive throughout her one-person show, much of which was created since 1995 and in between the places mentioned took the artist from various local spots in Scituate, Marshfield and Cohasset to Gloucester and Manchester, Massachusetts as well as the perennially

SPECIAL TO LIVING

It is said that the act of gardening feeds the soul, and if that's true, then this year's Science Center Garden Tour provides you with a veritable feast. Spend an idyllic summer day nurturing your senses with the color and heady aroma of flowers in full bloom, as you are inspired with new ideas to implement in your own garden.

"Through the Garden Gate", the 22nd annual Garden Tour to benefit the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell will be held on Wednesday, July 9th from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., and includes seven gardens in Norwell, Hanover and Duxbury. The tour is a perennial favorite of garden lovers, because of its reputation for magnificent gardens, and this year is no exception.

One Duxbury garden stands where a 19th century shipyard once operated. With a breathtaking view overlooking Kingston Bay, this property is large, so wear your walking shoes and bring a notepad! A tea rose garden forms an arc around the lawn and overlooks the water, providing the garden's owners with dozens of fragrant roses to fill their home each day. Other highlights include a three-tiered, terraced vegetable garden that plunges down a hill to a tennis court, a monkey puzzle tree and a shade garden that boasts over twenty varieties of hostas.

Step back in time to experience an English cottage garden in Hanover. Enclosed by a stonewall with a grass swath path, a delightful assortment of old fashioned perennials, such as hollyhocks, peonies, iris, catmint, campanula, poppies, bee balm, foxglove and lilies intermingle with one another. Another highlight of this property is a brick patio bordered by a modified herb garden and pergola with climbing wisteria that combine to create a small seating area.

In Norwell, visit a home that features a formal garden crisscrossed with brick paths and enclosed with a hedge of boxwood. Bulbs, perennials and summer blooming shrubs provide a season long

The best white cake

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

A basic white cake is as fundamental to American home cooking as a pudding is to the English – no repertoire is complete without it. Over the years, I have developed a few recipes for white cake, only to discover that there are three quite different mixing methods: creaming the butter, creaming the butter and whipping the egg whites, and mixing softened butter with the flour mixture. The question was which method produced the lightest, most tender cake.

For years, I had been using the basic "cream the butter" (the butter is beaten with sugar until it is very light and thick) method but I was aware that the texture was a bit dry and the texture slightly coarse. When I tested adding some beaten egg whites to the mixture, the resulting cake was even drier. That left me with what is often referred to as the "two-step" method: Softened butter is beaten with the dry ingredients and then the wet ingredients (including egg whites) are added. This was clearly the preferred approach since the cake was soft, moist and delicate. Now I set out to perfect the recipe.

I began with a master recipe that called for milk, large egg whites, cake flour, sugar, baking powder, vanilla, salt, and butter. I tested the quantity of milk and ended up sticking with one cup – I had no luck substituting cream, sour cream, or buttermilk for some or all of the milk. Six egg whites was just right – when I used more, the cake turned springy. As for butter, 12 tablespoons was perfect – when I added more, the cake turned dense, a bit like pound cake. I was using 3 cups of cake flour but found the cake unpleasantly floury. After a few tests, I reduced this amount to 2 1/3 cups, also testing all-purpose flour, which simply made the cake tough. I did find that many recipes use too much sugar so I reduced my starting quantity of 2 1/4 cups down to a mere 1 1/2 cups and vastly preferred the finished cake.

This recipe produces two 9-inch layers and they bake for about 25 minutes at 350 degrees. I did butter the pans and covered the bottoms with parchment paper but found that flouring the pans was unnecessary.

THE BEST WHITE CAKE EVER

This is a great recipe to use as the basis for a classic birthday cake. A simple chocolate frosting works well.

1 cup whole milk at cool room temperature
6 large egg whites at cool room temperature
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
2 1/3 cups cake flour
1 1/2 cups sugar
4 teaspoons baking powder
3/4 teaspoon salt
12 tablespoons unsalted butter, softened but still firm

1. Heat the oven to 350 degrees and adjust a rack to the center position. Grease two 9-inch cake pans with softened butter or Crisco and cover the bottom of each pan with a circle of parchment. In a medium bowl, stir together the milk, egg whites, and vanilla with a fork.

2. Place the flour, sugar, baking powder and salt in the bowl of a standing mixer fitted with the paddle attachment. Add the butter and 1/4 of the milk mixture and mix on low speed until dry ingredients are moistened, about 1 minute. Increase the speed to medium and mix until the batter comes together, about 30 seconds. Increase the speed to medium-high and mix for 2 minutes, stopping to scrape down the sides of the bowl once or twice. Add the remaining milk/egg white mixture to the batter in three batches, mixing for about 20 seconds after each addition. Scrape down the sides of the bowl and beat on medium-high until batter is homogeneous and light, about 30 seconds longer.

3. Transfer the batter to the prepared pans and bake until the cake is lightly colored, feels set, and a cake tester comes out clean when inserted into the center, about 26 minutes, rotating the cakes 180 degrees halfway through the baking time. (Baking time will vary depending on your oven.)

4. Remove pans to cooling rack and let rest for 5 minutes. Run a thin knife around the sides of the pans and invert the cakes one at a time onto cooling rack. Reinvert cakes so the top is facing up and let cool completely.

Makes 2 nine-inch cakes.

favorite artists' retreat of Monhegan, Maine. There is an overall consistency of tone, with rich greens and blues dominating the New England-based shoreline and cove scenes in particular.

Monhegan-scapes such as those of the famous Island landing, Fish Beach and Lighthouse prove just as alluring in comparitively less exotic modesty as the hillside and village views from Tuscany, titled "Tuscan Vineyard," "Canale" and "Vernazza." All of Scott's titles are generally terse and matter-of-fact, such as the familiar local scenes of "Cohasset Village" and "Dry Dock, Cohasset," though the artist makes it whimsical for the snow-covered field-scape of "No Soccer Today."

Scott's work is also available at South Street Gallery in Hingham and through her studio on the second floor of the Codman Building in Rockland.

Diane Scott will show her exhibit "Places By the Sea" through Aug. 15 at the Dolphin Gallery in the Hingham Public Library. For more information call the NRAS at (781) 837-display of color in this garden. At the center is a fountain and pools of fish and water lilies, surrounded by a planting of Salvia "Blue Hill". Nestled into the hillside by the swimming pool are plantings designed to provide privacy and summertime color.

In addition, explore an organic garden, seaside garden, herb garden, Moon garden, wildflowers, lilies and more. The gardens can be visited in any order, at one's own pace, between 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. on the day of the tour. There will be a hostess and tour guide at each garden, and labels on the different plants to help guide the way.

The Science Center's butterfly, herb, wildflower and raised sensory gardens will also be at their finest. While at the Center, enjoy some lemonade, iced tea and cookies in our air-conditioned facility. And take a chance on this year's raffle item, a gorgeous verdigris birdbath featuring a frog on a lily pad in the middle of the bath.

Tickets for the garden tour are available in advance for $25 ($20 members). Tickets the day of the tour will be $25. A box lunch can be ordered in advance for $8. Tickets may be purchased at the Science Center during normal business hours, or charged via telephone by calling (781) 659-2559. Tickets are also available at the Marshfield Hills General Store, the Westwinds Bookshop and the Studio in Duxbury. The Garden Tour ticket contains detailed descriptions of each of the gardens as well as directions to each location.

The South Shore Natural Science Center is a non-profit environmental education center serving the entire south shore, and is dependent on various fundraising efforts, grants, and program and membership fees to continue its mission. All proceeds from the Garden Tour benefit the educational programming of the Science Center. For more information, call the Center at (781) 659-2559, or visit our Web site at www.ssnsc.org <http://www.ssnsc.org/>.

The Angle with 'Angels'

Charlie's Angels: Full Throttle (C)

Lurking inside this bouncy paean to shiny cars, deafeningly loud sounds, some of it actual music, most of it what some call music, amazingly firm gluteus maximi, and special effects up the yin-yang, is a story. Whether you'll want to figure it out, whether the intended demographic audience for this movie will be interested enough to figure it out, is a different matter. But in case you'd rather save your money and not go hunting for the story, it appears to be this: The Angels, those crime-fighting hotties guided by the disembodied voice (John Forsythe) of their boss, Charlie, are in Mongolia to rescue a guy, who turns out to be problematic. Meanwhile, Natalie (Cameron Diaz) has moved in with her beau (Luke Wilson, specializing this summer in ineffectual nice guys; viz. "Alex and Emma"), who may propose to her. Alex (Lucy Liu) has a father (John Cleese — genetics seem to have been mislaid by this flick's makers) who is clueless, though her squeeze (Matt LeBlanc) comes to water plants and winds up telling daddy all. And Dylan (Drew Barrymore) still has her keen eye for studs and spots a few at the beach, but she has a secret: She was once Helen Zass, a name that gives the other girls mini-mirthful moments.

We get minor mirthful moments as the film drags on. In addition to these little character vignettes we're beset by a disgustingly tattooed, disgustingly ill-tempered, disgustingly coifed ex-boyfriend just out of prison (Justin Theroux, novelist Paul Theroux's nephew, if you want to know) and by an ex-angel (Demi Moore, to whose personal trainer should go an Oscar for keeping this senior citizen in stupendous shape) who plays the lead character here in the John Milton "Paradise Lost" version. That was a literary reference, boys and girls. Think: Who's the most interesting character in Milton's epic poem? You are not the weakest link! Yes! She is an angel gone bad. So: romances, vengeances, evil, majorly significant data, good guys vs. bad.

But why even try to piece this together coherently? Lord knows the movie's makers didn't. Imagine the story conference. "So, Solly, Sean, Bobby, we got the babes, now we need a couple hunks, the comic relief but not threateningly sexy black guy — Bernie Mac'd do; he's incomprehensible and can say 'dayum' — and maybe an upcoming young white kid for the early-teens, like that boy in last month's 'Holes,' Shia LaBeouf (what kinda name is Shia LaBeouf anyhow?). Just flip 'em in anywhere, keep the Angels wiggling, use some 'Hidden Monkey, Crouching Lizard' special effects stuff like last time and like in, uh, 'Matrix Rewound' — get the girls flying through the air, fiery crashes, PG-13 deaths, crank up the volume so we don't need to hire any actual writers, just toss in sentences, nobody'll understand anyhow....a certified hit!"

This sequel, not the last of this franchise, bet the ranch on that, is harmless and brainless, and it gives everybody, of both genders, all races, all ages between 12 and 32, 33 maybe, something to gawk at. Besides, it's a testament to the benefits of flossing and tooth whitening. Bernie Mac may pose an ophthalmological query or two, but his pearly whites are truly pearly, as are the ladies' and the other good guys'. Besides Demi Moore, who also sports perfect chompers, the bad guys don't smile, so who knows about theirs? I'm a dentist's son; I pay attention to major things like this, as valid a field of interest as any, for spending time with this movie.

LISTEN To Life
by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

IMPROVED QUALITY OF LIFE

A few years ago, the National Council on Aging conducted a study of two groups of older adults, one of which was found to be more likely to feel sad and socially withdrawn, and to feel that people were angry with them for no reason. The other group was happier and more socially comfortable. Why? The researchers found that the happier and better-adjusted group had been taking advantage of hearing instruments. The hearing intruments users also reported greater independence, improved mental health, and better relationships with their families than those who did not avail themselves of the use of a hearing instrument. A hearing instrument can, indeed, deliver many older adults from the isolation and unhappiness of hearing loss.

At FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, we take the responsibility very seriously of matching every patient with the hearing instrument best suited to each individual's special circumstances. We then use state-of-the-art technology to achieve the most accurate, comfortable, personal fit. Our extensive training and our experience in the field make us well-suited to both tasks. Hearing tests are painless - have a free one soon at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth PH: 781-337-1144. We also have an office in Abington.

P.S. An estimated 27 million Americans have hearing loss that requires the use of a hearing instrument.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

WEDNESDAY, JULY 2

A Leo moon continues to generate an upbeat mood today. However, a lunar polarity to Neptune at 8:39 a.m. can make for a slow start this morning. After that the green light for new beginnings goes on; start new activities, make important decisions, plans or purchases. The moon and Jupiter conjoin this evening, setting the stage for parties. Gather with friends and enjoy life to the max.

THURSDAY, JULY 3

A playful Leo moon continues active travel, making this morning ideal for socializing, vacationing. At 2:06 p.m. the moon aligns with Venus and becomes inactive. A practical Virgo moon takes over at 4:16 p.m., and a lunar polarity to Uranus may disrupt the flow of the evening. Keep it light; be more easygoing and adaptable.

FRIDAY, JULY 4

Planetary influences today are better for working than they are for vacationing. The moon travels in meticulous Virgo, and forms harmonious contacts to Mercury and the sun. In addition, the sun prepares to align with Mercury. This combination is prime for analyzing situations and making practical decisions, or for focusing on jobs that require accuracy and attention to detail. On the other hand, it may be difficult to relax and mellow out. The planet Venus moves into Cancer at 1:39 p.m., remaining there until July 29. A lunar alignment to Pluto warns you to avoid late-night bickering. Know when it's time to call it a night.

SATURDAY, JULY 5

At 12:15 a.m. the Virgo moon becomes inactive until 9:20 p.m. The sun and Mercury conjoin at 6:21 a.m., 13-degrees of the sign Cancer. Plan to get old projects out of the way; clean and reorganize. Get your life in order. Sidestep worries, doubts, fears. At 9:20 p.m. the moon enters Libra, setting the stage for a social evening.

SUNDAY, JULY 6

This day tops the charts for fun and games. The Libra moon continues active travel, and Venus, the planetary ruler of Libra, aligns with Uranus. Step out of your usual routine; do something different. Impromptu get-togethers or travel will be the most successful. Lighten up, enjoy the moment. The first quarter phase of the moon occurs at 10:32 p.m. It signals the beginning of a full moon buildup that will culminate next Sunday, July 13.

MONDAY, JULY 7

It may be difficult to get back to work and practical matters today. The Libra moon becomes inactive at 6:23 a.m. An applying alignment of Venus and Saturn generates a serious, conservative mood. Don't create problems for yourself by worrying about situations you have no control over. Let go of fears, self-doubts, limited thinking. Prayer and meditation can help you to find peace of mind.

TUESDAY, JULY 8

Roll up your sleeves and take on a full work agenda. You can be most productive today. The moon enters Scorpio at 12:43 a.m., and forms five major alignments to planets during the day and evening. Tackle jobs that require study, research or projects that have been problematic, glitchy. You can work out the kinks, get to the bottom of things, find solutions. A lunar alignment to Neptune prompts you to relax and unwind this evening.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 9

The Scorpio moon forms a 90-degree contact to Jupiter this morning. Its influence may generate an easier, lighter mood. On the other hand, don't go overboard and make extravagant plans or promises. You can get a lot accomplished today, if you are well-organized. Plan to initiate new activities before 1:58 p.m., when the moon aligns with Mercury and becomes inactive. The remainder of the afternoon is ideal for redoing projects already begun, making repairs and remodeling.

THURSDAY, JULY 10

The moon enters ebullient Sagittarius at 2:48 a.m., remaining there today and tomorrow. There are a couple of rough spots, however. Today, the moon forms 90-degree alignments to Uranus at 6:46 a.m. and Mars at 3:56 p.m. Slow down and use caution while driving or operating machinery. Avoid taking chances or doing anything risky. The combination of a lunar contact to Neptune and applying Venus-Mars alignment makes this evening prime for social or romantic activities.

FRIDAY, JULY 11

The moon and Pluto conjoin at 8:13 a.m., warning you to wake up in a good mood. Think before you say or do something you will later regret. Fortunately, storm clouds move out quickly, and sunny astrological weather prevails during the remainder of the day. The best period for initiating new enterprises occurs between 8:30-11:53 a.m., when the Sagittarius moon aligns with Jupiter and becomes inactive. Get back in the swing of favorite sports or hobbies. Put on your party hat and let the good times roll this evening.

Village braces for 'bump-out' trial run

Delineators to be installed

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

For those who may not have noticed the dotted lines indicating "bump outs" in the village, the proposed additions to the sidewalks at several locations will soon become a lot more visible.

Selectmen asked Town Manager Mark Haddad to go forward with plans to temporarily place sandbags along the perimeter of the proposed bump outs, but that plan has subsequently been bumped in favor of installing traffic delineators — dubbed flappers — that bounce back up when hit. Barrels will be installed to delineate the bump outs at Depot Court.

Haddad recommended against installing any physical, bump-out delineators because they would eliminate parking spaces. Part of the streetscape improvements include re-lining village parking which will result in a net loss of just one space, but keeping the parking as is for the bump-out trial would eliminate more spaces.

But Selectman Fred Koed said residents cannot get a true picture of how bump outs would affect traffic flow when they can just drive over them, as is the case with painted lines.

Town gets tough on quad gates

Says MBTA violated pact

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The issue potentially puts the MBTA in violation of its mitigation agreement with the town because the Army Corps of Engineers has not rendered its decision regarding the type of gate.

Selectmen aren't happy the MBTA has apparently ignored letters from Town Hall asking that design plans for Greenbush grade crossings be put on hold until the quad-gate issue is resolved.

Greenbush towns want the MBTA to use quad gates rather than traditional grade crossings that would necessitate installing median barriers, which the towns say are unsightly and would damage the character of the communities.

But the MBTA didn't listen and continues to submit plans using the standard crossing treatment, including a packet of 60 percent design plans that arrived last week, Town Manager Mark Haddad said.

"It is obvious the MBTA is not

Has summer finally arrived?

Some seek relief from heat wave

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

New England is one place where you can always count on Mother Nature to throw a few curve balls, and just when you think spring has finally sprung, she throws us full force into the heat of summer.

This past week around town, children were riding their bikes as usual, only many were steering with one hand, while holding a Popsicle or cold drink in the other. Their destination could have been sailing or boating, as many ride with life jackets on, or a towel around their necks, and perhaps some of the older ones were on their way to take a jump off the Border Street bridge.

For seven-year-old Zack Coggins, the heat had brought a business opportunity. As a twist on the traditional lemonade stand, Zack has been selling limeade to help quench the thirst of passersby. It is his third time having a stand at his house, and he said his sales are much better when it is hot out.

Zack said he enjoys his new business venture and said, "It's better than just lying

Demolition delay bylaw is raised

Might save historic homes

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset is a town rich with history, which many local organizations and boards continuously work to preserve year after year.

The Cohasset Historical Commission, for instance, is currently working on drafting a "Demolition Delay" bylaw, which would be similar to the bylaw in place in Hingham, which can put plans to demolish a structure on hold for six months to allow time to consider whether a building can be restored and see what other alternatives to demolition are available.

Commission Chairman, Noel Ripley believes the bylaws are necessary and is very concerned with what he sees as the town's history slowly slipping away. When older homes in town are torn down to make way for brand new ones, their history goes with them.

"If we let our history go, we'll never recapture it. Today, the land is more valuable than houses."
— Noel Ripley, Cohasset Historical Commission

"We're losing a lot of assets in this town. If we let our history go, we'll never recapture it. Today, the land is more valuable than houses," Ripley said, and added that by tearing down the older homes, it's "eroding the character of the town."

Commission member Rebecca Bates-McArthur agrees and said, "People don't see the historical value, they just see the land value."

Planning Board member Peter Pratt said the board is

All meetings are at Town Hall unless indicated otherwise.

Beach gate meeting

Closing the gate at the north end of the Sandy Beach parking lot (by Nichols Road) may still be an option. Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris, Police Chief Robert Jackson and members of the Sandy Beach Association will meet to discuss the issue. Selectmen have received a couple of phone calls and one letter stating closing the gate permanently would enhance safety and keep out non-residents.

McMorris said in light of the concerns raised, it was important to sit down with the Sandy Beach Association to review the process of checking cars and to see if efforts need to be beefed up.

Robin Lawrence, president of the Sandy Beach Association, told selectmen last month the association would like to lock the gate at the Nichols Road end to help keep out-of-towners from using the popular location and as a safety measure.

He related a story about two women who were the victims of a "flasher" several years ago when the north gate was locked. The suspect was apprehended quickly after police were called because there was only one way out and a lifeguard blocked the south (Sheldon Road) exit with his car.

He also explained with the north gate open it is more difficult to prevent those without resident stickers to park there. On busy days the number of out-of-towners enjoying a day on Sandy Beach can be as high as 20 percent, he said.

He noted a parking ticket at the beach is $25, which is not a lot for a carload of kids with their friends to spend for a day at the beach.

At the time, selectmen opted not to close the gate altogether as requested, but did reach a consensus to close the north gate at dusk rather than 10 p.m.

Since that decision, Justine Vanderlugt wrote to selectmen about safety concerns mothers have for their children and described an incident that occurred two years ago where a man from another town tried to lure two young girls into his truck. She urged the north gate be closed and an attendant be stationed at the main gate at all times. She also suggested police patrols be increased.

Emergency planning committee is formed

In accordance with federal law and an executive order from the state, Cohasset is establishing a Local Emergency Planning Committee (LEPC) that will include a selectman, the town manager, fire and police chiefs, superintendent of schools, chairman of the Board of Health, DPW superintendent, and emergency management director or assistant director. The LEPC will insure there are adequate, workable plans, which protect the town and its residents from potential emergencies and disasters both natural and manmade. Such plans will address the mitigation, preparedness response and recovery aspects of emergency management relating to the threat of natural, technological and national security emergencies and disasters, according to Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik.

The LEPC's charge will be to develop, revise, maintain and exercise the town's Comprehensive Emergency Management Plan (CEMP) ; to coordinate with all town departments, state and federal emergency management agencies and local and regional non-government organizations and businesses; and to assure all potential emergencies are adequately addressed in the CEMP.

The committee will file an annual report.

Charging utilities rent is OK, but...

Selectmen have learned while it would be legal to charge utility companies rent for use of the town's underground conduits in the village, the utilities could pass that cost on to their customers, including the town itself. The issue of charging rent surfaced as a potential way to help offset the cost of burying wires in the village. The village revitalization plan includes money for installing the infrastructure to bury the wires but not actually putting them underground because of the estimated $600,000 in additional cost.

A few years ago, the town explored establishing a surcharge on residents' utility bills to pay for putting the wires underground, however, the proposal was rejected by voters. But last week, selectmen said that proposal included the infrastructure costs. Selectman Michael Sullivan said the cost under the current plan might be minimal and selectmen decided to explore the issue further.

Starbucks gets OK

Selectmen are satisfied that a plan to reduce the grade of the exit ramp at the far end of Tedeschi Plaza will increase safety there once the Starbucks opens in the former Fleet bank building. A representative from Tedeschi's said the ramp would be more gradual, and the company was willing to use the curb cut as an egress only.

"We are willing to say exit only – do not enter," Terry Tedeschi said.

A new landscaped area will also prevent traffic from traveling in front of the building to use the exit. In other words, only cars using the drive-through would exit there.

Selectmen OK'd awarding Starbucks a common victualler (food) license conditioned on the company obtaining a Planning Board recommendation on the new grade of the slope. Selectmen are looking for a grade of 5-6 percent, unless the Planning Board says otherwise. The grade of the existing slope is 10-11 percent, Tedeschi said.

Starbucks hopes to start construction in August and be open by the end of September.

Snow fencing OK'ed

The Conservation Commission approved the request made by members of the Cohasset Environmental Support Group to install snow fencing along the harbor side of Atlantic Avenue. The fencing will help keep people off the dunes and allow for the natural restoration of dune grasses.

Town faces an additional $99K reduction in local aid

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"We will need to come up with $99,000 by the end of next June or we'll need to cut that much out of the budget."
— Town Manager Mark Haddad

Numbers from the fiscal year 2004 state budget submitted June 30 indicate Cohasset will lose an additional $99,000 in local aid, Town Manager Mark Haddad said. The town was banking on a local aid reduction of $307,000, but now faces a reduction of close to another $100,000.

Haddad said he would wait for the final numbers on the so-called "cherry sheet" from the state to see what local aid line items are impacted before he suggests spending reductions. Cherry sheets tell cities and towns what the state aid numbers will be.

"We will need to come up with $99,000 by the end of next June or we'll need to cut that much out of the budget," Haddad told selectmen.

When the town passed its $28 million FY04 operating budget at Town Meeting, officials worked on the assumption the state aid would be cut by 15 percent. The town passed a $350,000 Prop. 2-1/2 override at the ballot box to help offset the anticipated shortfall in state aid. State aid is being cut as a way to help make up a $3 billion deficit in the state budget.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, warned the cut could be as high as 20 percent. FY04 began July 1. Haddad said as it turned out, Bradley was right on target.

However, Haddad said the override number would have remained the same regardless of the state aid cut. He said selectmen, the Advisory Committee and School Committee worked together to come up with an override number palatable to the taxpayers.

The $350,000 was as high as they wanted to go, Haddad said, noting how higher overrides have been rejected by many communities across the state this spring. He said if local aid had been level-funded, selectmen would not have opted to put an override on the ballot this year.

Haddad said it is too soon to say where the town will find the $99,000. It is possible the money could come from free cash or reductions in budget line items. He explained at first glance, none of the myriad options offered by the Legislature this week that could give towns tools to recover lost state aid through increasing fees would help Cohasset.

Weir River park in the works

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Hingham, Hull, and Cohasset are joining together to preserve the Weir River Estuary by creating a park, including much of its remaining unprotected shoreline. The estuary features more than 100 species of birds and rare volcanic and glacial geology.

Over the past decade, the Town of Hull has drafted several plans for a Weir River Estuary Park to capitalize on its recreational and educational potential. Recently the geographic scope was broadened to include the other two towns. The state designated the estuary an Area of Critical Environmental Concern (ACEC) in 1986. ACEC designation provides an extra layer of protection for the area's cultural and ecological resources.

The estuary goes from the end of the fresh water portion of the Weir River at Foundry Pond Dam in Hingham to the tip of World's End and Sunset Point in Hull, where it enters Hull Bay. It also includes Strait's Pond between Hull and Cohasset, which is partially tidal and flows to the estuary through a pipe at West Corner. The river originates in Hingham and empties into the Bay.

The Weir River Estuary Committee, drawn from the three towns, is now identifying key parcels of privately owned land which could be incorporated in the park and looking into grant opportunities. The park would be created through a public-private partnership. Some Community Preservation Act funds are available for open space acquisitions in towns such as Hingham and Cohasset, which adopted the legislation calling for a tax surcharge to be set aside for historic preservation, open space, and affordable housing.

"The estuary is a hidden treasure, and we want to respect the animal habitat and nearby residential areas," said Judeth Van Hamm of Hull, who chairs the park committee. "The best way to enjoy the park is in a canoe or small kayak. The first time I visited the estuary, I felt I was in the Everglades, away from everything."

A building in Hull has been earmarked for a future educational and welcome center, serving Hull, Hingham, and Cohasset schools and visitors from many communities.

The committee's goals in creating the park include:

- preserving the wildlife habitat;
- protecting and improving water quality;
- creating an educational outreach program; and
- providing recreational access.

A tri-town Estuary Committee would be appointed to oversee the park. Volunteers from all three communities are needed to transform the vision into a reality. Dick Avery is Cohasset's representative on the committee.

By September, UMass Boston's Urban Harbors Institute is expected to release a report based on input and information gathered at a May visioning session in Hull.

The 23.4-square-mile Weir River Watershed drains to the lower Weir River estuary including Straits Pond, which lies between the three towns, although most of the Straits Pond sub-watershed is in Cohasset. The Weir River ACEC consists of 922 acres, 31 percent of which is land and 69 percent is water. Forty-two percent of the ACEC lies within Hingham, including upland areas and wetlands. Most of the land in the Hingham portion is undeveloped. The open fields and forests of World's End's located in and adjacent to the ACEC comprise the largest protected undeveloped natural landscape in the area.

New ID cards are rolled out for some town employees

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Haddad said the town will pay a $250 design fee for the cards, as well as a $10 charge for each individual employee ID.

Some town officials will be sporting new identification badges within the month. When working around town performing assessments or other jobs that require visiting people's homes, employees will be able to present official identification, assuring residents they are who they say they are.

The new identification cards will have a photograph, similar to a driver's license, and will include the employee's personal information such as name, title and ID number, and will feature the town seal.

Town Manager, Mark Haddad said it is not definite who will receive the identification just yet, but said they are obviously intended for employees whose jobs take them to people's homes.

"We want to make sure our employees and residents are both protected," he said.

The idea was sparked by Assistant Assessor Debbie Krupczak, who along with Deputy Assessor Mary Quill, realized they were giving out a good number of business cards as a means of identification to people whose homes they were assessing. She had thought of going to Nobles to pay for an ID to be made up for herself, but once it was mentioned to Haddad, he thought it would be a good idea for everyone in a situation like hers.

"We have about 400 homes a year to get to," said Krupczak, noting there will be even more during the 2005 fiscal year due to re-evaluation, which requires a town-wide review. With so many visits, that adds up to a lot of business cards, which aren't always easily accessible.

"Sometimes people question us," said Krupczak, as many would when a stranger comes to the door, but she also said most people are pretty trusting, which she believes is because she has lived in Cohasset for the past 23 years and knows a good majority of the people in town. That, coupled with the fact that she and her boss are both women and may seem less threatening, is why she thinks they haven't had as much trouble as men in their position might.

On the other hand, student hires can also cause alarm in neighborhoods where their faces are not familiar. In previous summers Krupczak said, "people were quite suspicious" of the teenagers taking pictures for them, of which one was her son. Identification badges would "alleviate any fears [residents] have that people aren't who they say they are," she said.

The identification cards will be made by Nobles, which also provides identification cards for the Cohasset Police Department. Haddad said the town will pay a $250 design fee for the cards, as well as a $10 charge for each individual employee ID. Krupczak's ID card has already been made, with others to follow.

Haddad said the towns of Brewster and Littleton, where he formerly worked, also had identification cards similar to the ones Cohasset workers will have, which worked well. He said for Cohasset, it will definitely be an asset, so the residents can always know and not have to question whether employees are legitimate.

Wompatuck Park gains acreage

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Wompatuck State Park will soon expand by 125 acres. The added recreational space is sure to please residents, naturalists, and others who bike, jog, walk, and hike there.

The parcel to be added, a former ammunitions facility of the Cohasset Naval Annex which is currently controlled by the Army, is located at the end of Hingham's Leavitt Street. An environmental cleanup of the "Hingham Annex" was recently completed, paving the way for the property to become part of the state park system under the Department of Environmental Management (DEM). The Department of Environmental Protection will review the final documents associated with the cleanup. The property must remain parkland.

Adding the Annex property to the existing state park will provide a solid link between the watershed lands of both Hingham and Cohasset, Whitney Woods (maintained by the Trustees of Reservations), and Wompatuck, creating a 5,000-acre contiguous area of quality recreational space.

Hingham Town Administrator Charles Cristello worked with the Army Corps of Engineers and Base Realignment and Closure (BRAC) office, National Guard, DEM, state environmental officials, and Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, to bring about the cleanup and perform work related to safety issues. The process has spanned a decade, involving tearing down large, dilapidated buildings still standing on the property and the removal of asbestos, underground storage tanks, and contaminated soil. In 2001, the BRAC office awarded a contract to Parsons Engineering Science to perform the clean-up.

Although some contamination remains, project engineers have determined that no harm would come to those using the parcel for bird watching, sports, hiking, horseback riding, biking, cross-country skiing, snowmobiling, or other activities unless they were exposed to the property for more than 60 days a year. If any further contamination attributable to the Army's presence on the property is discovered in the future, the Army is responsible for cleaning it up. Copies of the site assessment report are available at the library.

Several years ago, Hingham was designated the local redevelopment authority for the property. Hingham selectmen were charged with coming up with a redevelopment plan under the federal base closure project. A number of options for the former Hingham Annex were offered, including Habitat for Humanity housing, an elder care facility, and an aviation museum. After further consideration, however, the town decided the best use of the land was to integrate it into the existing 3,000-acre park.

The site was used to manufacture and store ammunition during World War II. The property was also used as an Army training facility and to repair vehicles. There was activity at the site during the Korean and Vietnam conflicts as well. The Annex was part of a 3,700-acre, Navy-owned parcel of land which the federal government declared surplus and began turning over to the state in the early 1960s. Most of the property has become part of Wompatuck State Park.

what will happen, dotted lines are almost oblivious," he said, adding losing a few parking spaces for a couple of weeks did not outweigh the importance of the bump-out trial.

To that end, selectmen also authorized removing the island at the top of Depot Court that also serves as a POW/MIA memorial. The DPW removed the island on Tuesday.

If installed, permanent bump outs at both sides of the crosswalk at Depot Court would necessitate removing the island so there would be enough room for two-way traffic and turns from North and South Main streets. If the bump outs at the intersection are ultimately approved, the POW/MIA memorial will be installed at a new location on the sidewalk bump out the South Main Street corner of Depot Court.

This is all part of the $1.8 million Village Revitalization Project, which has been in the works for upwards of seven years and is being paid for through grants and private donations. Officials say bump outs at crosswalks would enhance safety because they allow pedestrians to walk out beyond the length of the adjacent parked cars to check for oncoming traffic before venturing across the street. The Cohasset bump outs are larger than those in Scituate Harbor, for example, because for the most part, the village uses angled and not parallel parking.

Mia and Bianca Furtado use the crosswalk at Depot Court, one of several areas where bump outs are planned. The POW/MIA memorial island has been temporarily removed for the bump-out test.

The bump-out talk at the selectmen's meeting last week also opened the door to reconsidering the necessity for the bump out at Tedeschi's and adding bump outs at lower Depot Court, which is no longer part of the streetscape improvement plan. Selectmen will ask for comments from the board of directors at the South Shore Community Center and the South Shore Community Center Nursery School before giving design consultants, the Waterfield Group, the go ahead for the final crosswalk design at lower Depot Court. Streetscape improvements were eliminated from Depot Court and Brook Street to free up money to install conduits for underground utilities.

The money from eliminating the bump out at Tedeschi's could be used to offset the cost of the lower Depot Court crosswalk and bump outs, estimated at $27,000, selectmen said.

The bump out trial — which is expected to start today and could last two weeks — will include the proposed bump outs at Cohasset Hardware, Lilac House antiques, Really Great Pizza, Dependable Cleaners and upper Depot Court.

Demolition delay bylaw is raised aware of the draft bylaw and said he is personally in favor of having some kind of bylaw to protect historic structures. Using the Red Lion Inn as an example, he said, "If someone can take the oldest, most historic building in town and renovate it with no regulations, that indicates to me that some type of demolition delay law makes sense."

Knowing some people might argue about property rights, Pratt feels that at the end of the day, a demolition delay bylaw would protect the property rights of everyone by preserving the character of the town.

Town Meeting would have the final say on adoption of the bylaw that could come before voters as early as this fall's special Town Meeting, Pratt said.

Ripley is worried about the town losing its character.

"I think the reason people come to Cohasset is because people want to see a place that looks like this," he said.

Ripley knows that for a town to move forward, it is inevitable that change will take place, but believes a line has to be drawn between "good change and bad change."

For this reason, the Historical Commission has begun taking a more "proactive" role in the preservation of the town. Bates-McArthur said it is important to work on keeping the town's history alive before it is too late.

Protecting historic assets is commission's role

To help with preservation, the Cohasset Historical Commission has spent much time getting historic areas, such as the Town Common and Government Island, on the National Register of Historic Places.

The Commission also was the force behind completion the replica of Minot's Light at Government Island. The iron replica depicts the top 30 feet of the lighthouse, built to scale, complete with a copper roof. The Historical Commission also rebuilt the clock at the top of the First Parish Church Meetinghouse, and initiated the Captain's Walk, which runs from the Veteran's Park to Government Island. There are 10 stations along the way where walkers can read about the town's history.

"If you can see the past, it helps you see the future," chairman Noel Ripley said.

As evidenced by last week's selectmen's meeting, there may be some confusion in town about what role the historical commission plays. Selectmen weren't sure if the Committee of Town History was usurping some of the commission's duties with its continuing involvement in ensuring the three volumes of town history are available and as it looks toward establishing a fund to pay for the next volume in 50 years.

Then there's the Cohasset Common Historic District Commission, also a town board, and the Cohasset Historical Society, a private group – all of which have different roles to play.

The members of the Cohasset Historical Commission, which has been operating for 30 years, work both with and independently from the other historical groups in town, which include the Committee on Town History, which has been working with the schools to provide materials that will bring history to life for students, the Historical Society, which has moved to its new home in the old Paul Pratt Memorial Library where its expansive collection can be displayed, and the Common Historic District Commission, which preserves the character of the common and surrounding district buildings.

The Cohasset Historical Commission operates under the Massachusetts Historical Commission, which is directed by Secretary of State William Galvin. Each individual town and city has the option of adopting a historical commission if they wish, which most do.

"At one time or another, all but five communities in Massachusetts have had historical commissions," said Brian McNiff, spokesman of secretary Galvin's office. Massachusetts has 351 cities and towns.

(paying attention) to our request and are pressing forward," he said.

Median barriers would be required for safety reasons if standard gates are used because Greenbush is a whistle-free corridor and the medians would prevent impatient motorists from skirting around a closed gate to beat an oncoming train. Median barriers aren't needed with quad gates, which have four arms instead of two, because they block both sides of the road going in each direction.

The issue potentially puts the MBTA in violation of its mitigation agreement with the town because the Army Corps of Engineers has not rendered its decision regarding the type of gate. The Army Corps has asked the MBTA to arrange a meeting with the Federal Railroad Administration, MBTA safety experts and town officials, along with Corps staff, to review the gates issue.

Selectmen gave Haddad authorization to start the informal dispute resolution process as spelled out in the town's mitigation agreement with the MBTA. Haddad will also see if other towns want to join with Cohasset in the effort.

Two letters were sent recently to the MBTA — one from Cohasset selectmen and the other from Cohasset and four other towns — asking the transit authority not to proceed with designing grade crossings until the quad-gate issue is resolved.

"Then all of a sudden sitting on my desk are plans for six grade crossings at 60 percent design," Haddad said.

In the first stage of a dispute resolution, the MBTA and town's authorized representative (Haddad) agree to confer in good faith to resolve the dispute (in this case, quad gates) to their mutual satisfaction. If the matter cannot be resolved, the dispute could reach the second stage involving a meeting with the general manager of the MBTA, a senior official of the state Executive Office of Transportation and selectmen. If not satisfactorily resolved at that level, either party may seek legal remedies for breach of the mitigation agreement.

Construction of the 17.7-mile Greenbush line is currently on hold pending resolution of outstanding permitting and right-of-way issues. Gov. Mitt Romney has said he would also use this time to review the cost of the estimated $464 million project.

Three Generations of Rug Making
Since the early 1900's the Jafri family has been making and selling rugs around the world. Just outside of Lahore Pakistan is the original Dover workshop where many of our rugs are still made today, the same way they were made back then- by hand.

Rugs in School
A rug can teach you alot about art, history, culture, and tradition. We can learn about the tradition of rug making. Every year, school children visit our store and design their own rugs.

Party host beaten up; felony charges sought

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A group of about seven uninvited visitors at a Fourth of July holiday party allegedly caused an altercation that sent the party host to the hospital, Police Officer Rick Grassie said.

The event has resulted in Cohasset police seeking summonses for three Cohasset men and one Scituate man — who are all in their 20s — who will face felony charges of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon. Police declined to release the names of the alleged perpetrators before they are arraigned later this month at Quincy District Court. They have not been arrested because they had already left upon the arrival of police. Police are still investigating the incident; the men could face more charges, and others may also be charged, Grassie said.

Grassie said the incident actually occurred in two parts with police called to the latter.

He said several Cohasset and Scituate young adults went uninvited to a party at a house on South Main Street before midnight on the Fourth of July and were asked to leave. At that time, a physical confrontation apparently took place between several members of the uninvited group and invited guests, Grassie said. There was also a comment allegedly made that one of the uninvited individuals had a handgun in his pocket, although no handgun was ever shown.

But punches were thrown and one member of the uninvited group allegedly used a skateboard as a weapon, Grassie said. One of the guests sustained a broken tooth in the fracas.

Then the uninvited group abruptly left only to return at about 3 a.m., July 5 when "quite a brawl" occurred and police were called by a guest who said his friend was beaten up and needed help, Grassie said. The resident of the home was allegedly struck with a skateboard and punched and kicked about the face and body. He was transported to South Shore Hospital where he was treated and released. Others had minor scrapes and bruises, no one else required medical treatment.

Alcohol was not a factor in the incident, he said. It was not clear how many invited guests were in attendance at the party, police said.

Railing is approved for First Parish Meetinghouse

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Change is taking place on Cohasset Common. The Cohasset Common Historic District Commission has given permission for one of the town's oldest buildings, the First Parish Church Meetinghouse, to add a new railing at its main door. The railing will provide safer access through the front door during Sunday services.

The building has a wrought iron railing only at its side door, making front door more challenging for those who need the support of a rail while entering the building.

The main door is currently opened only for weddings, but with the addition of new matching wrought-iron railings at the front, the main door could be opened for worship services on Sunday as well.

Any proposed changes to the buildings in the common district, need to come before the Commission for approval before they can be executed. The railings were approved by the Commission Monday.

"It's one of those things where I thought, why call a meeting because it's so appropriate?" said Commission Chairman Marian Atkinson.

The Meetinghouse is one of the few of its kind to have survived throughout the years, and is therefore a treasure to have in town. With its pitched-roof and attached square tower it reflects a style commonly seen in the 1700s.

While keeping the meetinghouse as historically accurate as possible is a goal for the Commission, there were changes made over a century ago. Built as a simple pitched-roof building in 1747, the meetinghouse acquired its entrance porch in 1768 and its square tower in 1799. As the years went on, more change took place with the installation of stoves in 1822, carpets in 1842 and the clock in 1864.

In 1992, the Parish petitioned the town for the addition of a septic system to make a lavatory available to parishioners on the premises.

Social activities keep Harborview apartments hopping

Tenants Assoc. plans tons of fun

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

If Arlene Tuohey's enthusiasm is a gauge, then the social life at Harborview Apartments is going to put the rest of Cohasset to shame.

Tuohey, who took over the helm of the tenants' association at the 64-unit complex in May, brings a wealth of ideas that are bound to get many of the residents out of their apartments for lots of fun and socializing.

"To have [activities] generated, it gets people out," Tuohey said, noting that once people begin socializing, they are more likely to keep participating in different activities.

Joining Tuohey on the association are vice president, Grace Thompson, dual treasurers, Ken Downing and Mary Casey, who served as president before Tuohey, and secretary Janice Rosano.

Casey had many successful endeavors during her term, which led to a new rug, curtains, TV, and air conditioner for the Harborview Senior Center as well as a gas grill, donated by Joseph's Hardware. These changes in the Center will help facilitate many of the social activities Tuohey has planned.

Every month, seniors are invited to attend movie night. The last movie showing was "Field of Dreams" that turned movie night into baseball night. Those in attendance were only allowed admission if wearing a baseball cap.

During the scene with Fenway Park, movie-goers were brought peanuts straight from the roaster by "peanut vendors" shouting "get your hot peanuts," just like they do at the games.

Hot dogs were also cooked on the new grill. Casey was provided the first hot dog as a thank you for her efforts.

With the addition of the grill came the addition of a new social event, and grill night is now held every Wednesday night for residents.

The social activities planned at Harborview provide interaction for residents who might not get out too much otherwise. Tuohey said those who wish to attend and are not able to come on their own can be "picked up if they need it," so they won't miss out on the festivities. She feels the gatherings are very beneficial for residents because, "now, they have a chance to get out and see their neighbors," and can do so in a social setting.

Other gatherings at the center include a pot-luck dinner every quarter, and Tuohey said the last one "went really well." Also, what began as a Monday morning ritual of coffee and muffins in the Center to help tenants get up and out of bed to start the new week, has grown to an every morning affair.

This spring, a garden club was started for residents, of which Thompson is the head. As the former president of the Weymouth Garden Club, "Green Thumb Gracie" as she is affectionately known, began the club to spread her love of plants and flowers.

While the club is temporarily on hiatus for the summer, as all plants are in and are doing well for this season, Thompson said she is continuously working on her own garden, keeping many in their containers until she has found the perfect spot for planting.

"A garden is never finished," she said.

Thompson takes her flowers to sell at the Farmer's Market on the common every Thursday, as well as hand painted crafts.

Come this fall, the garden club will start up again, because summer plants will need to be cleared and bulbs must be planted for the coming spring. Thompson said she can't wait to help other tenants make their gardens beautiful.

Residents at Harborview held a tea last September for a retiring visiting nurse. The day was such a success that a monthly birthday tea is planned for Harborview residents celebrating their birthdays each month.

Last September's tea was "absolutely elegant," said Thompson. With patchwork quilts in pastel colors and china and flowers on the tables, it was a special treat for those in attendance.

"The pink laurels were in bloom," said Cohasset Housing Authority Director Marilyn LeBlanc, noting how well the inside and outside complemented each other that day.

"Everyone worked hard to make sure it was a great day, even Mother Nature," LeBlanc said.

The last movie showing was "Field of Dreams" that turned movie night into baseball night. Those in attendance were only allowed admission if wearing a baseball cap.

Officers of the Harborview Tenant's Association, Treasurer Mary Casey, President Arlene Tuohey, Vice President Grace Thompson, and Secretary Janice Rosano work hard to make sure the seniors have plenty of activities to keep them busy.

Along with the tea will come the beginning of a chapter of the Red Hat Society, which all Cohasset residents who are at least 50 years old are welcome to join.

The Society, which began in California and was inspired by a poem titled, "Warning" which begins, "When I am an old woman..." makes reference to wearing a purple dress with a red hat, and inspired the women to meet wearing just that for various social events. The trend caught on and chapters have spread all the way to the east coast. There are currently chapters in Scituate, Hull, Marshfield, Pembroke, and many other South Shore towns, which have been filled to capacity, so the ladies decided to begin their own.

While the Society is intended for members who are 50 or older, an exception can be made for those who are underage and would like to join. However, those who are under 50 are not entitled to wear purple and red, and must wear a lavender dress and pink hat until they have earned the right to wear the bolder colors.

LeBlanc said Harborview is subsidized by the Department of Housing and Community Development, and the Tenants' Association receives $250 a year to cover business expenses. The recreational activities are not covered by this money, so fund-raisers must be held for the money needed to carry out their plans.

During movie nights, admission is $1 for anyone who attends, which covers the expenses for the night. For some of the more elaborate get-togethers, more money is obviously needed, which Tuohey said will be provided through the proceeds from their upcoming yard sale. Handmade crafts from the residents will be available at this sale as well as the Christmas Bazaar planned for this winter.

With all the activities offered at Harborview, it's no surprise that there are 26 names on the waiting list for an apartment with an average wait of between two to three years for an opening. For anyone interested in securing housing at Harborview, LeBlanc recommends, "Apply before you need it because the waiting list is long."

Lou Harvey's presence helps preserve the past

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Filled with a passion for the past, and a deep love for the town he has come to call home, Lou Harvey has taken his hobby of studying history to a new level as a member of the Committee on Town History.

After reading the opening lines of the first volume of the Narrative History of Cohasset, the King Street resident was intrigued by the prose, and was inspired to become involved in the town's preservation. In fact, the passage made such an impact, he committed it to memory and even had a copy framed for his home.

In the passage, author E. Victor Bigelow wrote, "It would be a species of impertinence to the majority of the readers of this narrative if one should tell where Cohasset is by the number of miles from some other place. Here is their home; and a long row of ancestors, born and buried here for two hundred years, establishes this as the starting point from which they locate all other places, but which itself needs no locating."

"I loved the idea of having Cohasset be the center of the universe for the people who live there," Harvey said.

Harvey loves living in Cohasset, but wasn't always familiar with the South Shore. He was born in Guatemala where he lived until the age of nine. From there, he moved with his family to Jamaica where he lived for the next 12 years, and then moved to New York, where he lived until moving to "beautiful Massachusetts" in 1991.

Hearing of the Committee in 1996, Harvey felt it was the perfect opportunity to become involved with the preservation of the town's history, and joined. He became involved with the educational aspect of the group, and is now the Chairman of the Education Subcommittee, which has worked to incorporate the volumes of the town's history into the educational system.

"The whole principle was for the volumes to not just be a book you read, put on a shelf and forget," Harvey said.

The Committee wanted to mobilize the awareness of history, and Harvey was very excited to help make the past accessible to everyone in town, especially kids.

Chairman of the Committee Wig Pierson said he "cannot say enough" about Harvey and the invaluable services he has provided to the Committee.

"He's a terrific man, both as a consummate professional and also as a dear friend," he said. "He's a very humble man and I have the highest regard for him."

Harvey's efforts, along with those of the entire subcommittee, have been rewarded with the completion of a set of six illustrated timelines, based on Cohasset's three books on town history, which will serve as a way for students to tie Cohasset's past into world events. Made up of six different colored wall panels, the timelines cover events from the town's inception to the present. The subcommittee also worked to complete large, color maps of the Cohasset to be displayed at different locations around town.

Pierson said the timelines and maps were "all a result of Lou's work," adding that Harvey is a "tremendous asset to any organization he is a part of."

Committee member Jackie Dormitzer said Harvey's creativity helps bring projects together and said that he is always good at thinking of marketing ideas, some of which utilize technology.

"He can show you something you might never have thought of before," she said.

Dormitzer, who is the author of Volume III of the town history, also said that Harvey's people skills have been an asset to the Committee, since he is "such a gentleman" and knows how to act as a mediator when a discussion is brought to the table. He can help people see the other side of the argument and is also very gracious to those who do not share his views.

Lou Harvey, left, and Nancy Garrison show off one of the new town history timelines which are now part of the school curriculum. Harvey is chairman of the Education Subcommittee of the Committee on Town History.

Harvey's love of the past can also been seen through his membership on the Board of Trustees at Plymouth Plantation. "I was just on the Mayflower for the fourth of July," he said.

When not living in the past, Harvey runs the Dalbar company in Boston, dealing with finances on a day to day basis. He is currently researching the impact of tax cuts on 401K plans.

Another passion of Harvey's is jazz music, proving he is truly a man who wears many hats. He has created the C.P. Harvey Memorial fund in remembrance of his father Cyril Percival Harvey, which he hopes will provide the basis for a solid jazz curriculum at the school for years to come.

While Harvey has enjoyed his time on the various committees, he doesn't see himself joining other town boards any time soon. He enjoys the flexibility that comes with joining a brand new committee. "We write the rules," he said, and added a new group doesn't need to worry so much about "the politics of it all" and can concentrate more on what it wants to accomplish.

Harvey, a self-described "eternal-optimist" said he knew the subcommittee's endeavors would be successful. As residents of the town, committee members are able to have a big impact with the information they provide because they know the town intimately.

He thinks more government should be local for that very reason. Larger branches of government do not know the school system on a personal level, and he believes the schools need to be "developing people's standards beyond the hard numbers."

If education were changed in classrooms to reflect the different knowledge and cultural content, which naturally differs from school to school, he believes students would get much more out of the learning experience.

"What's happening in Cohasset wouldn't necessarily fly in Butte, Montana," he said.

But, no matter what he is involved with throughout the day, above everything else, Harvey is always very grateful life has brought him to where he is.

"I feel like I'm going on vacation every time I come home," he said.

around watching TV."

In his first 10 minutes of business on Monday, Zack had three customers, and said he will definitely be having more stands in the future.

For larger businesses such as Victoria's Pizza, customers have been drawn in not only to find salvation in the air-conditioned restaurant, but as a convenient alternative when it seems too hot to turn on a stove. Flushed-faced mothers and children looking for food to order mingled with the normal lunch crowd of workers stopping in for a quick bite.

Owner Ramin Doorandish said he has seen a noticeable change in the customers he has been serving, with more local residents "who don't want to cook" ordering food.

Doorandish also said the types of food people are ordering has changed with the weather, and they have been selling "a lot more salad and cold subs."

For stores like Cohasset Hardware, the heat brings a surge in fan sales, which until a few weeks ago had seemed to be piling up in the aisles of many local stores.

"We sell a lot of fans when the weather this like this," said owner, James Watson on Monday who also had many fans running in his own store. "They say it's going to be even hotter tomorrow."

The Cohasset Swim Center can always count on having a steady flow of guests throughout the summer, but when the weather becomes too much to bear, their numbers tend to go up even further.

"We definitely do see a lot more people when the sun is beating down," said Aquatic Director Darlene Coetsch.

While the Center has a strong amount of patrons who are members of the pool and come on a regular basis, Coetsch said non-members are welcome and will be charged a $5 walk-in fee at the door. She also said it there is a noticeable increase in non-members on the hotter days.

For every member who comes on a regular basis, the hot days seem to bring more guests, and smiling faces of grateful friends who have found a place to cool off.

For those who sell ice cream, this weather has caused business to skyrocket. Driving down 3A on any hot summer day, there is sure to be a line of cars with people waiting for a frosty treat from JJ's Dairy Hut.

Christina Barbuto who works at JJ's said the hot weather has brought a large number of customers out for ice cream, and business has been pretty steady all summer long, even with the less than warm weather at summer's outset.

"Even with the rain we've been busy," she said, adding that as soon as the sun would come out, even more people would come by.

"We have our regulars and we love them," Barbuto said, but the numbers increase when the temperature does. Many local sports teams come by for an ice cream after a game, and Barbuto said sometimes the team sponsored by JJ's will show up. "They're so cute in their uniforms," she said.

But year after year, no matter what the weather, Barbuto said there is always one thing JJ's can count on – its patrons.

"Cohasset people have been super-nice to us. They make great customers."

Bill Good joins Dean & Hamilton

Nancy and Tom Hamilton are pleased to announce Bill Good of Cohasset is the newest member of the sales team at Dean and Hamilton Realtors.

A real estate broker for over 20 years, Bill has been involved across the South Shore in a number of home design-build and renovation projects that have been widely acclaimed in these communities.

A resident of Cohasset for 27 years, Bill previously lived in Scituate for four years. A graduate of Boston Latin School and Saint Anselm College, Bill and his wife, Betsy Reardon Good, a teacher at the South Shore Community Center, are the parents of three grown children, and they have renovated several of their principal residences in Scituate and Cohasset. Bill has also coached many others in a number of commercial and residential projects. Bill's unique ability to realize maximum value for both buyers and sellers has brought him a loyal following over the years.

An outdoor enthusiast, Bill grew up in West Roxbury and spent summers at Green Harbor in Marshfield. Active in boating circles throughout his life, he has been a member of the Cohasset Yacht Club for 18 years. A parishioner at St. Anthony's Church, he has also been involved in youth, civic, and town government activities for over 20 years. He was appointed to the Personnel Committee in Cohasset in 1983 and elected to three five-year terms on the Cohasset Planning Board, beginning in 1989. Bill is currently the Planning Board Vice Chairman and he also serves on the town's Growth and Development Committee. Bill's in-depth knowledge of land use, zoning, planning and architectural issues, combined with his passion for the unique real estate investment that the South Shore marketplace represents, serves buyers and sellers who are looking to align their respective visions for maximizing their real estate investments.

Working in real estate transactions with Bill provides clients with an experience and a vision that sets him apart from everyone else, and he looks forward to serving new clients in the future.

Bump outs on trial

We urge everyone to remain calm and not besiege Town Hall with calls to bump the bump-out plan for the village until it's had a fair trial.

By now, most of you know "bump outs" are intended to be pedestrian friendly peninsulas at crosswalks to allow those on foot to venture out beyond the parked cars to see what's coming before heading across the street.

The bump outs are part of streetscape improvements central to the Village Revitalization Project.

In an effort to gauge how the traffic will flow around the proposed bump outs, the perimeters of the expanded sidewalk sections are being delineated this week with either collapsible flappers or barrels. The bump-out trial is expected to last about two weeks, after which selectmen may opt to fine-tune the plan by reducing the size of the bump outs, or even eliminating some or all of them.

A while back, an effort to determine if a one-way traffic pattern in the Village along Elm Street would work, met with such overwhelming opposition that the test was abandoned after only a few days.

We hope the bump outs aren't found guilty of generating a similar outcry and receive a death sentence before they get an adequate test. The flappers and barrels are there to see if school buses, fire trucks, police cars and all those SUVs can negotiate around them effectively. They are not meant to look good at this stage.

We need to use our imagination as to how they would blend in with a revitalized village that includes new sidewalks and curbs, re-lined parking spaces and re-paved streets. Eventually all the telephone poles will come down when the utilities go underground, and new light posts will be installed..

Revitalization of the village is important and the design plans are ready to move ahead at last. Construction that will include the infrastructure to bury utility wires could start as soon as the fall.

However, the improvements are planned to last 50 years. So before you issue your verdict, give the bump outs a chance. Keep an open mind and see if they can make a difference not only for pedestrian safety but also as a way to help make the village a more pleasant place for pedestrians, who all too often must take a back seat to motor vehicle traffic.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Grant appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

The Directors and Staff of Seaside Adventures, as well as the Board of the Center for Student Coastal Research would like to thank the South Shore Playhouse Associates for their most generous $1,000 grant. This is the first Summer for Seaside Adventures and we are pleased to report that we have enrolled more than 45 campers, from Cohasset, Hingham and Scituate in this grades 3-6 marine oriented program. We were faced with a variety of start-up and operating costs in launching this program and we couldn't have done it as professionally and thoroughly without the SSPHA's vote of confidence and support.

We do have a limited numbers of spaces available in the remaining two Seaside Adventures Sessions, so please go to our website for more information www.ccscr.org Thanks once again from the students and staff of Seaside Adventures.

HEALTH NOTES

Getting a handle on lawn care in town

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

We would also ask about the average frequency and weight of fertilizer now being applied, as well as their knowledge of State required pesticide regulations.

Last May, we wrote an article about lawn care proposing to use the Common as a testing ground to perform a value estimate of the various lawn-care expedients to reduce the use of chemicals on turf within the town. Now one of the wettest springs on record has turned our wetlands and waterways into an ugly brown outlook. We have no measurements which have recorded the change from clear to the dark turbidity which now meets us in every stream. We see the increase of "soap suds" (not really soap, but dead vegetable matter suspended in the water) in our waterways. And of course the insects. Mosquitoes, gnats, midges, and other flying creatures; more than ever in recent memory. The Board is hearing increased calls for spraying and revitalization of the Mosquito Control Committee.

Of course, all of these conditions are symptoms of a more difficult problem. As a recent limnology study of Lily Pond has shown, or as anyone going by it should tell from the increase of milfoil floating on the surface, or by the 'pond' water taste, we are permitting the entrance of too many nutrients into our waterways. It is no longer just a single problem of too many failed septic systems or too much lawn fertilizer, or just one more discharge of high nitrogen/phosphorous material into our aquifers and watersheds. It's part of a national culture which lavishes too many goodies on ourselves and our property. Perhaps we should call it the pink flamingo syndrome.

But the time has come to begin to think about and plan a change. Accordingly, the Board of Health, at the request of several other boards, and with much public support, has embarked on a plan. This won't cost the Town anything, a principal tenet of our thinking. But it will call for a little effort on the part of all of us. First, the Board will send Bob Jackson, our Police Chief a simple sheet giving parking instructions for all lawn-care professionals within the town. These will be given by police officers, on regular patrol, to lawn-care trucks they see parked by the side of the road. This is a helpful expedient to improve traffic. When the Officer approaches a member of the lawn cleanup crew, he will give out the advisory, and request a business card. These cards will be turned over to the Board of Health and a listing will be compiled of the lawn-care organizations working within Cohasset.

With this list in hand, the Board will prepare a questionnaire about turf management practices with questions about environmental lawn care, the American Garden Club's "American Garden" best practice guide, Integrated Pest Management, etc., things they should know about. We would also ask about the average frequency and weight of fertilizer now being applied, as well as their knowledge of State required pesticide regulations. This is a sneaky way to gather data, but it is something health management officials should know about.

With our new Board of Health list of turf management practitioners, we would then be in a position to publish information about healthy lawn-care practices and characterize the organizations in some way which would favor best turf management practice..

From there, it is only a step away from the action the Open Space Committee has requested: that the Board of Health prepare turf management material to be included in a tax bill mailing to all citizens of the Town. After that, and after extensive dialog with Carl Sestito and the DPW, we will begin to think about a best/most economical lawn-are shootout at the Common.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

A plague of aliens: when science fiction becomes reality

COMMON GROUND

AMY WHORF MCGUIGGAN

The way the headlines read lately, you'd think we were all part of some creepy Hollywood sci-fi movie: "Asian fish spawned a local scare," "Invasive, huge fish threaten Great Lakes," "Predator fish may be threat to naive species," "Plan urged to bar alien sea species from U.S.," "Mother Nature terrorism," "Aliens raising eco-havoc," "Nature going awry." Granted, the headline writer's stock in trade is hyperbole and his or her job is to grab our attention before we turn the page, but the spirit of many headlines is not that far off the mark. Our now global world faces any number of ecological threats from plant and animal species that have established themselves in places where a lack of natural enemies allow them to proliferate beyond any human attempts to tame and control.

In the past few columns we've talked about various alien plant species, including the multiflora rose, knotweed, honeysuckles, bittersweet, garlic mustard, loosestrife and porcelain berry, that have invaded our woodlands, open spaces and roadsides. This month, we'll meet a few of the alien creatures that are wreaking insidious havoc on the ecosystem.

There's an old saying in the birdfeeding business that "you get what you feed," and for many of us who casually toss a bit of day old bread or a stale bakery treat out onto the lawn, what we get are house sparrows (Passer domesticus), a highly adaptable bird that is now the most abundant songbird in the world.

I'm feeling a little bit sorry for the house sparrow at the moment. Intensely loyal to particular nesting boxes, they return year after year, as long as they live, and approximately half of all sparrows will survive one year to the next. They found my "bluebird" boxes several years ago and despite my efforts to shoo them away in the hopes of attracting something a bit prettier, they persisted until I finally conceded defeat. They are thriving in my backyard, what with all the food, the bird bath and a 15-year-old cat who, at this point in his life, has had his fill of house sparrow. I'm learning to appreciate them, their cheeriness, industriousness, the way they take their dirt baths in the garden, the way they swoop down and gather up my cat's fur after his brushing. Their "song" isn't so much a lullaby as it is a non-stop dialogue of gregarious chirps. I'm feeling sorry for them because I again witnessed a voracious blue jay pluck a baby bird from the house and carry it off, much to the heartbreaking (mine) distress of the mother who sat on a nearby branch for hours apparently lamenting the loss.

House sparrows, a European native (and not to be confused with our native sparrows), made their first appearance here in the New World in 1851 when they were introduced to combat the plague of inch-worms that were ravaging trees in New York's Central Park, as well as other pests that were interfering with crop production. Homesick immigrants welcomed the introduction of the sparrow, a reminder of their homeland. Within 25 years, however, the introduction had become an onslaught. Opportunistic, the sparrow took advantage of the human presence, the abundance of livestock feed, the plethora of nesting cavities and crevices in building overhangs, eaves and gutters, and the ivies and vines that tangled densely on walls and provided safe cover. In short time the sparrow - no innocent when it comes to preying upon other birds - began to wreak havoc on native song bird populations, displacing other birds, destroying eggs and killing nestlings.

Like all invasive species, plant or animal, house sparrows are habitat generalists, at home most anywhere, whether urban, suburban or rural. They are monogamous birds, pairing for the long-term and remaining bonded throughout and between breeding seasons. The male, with his black "bib" (the larger the bib the more dominant the bird), selects the nest site and builds the nest, a messy, dome-shaped collection of grasses, weeds, paper, cellophane, string, feathers and fur. He aggressively defends his territory - the nest site but not much beyond.

Four to six slightly glossy eggs, spotted with bluish gray, black or brown spots, are laid up to four times each breeding season. Both males and females incubate the eggs, though the female does the bulk of the brooding and both feed the nestlings until they fledge and are on their own about a month later.

For house sparrows, the house is very much a home and the birds will often retreat to the nest on a cold winter's night. Sociable animals, sparrows are happy nesting very close to one another; provided each minds its business and stays within its boundaries.

If the sparrow has a partner in crime it is the common starling (Sturnus vulgaris), another European immigrant whose range continues to expand wherever humans exist. The starling's introduction to America is traced to a group of Shakespeare aficionados who, in 1890, set about to bring to America all the birds mentioned in the Bard's writings. Several dozen of the birds were released in Central Park. Prolific multipliers (another characteristic of alien species), in short time the starting was everywhere — and unwanted. Some estimates put the current widespread population at more than 200 million.

Glossy black with greenish iridescence, and generally healthy and robust, starlings are about the she of a robin. They begin nesting in late February, earlier than native species, commandeering available nesting sites and devouring food resources. The male begins building the bulky nest of grass, twigs, pine needles, rootlets, feathers and fresh leaves and then engages in a wing-waving behavior that attracts a mate who completes the nest Eggs, usually four or five to a clutch, are laid not only in the starling's own nest, but also in the nests of other birds, including woodpeckers, bluebirds, swallows and martins. Considered solitary nesters, nesting apart from one another, starlings do, however, feed, roost and migrate in large flocks.

Despite their lowly status among birdwatchers, starlings do consume huge quantities of insects, including cutworms and Japanese beetles (another alien) and are, themselves, food for several raptors.

If, because birds flit in and out of our daily lives, we are unaware of the toll taken on native species by alien invaders, the same cannot be said of the alien blights that fell our majestic trees. Before our eyes, we watch, helplessly, as beloved stands of generations old elms, hemlocks and oaks die their slow death, ravaged by Dutch elm disease, the wooly adelgid and the Gypsy moth.

One of the most destructive pests of the Eastern hardwood forest, the Gypsy moth was introduced in 1869 when a Tufts University professor, crossbreeding moths in an effort to create a moth capable of producing large quantities of silk, inadvertently allowed several of his moths to escape. At the time, though the proper authorities were notified, no measures were taken to round up the escapees. No damage, it seemed, had been done. Until a generation later when caterpillars surfaced in Medford, stripping trees of their foliage and ravaging gardens and yards.

The Gypsy moth passes through four Wages, egg, larva, pupa and adult, the moth stage. Only the larvae, the caterpillar, do the damage. The eggs, buff-colored when first laid, are deposited on tree branches and trunks and hatch just as most trees are budding. The larvae, suspended on silken threads, are dispersed naturally by the wind or artificially by people and vehicles. After a series of progressive molts called instars, during which the larvae feed by night on foliage, they reach maturity between mid-June and early July. The older Gypsy moth caterpillar is easily recognized by its five pairs of raised blue spots and six pairs of raised red spots.

Pupation, which takes place under bark and in crevices, lasts from one to two weeks. Male moths emerge first and begin their search for females, heavy with eggs. Eggs are laid in July and August, close to where the female pupated, after which both the male and female adults die. A month later, embryos develop into larvae and winter over in the eggs that hatch the following spring.

Gypsy moth larvae feed on many different species of trees and shrubs though they prefer the hardwoods including oak, apple, sweet gum, basswood and birch. During periods of dense moth populations, larvae will feed on most any vegetation.

Just how much a tree will suffer, long-term, at the jaws of Gypsy moth larvae depends on the extent of the defoliation, the number of consecutive defoliations, and the overall health of the tree. Healthy trees can usually withstand one or two consecutive defoliations of more than fifty percent, but a tree weakened by drought may succumb after a single defoliation. Despite their ability to take down an entire forest, Gypsy moths do have a few natural enemies - wasps, ants, chickadees, starlings, blue jays, robins, chipmunks, mice, squirrels and raccoons, as well as several bacteria, fungi and viruses — whose populations, when healthy themselves, can assist in reducing Gypsy moth infestations.

One could go on and on with the list of aliens running amok the world over. There's the Asian longhorn beetle, ravaging maple trees in New York and Chicago. Brown tree snakes are wiping out Guam's bird populations. New England comb jellies, harmless in our waters, are decimating Black Sea anchovies. The American bullfrog, native to the East Coast, is devouring native frog species out West. The nutria, a South American rodent, is chomping away on mid-Atlantic wetlands. Asian clams are devouring phytoplankton in San Francisco Bay. The cactus moth is chewing its way through Florida. Zebra mussels, delivered in the ballast of vessels, have become a scourge throughout the Great Lakes and Mississippi regions. Mute swans, escapees from parks and estate gardens, are threatening native bird and plant populations. And, perhaps creepiest of all, the Northern snakehead fish, an Asian native with a voracious appetite and the ability to "walk" short distances on land and live out of water for up to three days, has wildlife officials bracing for an invasion in local ponds and lakes.

If it all weren't so real, it would make for riveting science fiction.

We can all help to combat the spread of alien species:

- Do not import exotic animals or plants
- Encourage local nurseries and landscapers to carry and plant native species. Wherever possible, replace invasive species with natives
- Set out bird-specific seed such as thistle for goldfinches, peanuts for blue jays and safflower for cardinals to encourage diversity in the backyard
- Hang nesting boxes with smaller entry holes to discourage house sparrows
- Keeps trees and shrubs healthy by watering and fertilizing. Landscape with species such as ash, hickory, dogwood and conifers that are not favored by Gypsy moths

Remove flaps of bark and dead trees and branches that may harbor Gypsy moth larvae and pupae

- Destroy Gypsy moth egg masses by soaking in kerosene or burning
- Never release aquarium fish or plants or exotic pets into the wild
- Clean shoe soles, tire treads and all outdoor equipment that may collect hitchhiking seeds or eggs
- Clean boat bottoms and bilge water before transporting boats from one body of water to another

Lawsuits loom over fast food

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

When I was young and ice covered most of the earth and I found that the needle on the scales down at Liggett's Drug Store was leaning too far right, I knew just what to do.

I'd go on a diet.

I'd stop putting butter on my breakfast toast. I'd take a pass when they passed the mashed potatoes. I'd switched from sugar to saccharine, which had not yet been ruled hazardous to my health. Once I reached legal age, and sometimes before that, I'd give up beer at Cora's or Upjohn's Cozy Cafe.

If that didn't work, I'd turn to old Doc Pearlstein for some of those little pink heart-shaped pills called "dextro-amphetamine sulfates." And I'd exercise, like running down to Liggett's to get on the scale and see how much I lost that week.

Don't think the threat of legal action against the fast food people is an idle one.

The diet must have worked because I remember doing it at least a hundred times.

I tell this story because if I were overweight now — and there are those who think I am even though I explain to them that it's all muscle — if I were overweight now I'd adopt a different strategy, one that involved neither "dexies" nor a quick trip to the drug store scales.

First of all, I'd determine who is responsible for the present state of my once finely tuned body. Certainly it's not I. Is it McDonald's for putting all that animal fat in their hamburgers? Is it Wendy's for frying their fries in yucky grease? Or is it Burger King for slipping all that sugar in my cokes?

Then I'd consult with bond counsel to see who had the deepest pockets. And not just McDonald's, Wendy's or Burger King. Maybe it's the beef industry for letting their cows grow too fat. Or maybe it's the town for permitting the curb cut that let me drive in all innocence up to the take-out window.

Then I'd hire me a lawyer, probably Richard Daynard, a professor at Northeastern's School of Law, who was one of the pioneers in the legal battle against the tobacco industry that resulted in a settlement of $246 billion to be paid by Big Tobacco to the states over 25 years.

You may have read about Professor Daynard in Sunday's Globe.

He was chairman of a secret meeting, held in what was described as "a Back Bay conference room," in which a number of Northeastern School of Law and Tufts School of Medicine professors laid the groundwork for an assault on Big Food.

Don't think the threat of legal action against the fast food people is an idle one. It's already brought changes to the industry and the first lawyer has yet to submit his first bill.

Kraft Foods, which is a subsidiary of Philip Morris (now the Atria Group) and owns Oreo cookies, Ritz crackers, Post cereals and Oscar Mayer meats, already has made plans to cut the amount of sugar, fats and calories in its Oreos and some cheese products.

In order to move things along a little quicker, Law Professor John Banzhaf III of George Washington University has sent certified letters to the major fast food outlets demanding that they post warnings that fatty foods are addictive.

This, he said, is the first step toward filing a lawsuit against the fast food giants in six to nine months.

Romney's vetoes set stage for showdown

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

An analysis and recap of the week in state government.

The final chapter of the 2003 fiscal story is in some ways the most complicated, and the plot line was developed last week.

On the face of things, events were straightforward. Gov. Mitt Romney announced $201 million in vetoes. Protesters protested. Legislators vowed to override.

But since when was politics about the face of things? While the elements of the story are simple, the politics and decision-making behind them are quite complex, because there are so many moving parts.

The fundamental question is one of perspective. Were the governor's vetoes the clumsy and compassionless abandonment of a campaign promise? Or were they the difficult but disciplined actions of a strong leader confronted with irresponsible legislative largesse?

Both sides had a claim on the truth. But one side had the votes. As always in Massachusetts – well, in the Massachusetts Statehouse – that side was the Democrats.

Legislators have to figure out which of the 372 vetoes their members want to override, and which would receive an override vote by not just a majority, but a two-thirds majority. And not just in one branch – House Speaker Thomas Finneran and Senate President Robert Travaglini had to coordinate their communications all week long, determining which vetoes could be killed in both branches. Beyond that, if the governor is correct about the overspending, legislators who put appropriations back will have to plausibly counter Romney's claim that they are throwing the budget out of balance.

So, while the initial statements out of the legislative chambers were public — Travaglini, D-E. Boston, said Romney didn't just cut to the bone, but "cut right through the bone" — they quickly retreated to their offices, and the parade of visits and phone calls began. That was the real story of the week.

In many ways, the underlying debate is about whether to raise taxes — and whether the votes would be there this fall if a tax bill were brought forward. Even here, the politics are tricky because the public mood is nuanced. As word of the layoffs and program cancellations hit home at the city and town level, some constituents have become more pro-tax than their lawmakers. In the aggregate, budget cutting moves people into the "yes" camp on raising their own taxes. At the same time, legislators know what an ominous — or impressive — percentage of their voters were ready to repeal the income tax last year.

In the end, both sides claimed to be on the side of virtue, and will continue to do so. But their success, and claim on power, depends on divining, as well as defining what the people want. Services or stable tax rates? Compassion or aggressive management? The answer, of course, is that the people want everything; the truth is they can't have it. The next question becomes, what do they want more of? Partly it depends on how well the politician couches his or her priorities, and whether the media plays the message as the politician intends. But in large part, it's a guessing game.

Legislators have to figure out which of the 372 vetoes their members want to override, and which would receive an override vote by not just a majority, but a two-thirds majority.

The story the week was in the details more than the bottom line.

• Vetoes detailed, setting up reopening of budget issues — The governor said this fiscal year's budget, after his vetoes, totals $21.1 billion and should come in $300 million below last fiscal year's spending. Critics said that spending does not account for hundreds of millions of dollars in spending pushed off budget, indicating the fight ahead. House Majority Leader Salvatore DiMasi, D-Boston, said a "significant amount" of the 372 vetoes will be overridden — but again, that's subject to the two branches' internal debate.

A summary of the veto highlights, or lowlights, depending on your perspective:

The governor vetoed $57 million more from local aid-related accounts and an infamous 65-cent per-prescription pharmacy tax. He also cancelled provisions:

— Allowing two-way bilingual education programs

— Allowing education and training to count toward the welfare work requirement;

— Permitting new MCAS appeals on behalf of special education students;

— Granting the turnpike authority oversight of Interstates 395, 84 and 291;

— Expanding the scope of the Boston Municipal Court to include all Suffolk County courts;

— Moving the ABCC under the treasurer's oversight (Romney also vetoed $940,000 in ABCC funding);

— Funding legal aid for the poor, mentally ill, and inmates.

The governor also vetoed:

— $5 million remaining in water and sewer rate relief fund;

— $7.8 million in contract assistance for drinking water projects;

— $2 million free school breakfast program in low-income districts;— $750,000 in aid for the agency that runs public zoos.

And Romney also returned, with recommendation for amendment, provisions that substantially alter the Quinn Bill education perk for police officers; all but cancel the teacher-recruitment signing bonus program; and establish a bulk-purchasing program for medications bought by state government. The complexity of the veto battle was underscored by a sub-debate that opened up over whether Romney's proposed changes in bulk purchasing would wind up denying medicine to poor Medicaid recipients.

• Environmental changes bring worry, vow of improvement — The administration took the battle for public opinion to the Charles River Esplanade, arguing in a press conference the merger of the Metropolitan District Commission and the Department of Environmental Management will improve the quality of parks and recreational opportunities. Environmentalists are supportive, but nervous about a cost-cutting agenda.

• Burton says Bulger lied — Indiana Congressman Dan Burton, who initiated the investigation into the FBI's use of informants that brought William Bulger to the witness stand, said he thought the UMass president lied in his testimony to the Government Reform Committee last month. Bulger testified he couldn't remember ever talking to the FBI about trying to convince his brother to surrender; the Boston Globe ran a story right after Bulger's testimony in which a former FBI agent said he remembers discussing the matter with Bulger. "Do I think he lied? Yes," Burton told the Globe, and he claimed the chairman of the committee is investigating the possibility Bulger may not have told the truth.

• Romney spikes special contract for NAGE leaders — The governor said he was ordering a halt to special work rules for 12 union officials of the National Association of Government Employees, under which they could receive full pay, and credit for pension benefits, while spending most of their work week dealing with labor and union issues. Former Gov. Paul Cellucci negotiated the special arrangements for the union leaders; NAGE supported Cellucci in his gubernatorial campaign.

• Tougher drunk driving law signed — Lawmakers approved legislation that defines anyone blowing a .08 or higher as intoxicated. Massachusetts was the last state in the nation where defense attorneys could argue that a given reading on the Breathalyzer wasn't necessarily proof the driver was drunk. The governor and police officials hailed the enactment of the new law as the traditionally boozy July Fourth long weekend arrived.

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for over 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' votes on one roll call from the week of June 30-July 4. This week's report also includes local representatives' and senators' votes on one roll call from prior sessions on consideration of each branch's version of a package designed to give cities and towns more fiscal and management flexibility and revenue raising options. The House and Senate have yet to agree on a compromise version of this plan that is designed to help communities make up for some of this year's local aid cuts.

CONFERENCE COMMITTEE DRUNKEN DRIVING LAW (H 3929)

House 153-0, approved the conference committee version of a bill establishing a "per se" drunken driving law in Massachusetts. The legislation, approved by the Senate on a voice vote and signed into law by Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey on June 30, makes it illegal for a motorist to drive with a blood alcohol content (BAC) of .08 percent or higher. Current law provides that a BAC of more than .08 is only one piece of evidence of intoxication and leaves it up to a court to consider all evidence when determining if a driver was legally impaired. Another provision in the bill increases the automatic license suspension period for refusal to take a Breathalyzer test from 120 days to 180 days and reduces the period from 90 days to 30 days if a driver takes the test and fails. Supporters, noting that Massachusetts was the only state without a per se law, said that 234 of the state's 477 traffic deaths in 2001 were alcohol-related and argued that the new law will save lives and decrease the number of drunken driver-related injuries. They said that the change in license suspension periods would increase the incentive for motorists to take the Breathalyzer test. Some pointed out that the state has already forfeited some $11 million in federal funds by not having a per se law and will lose millions more unless the legislation is signed into law by June 30. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).

CRIMINAL BACKGROUND CHECKS (H 4002)

House 100-53, approved an amendment allowing city and town officials to obtain criminal offender record information (CORI) from their local police chiefs rather than directly from the state's Criminal History Systems Board. Amendment supporters said local police chiefs can provide this vital information on potential school employees faster than the state which often takes several weeks to respond. They noted that a recently-approved law also requires background checks on volunteers who work in schools and argued that a school cannot wait weeks to check on a parent who volunteers to chaperone a school dance that is being held in a few days. Amendment opponents said these reports are currently only available directly from the state because the state is set up to meet the requirement to delete certain information from some offenders' raw records including juvenile incidents, non-convictions and restraining orders. They noted that police departments receive the entire raw record from the state and are not equipped to edit it to comply with state law. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment allowing police chiefs to provide a CORI report to local officials. A "Nay" vote is against allowing it).

DESIGN/BUILD PROJECTS (S 2010)

Senate 7-30, rejected a "design/build" amendment allowing cities and towns to contract with a single contractor to design and construct building projects. Amendment supporters said that under current law, communities are required to select a company to design the project and then solicit bids from companies for the separate construction phase. They argued that allowing one company to design and build the entire project would save time and money and noted that Texas and Florida allow this practice and are able to complete projects more efficiently and at a lower cost than Massachusetts. Some amendment opponents said the design/build system simply does not work well and argued that communities do not have the manpower or resources to manage it. Others acknowledged that some of the state's archaic construction laws should be changed but argued that a design/build system goes too far. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment allowing a design/build system. A "Nay" vote is against allowing it).

OBITUARIES

Catherine M. Turner

Catherine M. (Cheever) Turner, 83, of Cohasset, a former office manager, died July 2, 2003, at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

Mrs. Turner worked at Hugo's Lighthouse restaurant in Cohasset for 30 years. She previously was an office manager at Harvard University.

She enjoyed traveling around the world with her husband after retiring in 1983.

She was born in Boston and lived in Cohasset for 52 years.

Mrs. Turner was a graduate of Dorchester High School and Boston Business School.

Wife of the late Arthur L. Turner, she leaves two daughters, Cathy J. Pryles and Elizabeth A. Venti, both of Hanover, and two grandsons.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset.

Interment was private.

Arrangements are by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Donations may be made to the Animal Rescue League of Boston, 599 Washington St., Pembroke 02359.

James E. Tyeryar

James E. Tyeryar

James E. Tyeryar, 70 of Cohasset and West Yarmouth, died June 26, 2003, at his home after a brief illness.

Mr. Tyeryar was a resident of Cohasset for 40 years as well as a general contractor in the South Shore area, and the original owner of the Cohasset Heights Landfill.

Originally from Frederick, Md., he worked on government projects at Camp David, Md., and Camp Detrech, Md. and did general contracting around the area. He was a member of the American Legion and VFW Posts. During the Korean War, he served as a Staff Sergeant in the Air Force, in Tule, Greenland.

He was also a member of the Board of Directors at the Pilgrim Co-op Bank for many years and was on the Finance and Building Committee. He also served as an usher at St. Anthony's Parish for many years.

He leaves his wife of 50 years, Eilleen (Mello), and his daughters, Ann E. Tyeryar of Weymouth, and Kathleen Milani of West Palm Beach, Fla.; his grandson, Andrew Henry of Boston; two brothers Charles and his wife, Gloria, of North Fort Myers, Fla. and Harry of Frederick, Md.; a sister, Mary Hubbard and her husband Bill of Reading; many in-laws, and nieces and nephews.

A funeral Mass was held in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset. Internment was in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

Arrangements were handled by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Homes, One Summer St., Cohasset, Ma. 02025.

In lieu of flowers, contributions; may be made to Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Baystate Dr., P.O. Box 859060, Braintree, Ma. 02185-9060 or to the Dana Farber Cancer Institute, 44 Binney St., Boston, Ma. 02115.

Young actors prepare to take the stage in 'Jack Beanstalk'

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

This story is second in a series, outlining the process from start to finish, of producing children's theater. The Children's Drama Workshop, founded by the Deveney sisters, Beth, Grace and Sarah, is in its 15th year.

Roles have been assigned and actors are practicing their lines. There is choreography to be mastered and costumes to be made, along with jittery nerves to be calmed.

For actors playing the main roles in this summer's Children's Drama Workshop Production of "Jack Beanstalk" the task of making a character your own can bring both anticipation and butterflies in your stomach.

Ten-year-old Sam Game will play the lead character of Jack in the production. This is his fifth year working with the Deveney sisters and he feels confident that he will be able to remember all 184 of his character's lines with no problem.

"I'm probably going to try to study my lines as much as possible," he said, and knows he'll have no trouble once he takes the stage.

Eleven-year-old Betsy Crawford is also confident in her ability to learn her lines as Sally Stalker, after the experience she had last year during the production of Monsters Inc. Getting the part of narrator four days before the production, Betsy said she had to really work hard to learn her lines. However, the best reward in playing that part according to Betsy, was when her character took a break on stage and she "got to drink Coke!"

Betsy is one of three Stalker Sisters in the play, the others being Sarah, played by real-life sister Jillian Crawford who is nine years old, and Susie, which will be played by both 11-year-old Johanna Regan, and 10-year-old Kathleen Kelly. Those playing Sarah and Susie will need to study their lines carefully, as they are going to be speaking Spanish during part of the performance.

The Mexican Jumping Beans will need to work on not only some Spanish, but a Mexican accent as well. However, all three say they aren't nervous at all.

"I'm actually excited," said eight-year-old Kevin Crawford who will be playing the part of Pancho. The real life brother of Stalker Sisters Betsy and Jillian, said he will practice with them and be able to learn his lines well.

Excitement over their parts will surely be motivational in the Jumping Beans' learning their lines.

"I've never had such a big part," said Scott Wilson, 10, who will play Paco.

"Me too," said Kevin.

Jonah Atkins, 8, will play third Mexican Jumping Bean, Pablo, and said he thinks the dance scenes of the play will be the best.

For some cast members, learning their lines is all about strategy. Kate McKelvey, 8, who will be playing Jack's mother, said she has been rehearsing both her lines and Jack's.

"I say Jack's lines and mine, so I know when mine are coming up," she said.

Sisters McCauley and Micaela Braun, who are 10 and five years old respectively, said they will be practicing their lines for the parts of Snail and Rabbit together.

"My sister says some of the parts and I say some of the parts, so we say it together," said Micaela.

Luke Tedeschi, 12, who will play the Cowboy said he only has two lines, which he is not worried about. However, he may be called upon to sing a song, which could change his perspective a little.

But not everyone is so confident just yet. Trevor Schram, 8, said he is "kind of" nervous, not about learning his lines, but of the actual performance itself.

"When your part is coming up it's like — oh no, all these people are watching!" he said.

Carly Schwantner, 9, who will play the Black Baby Bear Cub gave Trevor some advice, "Just pretend you're not in front of the people."

Nine-year-old Camryn Caron, who will play the Brown Baby Bear Cub, said there is no need to be afraid, "It's just like talking to someone."

Isabel Robinson, 9, who will play the Cow, can relate to Trevor's nervousness.

"I'm not nervous now because I've done this so many times. I've gotten a lot more confident on stage. My first play was a lot harder," she said.

When it's time for the production, eleven year old Kevin O'Connell, who will play Lenny-Henny said he will take one last look at his script before going on stage, and will make sure to get their early.

Ian Porter, 11, who will play Henry J. Harp said he thought that was a good idea because he gets "nervous right before we start."

Claire Pozniak, 10, who will play Fairy Bell, said she will not be nervous at all.

"It's hard to be nervous when all of it is so hilarious," she said.

Everyone involved in the play is sure it will be a huge success, especially Terry MacCormack, 11, who will play the Giant.

"The last time [Beth] made up a play, it was Cinderella Smith, and that was really good," and from what he's seen so far, he thinks this one will be just as great.

While the play is still a work in progress, the Children's Drama Workshop wants to let the community know that they are looking for donations of all kinds of materials to use for set construction. Materials such as cardboard, foam, fabric, paint, etc. would be highly appreciated. Your trash could be their treasure! Local businesses, warehouses, homeowners, or artists may donate their goods by contacting Tyler from CDW at (917) 805-3161. The CDW thanks you in advance for helping make your community play a big hit!

Laxmen look to re...tool

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Kevin Orcutt doesn't want to say he has a "rebuilding" project on his hands. Not surprising; the very word is abhorrent to most folks associated in any way with sports. But one can probably draw their own conclusion listening to the way the second year Cohasset High boys lacrosse coach repeatedly pulled up just shy of using it as he came at the subject of his team's prospects for next year from a variety of angles.

"We will have to retool somewhat," conceded Orcutt, who this year directed the Skippers to a program best 16-game win streak before they fell in the semifinals of the Div. 3 state tourney. "After all, you can't lose the type of seniors we are and not expect to take a step back,"

In all, the Skippers lost eight seniors— all of them starters, four of them All-Scholastics. Recent CHS graduates John Durkin, Nick Spirito and John Durkin will be named Mariner All-Scholastics in a few weeks, the former two for the second straight year. Matt Davis, had he not been lost to a broken collarbone nine games into the season, no doubt would have been looking at his second straight All-Mariner team.

The other four seniors — Robert Hickey, Tom Anderson, Evan Pestone and Ben Lynner— were multi-year starters.

"These eight guys have been mainstays since the day I took the job," said Orcutt. "It didn't take me long afteer I started to discover the (2001) sophomore class was the foundation of this program. Those guys all had talent, but, more than that, they all had a great work ethic, and a willingness to do whatever was necessary to win."

Orcutt pulls no punches when it comes to making comparisons between these outgoing players and the ones who'll be returning next year.

"Honestly, I don't see that same kind of desire to push themselves from a lot of the juniors and sophomores I had this year," said Orcutt. "Now, maybe that can change, and I'm hoping it does, but right now I'm not real impressed with what I've seen on the whole."

Graduation took a particularly heavy toll at the offensive end of the field. Kahn, a slick and pinpoint-shooting lefty attacker, led the Skippers in scoring each of the past two seasons and finished his career with over 200 points. Durkin and Davis were versatile midfielders who often quarterbacked the offense and were usually relied upon to start the breaks. Midfielders Hickey and Anderson were well-rounded, physical players and key performers at both ends of the field.

Thus an even larger load appears ready to fall on talented junior-to-be Jake Previte, who finished second behind Kahn in scoring this spring with 46 goals.

Senior-to-be Mike Rasmussen also flashed signs up front, according to Orcutt, and the coach likes the poten-

Four Cohasset standouts lead defending gold medal Bay State Games laxers

Cohasset High head lacrosse coach Kevin Orcutt has announced his roster for the 2003 Bay State Games Southeast team, and it features four Cohasset residents — two Skipper standouts, an All-Catholic Conference defenseman from Boston College High and a private-school defender from St. George's of Rhode Island.

The Southeast team, two-time defending gold medallists, also boasts three players from Scituate, one from Hull, four from Weymouth, one from Norwell, and three from Milton.

"We may not have the big names we've had the past two years," said Orcutt, "but we're a scrappy team that ought to be in the hunt for a medal."

The lacrosse Bay State Games begin today, Thursday, at the Wentworth Institute in Boston, with Southeast playing at noon and again at 6 p.m.. First-round games for the team continue on Friday at noon and Saturday at noon. The medal games will be Sunday afternoon.

The two Skippers are junior goalie Nick Murphy, who started every game of Cohasset's 16-2 season, and who finished with 235 saves and a solid .625 save percentage, and soph Jake Previte, the team's second high-

It ain't over 'til it's over

Back-to-back wins keep Post 118's playoff hopes alive

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

To quote the inimitable Yoga Berra: "It ain't over til it's over."

With back-to-back wins over Morrisette and Stoughton, the Cohasset Post 118 Legion baseballers kept alive their slim hopes of a return to the postseason.

"We've still got five games left, and there are a lot of teams in the middle of the pack still fighting for the last playoff spot," said Cohasset coach Scott Arnold. "We'd have to get hot to make a move, but we did it last year. We're not ready to give up by any means."

Last year, the Post 118ers won nine of their final 10 games to secure the fifth and final postseason berth in Zone 6, and then kept going, upsetting top-seeded Norwood in the best-of-three opening round of the playoffs before falling to eventual state champ Sandwich.

Cohasset entered last night's game at Milton in ninth and final place in Zone 6 with a 4-11 record and five games left to be played. Braintree, who Cohasset beat earlier this year, was leading the way, and that team, along with Milton (10-5), Quincy (8-4-1) and Weymouth

Angered over All-Star game...again

DAVID INGBER

Baseball's Midsummer Classic, the July Jubilee of All-Stars, has become my favorite professional sporting event to target for a session of angry venting. It comes at a time of year when high school sports have no news to report and I'm left thirsting for story ideas.

Plus, it's such an easy target 'cuz there is just so much wrong with it.

Last year, I attacked the game itself, ending, embarrassingly, in a tie. Commissioner Bud Selig, who took much of the heat for the unsatisfying ending to the game, rectified his mistake by vowing no more ties in the All-Star game. "This year, it counts" states the Fox-aired commercials, signifying that the winning league gets home field advantage for the World Series.

OK, so I'll just have to attack something else about the game. Simple: the selection of the rosters.

Oh, where to begin. First of all, the men who start the all-star games are determined by the fans. While it's nice in theory, the truth is a small percentage of fans, namely in big markets like New York, stuff ballot boxes at stadiums, namely big stadiums like Yankee Stadium, so that undeserving players, namely Jorge Posada and Hideki Matsui, can trot onto the field ahead of clearly better players.

Matsui, like his fellow Japanese outfielder Ichiro Suzuki, was voted onto the all-star starting team in his rookie year because of the millions of baseball enthusiasts from his home country who want to root on one of their few countrymen in the major leagues. National pride is fine with me, but not when it is at the expense of knocking down Vernon Wells, who came out of nowhere (Toronto) this year to come in second in the majors thus far in the season in RBIs.

Posada was a perfect example of a player who is selected to the starting line-up only because of the large market he plays for. If Posada played for the Tampa Bay Devil Rays or the Baltimore Orioles, his .254 average would not have placed him in the top five in the voting for American League catchers. Yet, he beat the Red Sox' Jason Varitek (.297 average, with comparable home run and RBI numbers and better defensive skills) by a landslide.

All-Scholastic boys tennis team

Cohasset's Ingber named among area's elite

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

Several of the young men you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

In the end, however, we limited ourselves to a team of just eight singles players and four doubles teams, and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top male tennis players in Marinerland for this honor:

Singles

Tim Cahill - Junior
First singles - Scituate

Tim emerged out of the shadow of big brother Ryan (SHS class of 2003) this spring to claim the top singles spot and put together a very solid 8-6 season, with all of those losses coming to All-Scholastic players... led the Sailors to a surprising 10-4 season and to the state tourney for the first time in four years...Patriot League all-star...in Patriot League play, lost twice each to Duxbury star Matt Bryson and Hingham star Brian Marsden, and once to Hanover's Pauri Pandian, all fellow PL All-Stars...has one of the best return games on the South Shore...played second singles for the Sailors the previous two years...has been named a tennis captain for next year...like Ryan, also a very solid soccer player…made the SHS varsity soccer team last year… enjoys playing the guitar…plans to go to college and is leaning toward majoring in business…would also like to play tennis in college, even if it's at the intramural level…Scituate coach Rob Leary: "Tim was sort of a sacrificial lamb going up against some incredible number ones, but he never gave an inch, and made them all work for every point. Mental toughness is definitely his biggest asset. He's prepared mentally for every match. And playing against him is a lot like playing against a backboard. He gets to just about everything and gets it back over the net."

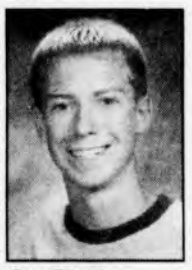
Brian Marsden - Senior (Capt.) First singles - Hingham

Brian Marsden

No question here… After sitting out his junior season with an injury, Marsden returned healthy and hungry this year…Marsden accomplished his career-long goal when he won the State Individual singles title earlier this month…The senior went unbeaten this season and lost only one regular-season match over his four-year career, falling to Norwell's Sam Bitetti his junior season…A four-time Patriot League All-star, Marsden helped lead his team to back-to-back appearances in the Div. 1 South Sectional finals (2000, 2001), both times falling victim to Newton North…Marsden also played hockey at HHS and was a member of the Div. 1 state championship team in 2000…He will attend Trinity College in the fall and plans to continue both his tennis and hockey careers. Hingham coach Ron Bartles: "Brian was the reason that we were able to go to the Sectional finals two years in a row. He is a full court player. He covers the entire court and he is very tough mentally. Brian won't lose his cool. He will stay with it no matter the situation."

Sam Bitetti - Junior First singles - Norwell



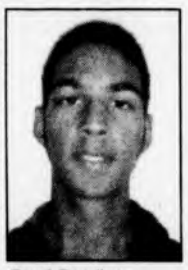
Sam Bitetti

Played a key role in extending the Clippers amazing unbeaten streak in South Shore League play to nine consecutive seasons with his sensational play at number one singles over the last four years…led Norwell to a 13-1 regular season and to the semifinals of the Div. 2 South sectionals…finished 15-2 this season, his only losses coming in non-league play to Hingham superstar Brian Marsden and Duxbury star Peter Antons…he did beat Antons, though, in the state individual tourney, and Marsden in duel match play two years ago…lost only two league matches during his entire career, both of these coming in his freshman year to then-Hanover senior Chris Dong… reached the semifinals in the state individual tourney in 2001 and 2002, falling to Newton's Luke Tedaldi each time…three-time Boston Globe and Mariner All-Scholastic ('01, '02)…four time South Shore League All-Star… currently ranked 10th in New England in the USTA under-18 division… National Honors Society member …graduated as his class Salutatorian…will continue his tennis career at either Bowdoin or Georgetown…leaning toward a major in the Sciences…also a South Shore League all-star in cross country his freshman and sophomore years, but gave up track after that to concentrate more fully on tennis…Norwell coach Jay Swartz: "A lot of players walked on the court over the years thinking they could beat Sam because he didn't have the big powerful serve or look that imposing, but they'd walk off losers pretty quickly. Sam gives you nothing to go at or pick on when you're playing against him. He's extremely well-rounded and deceptively quick. He's just so consistent and focussed and intelligent a player."

Eric Goldman - Senior (Capt.) First Singles - Abington

Was the driving force behind the Green Wave's stellar season, in which the team returned to the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney for the first time in years…Goldman went 10-5 this season pacing the Abington team (10-5) to a second-place finish in the South Shore League just two years after going 1-15 as a squad…A two-year South Shore League All-star at first singles, Goldman's biggest strength on the court was his patience, often outlasting his opponent with his cool, calm, and collected style of play…In the fall, Goldman plans to join the Air Force Academy where he will continue his tennis career. Abington coach Mike Mayhew: "You do not see many patient high school players and Eric uses that to his advantage. He improved this year by becoming a little more aggressive, but maintained his level head. It was a real treat to watch him develop into a successful tennis player over the past four years."

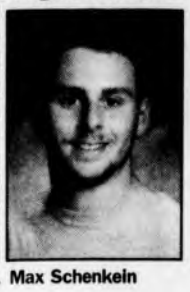
Pauri Pandian - Junior First singles - Hanover



Pauri Pandian

Despite sitting out the first six matches of the season with an ankle injury, Pandian returned in full force, pacing his team in avenging earlier-season losses to Patriot League rivals Hingham and Rockland…A Patriot League All-star, Pandian went 5-5 in matches upon his return…A member of the National Honor Society, Pandian has been an honor roll student at HHS for the last three years…He is a year round tennis player with the USTA and will be the top returning prospect to the Hanover boys team next season. Hanover coach Monika O'Hare: "Pauri is a hard worker and he sets a really good example for the rest of the team."

Max Schenkein - Junior Second singles - Norwell



Max Schenkein

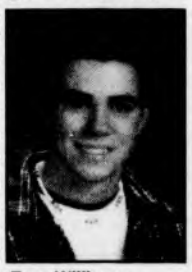
Decided to forsake baseball this spring for tennis, and quickly emerged as the Clippers second singles player… went unbeaten in South Shore League play (10-0) to play a key role in the Clippers extending their amazing run of unbeaten seasons in the SSL to nine years…finished with an overall record of 14-2, his two losses coming to Duxbury stars Peter Anton and Matt Bryson, the former loss coming in the semifinals of the Div. 2 South Sectionals, where the Clippers also fell, 4-1…South Shore League All-Star… the lefty utilizes a strong serve and a powerful backhand, which he follows to the net very effectively… also a standout for the Norwell High golf team…played baseball at Norwell High the previous two springs…High Honor Roll student…National Honors Society…loves all sports…a sportswriter this year for the NHS newspaper, the Norwell Navigator, and will be a News Editor next year…won Yale Book Award for NHS, which indicates he has a top seven GPA in his class… will be Student Body President this coming school year…plans to apply to Ivy and Small Ivy Schools…is leaning toward majoring in Political Science, and has an eye toward a career in law…Norwell coach Jay Swartz: "Getting Max to come out for the team took us from a good team to a very good team, no doubt about that. He's a very bright kid, as were my other singles players this year, so when you talked strategy with him, he just locked onto it. Max is very intense and driven, and I think he's going to work very hard this off season, and come back much better."

David Ingber - Senior (Capt.) First singles - Cohasset

David Ingber

Now a three-time Mariner All-Scholastic selection, making our squad as half of a doubles team in 2001 and as a singles player the last two years…injured his hip at the end of this season, forcing him to miss the last few regular season matches and withdraw from his second round match in the state tourney… finished the season with a 9-4 record, including 1-1 in the postseason…three-time South Shore League all-star… was the top singles player for team went 9-7 overall and 8-4 in SSL play…also a standout performer for the joint Scituate-Cohasset High swim team…very interested in drama and acting…had a lead role in the recent "Real World: Cancun" motion picture…works in the summer as a lifeguard and swim teacher at the Cohasset Swim Center…also a member of the summer Cohasset Swim Team…an academic tutor…teaches the guitar…National Honors Society member…has been a Mariner Correspondent the last four years…was Editor this past school year of the Spinnaker, the CHS newspaper…will attend Harvard University…plans to major in English or Government, and has an eye toward a future in journalism…Cohasset coach Kent Parrot: "Dave got the most out of what he had for skills. He's not a classic tennis player in terms of strokes or style of play, but his all business attitude and work ethic set him apart. He stays in every point and never gives in to anyone. He has great leadership skills, and that's something else we'll really miss."

Evan Williams - Junior (Capt.) First singles - Silver Lake



Evan Williams

Evan's year round commitment to tennis really began to shine through this year, as he went 11-2 in Old Colony League play to lead the SL boys team back to the state tourney after a year's absence…only two losses were to Quincy All-Scholastic Jirawat Anektanasap…helped the Lakers to an overall record of 11-6 (11-2 in OCL)…OCL all-star…a three-year varsity starter, playing first doubles as a freshman and second singles as a sophomore…a member of the Kingsbury tennis club in Kingston, where his father (Mark) is a club pro…was a member of the Silver Lake wrestling team the previous two years, but gave that sport up to devote more time to tennis in the winter…has been ranked previously by USTA-New England…takes Advanced Placement courses…Honor Roll student…a gifted artist who has won a Boston Globe Art Award…would like to play tennis in college…is looking at Muhlenberg College and Lafeyette College in Pennsylvania, schools with Div. 3 tennis programs… leaning toward majoring in Liberal Arts or Industrial Arts…Silver Lake coach David Rix: "Evan really has excellent skills as a tennis player, and really emerged this season as one of the best players in our league. I think we really saw his off season work pay off this spring. He hit the ground running and just kept going all year."

Doubles

Kyle Swartz/Mike Allen First Doubles - Norwell

These two juniors have played together as partners for three years now, and just keep getting better and better…the two completed their second consecutive unbeaten season together at first doubles (10-0) and went 14-3 overall, with two losses suffered to Duxbury's unbeaten top pair (Jesse Hayes, Rob Groezinger) and one to Westwood's All-Scholastic duo… overall record the last two years is 27-4…played a key role in extending the Clippers amazing unbeaten streak in South Shore League play to nine consecutive seasons… two-time South Shore League all-stars…compliment each other well, Kyle (the son of coach Jay Swartz) being the more technically sound player and Mike an extremely aggressive player by nature…Kyle also possesses a powerful forehand…Mike was also a goalie with the SSL champion Norwell High soccer team this spring…Mike is heavily involved in student government and mock trials, and is Photo Editor for the school newspaper…Kyle runs track for Norwell High… both Honor Roll students players plan to attend college…Mike is leaning toward majoring in Pre-law, and would like to attend B.C. or Stonehill…Norwell coach Jay Swartz: "Mike and Kyle were obviously the best team in the South Shore League again, and they continue to improve together. Their control of the game continues to improve."

Kyle Swartz

Mike Allen

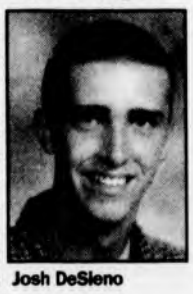
Peter Shaw/Sam Sinclair - First Doubles - Hingham

Peter Shaw

Teamed together for the first time of their careers, these seniors each held different roles before this season… A second singles player last year, Sinclair, a senior, moved to doubles to team with Shaw, also a senior… The duo was selected second in the Patriot League All-star race…Sinclair and Shaw, ranked third in his 2003 class, won their match in the preliminary round of the Div. 1 South Sectional team tourney, helping the Harbormen edge Dighton-Rehoboth 3-2 before falling to Sharon…Sinclair plans to attend college, while Shaw heads off to Washington University. Hingham coach Ron Bartles: "Sam is a very strong player. He played singles last year, but was sick before the season and we put him on a doubles team. Peter has been with us for four years. He moved up to play doubles and he is an extremely smart kid."

Sam Sinclair

Josh DeSieno/Eric Alemian - First Doubles - Abington



Josh DeSieno

A two-time Mariner All-Scholastic, DeSieno proved he could play with anyone, teaming with Alemian for a great doubles season…Both seniors, DeSieno and Alemian teamed midseason, helping to fuel the Green Wave's 10-5 year and second place finish in the South Shore League…The duo's play at the No. 1 spot was also instrumental in getting Abington back to the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney after a void of several years…DeSieno also played soccer and basketball at AHS…Both plan to attend college in the fall. Abington coach Mike Mayhew: "DeSieno and Alemian really enjoyed playing with each other and became a tough team to beat. It is quite an accomplishment for the seniors on this team to be able to turn things around. These guys have improved each year and grown as players on and off the court."

Sean Kane/Paul Maloney First Doubles - Silver Lake

Sean Kane

Both seniors, Maloney, a captain and second year player for Silver Lake, and Kane, a first year player, came seemingly out of nowhere to give the Lakers a sensational pairing at first doubles this season to play a key role in directing the SL boys to an 11-2 season in Old Colony League play and a return to the postseason after a one-year absence… put together a regular season record of 10-2…Maloney's strong play at the net worked well with Kane's steady baseline play…Old Colony League all-stars… both Kane and Maloney are excellent athletes, as witnessed by their success in other sports at SL — Kane in soccer and wrestling, Maloney in soccer…Maloney played for the Bay State Games soccer team last summer and plays the game year round…Maloney will be attending Wentworth Academy, where he plans to major in Architecture and hopes to play tennis…Sean, who was a Mariner All-Scholastic Honorable Mention for wrestling, has joined the Navy and will train to become a diver…Silver Lake coach David Rix: "Both Paul and Sean are excellent athletes, and that helped them come a long way quickly. Neither was quite ready for singles play but, as partners, they really gelled and their chemistry was very good."

Paul Maloney

Cohasset swim team blows Sharks, Yachters out of water

Summer is finally here and Cohasset swim team is back in the water for what will surely be another successful year. Under the "new management" of head coach Ted Hughes and assistants Blake Worrall and Casey Anderson, the season got off to a great start with a resounding win for the home team against Hanover's Sharks – 424 to 162 and, in the second meet, a comfortable win against Duxbury Yacht Club, 395 to 208.

After what seems like months of rain, June 27th turned out to be a classic swim team afternoon - cloudless skies, ninety degree temperatures and a buzz of frenetic activity. The program started with the 100 yards medley relays and, in what has become something of a tradition, the youngest team members, kicked off the meet with wins in both their races (eight and under boys: 1st: Fontaine; McCarthy; Adkins; Swain; 2nd: Berube; Green; MacCarthy; Michalowski; girls: 1st: McCunney; Buckley; Farren; Teague; 2nd: Bodner; Malerti; Carrier; Littauer; 4th: Farren; Axelson; Noble; Berube).

The ten and under boys followed closely with first and second position finishes in their events and while the girls just missed the win they were able to claim second and third places (boys: 1st: Salerno; Leahy; Mahoney; Carrier; 2nd: Faber; Buckley; Shipp; Murphy; girls: 2nd: Farren; Haber; Karski; Donohue; 3rd: Kelly; Seraikas; Murphy; Michalowski; 5th: Kucinski; Caron; Berube; Adkins). The final 100 yard medleys produced two further wins for Cohasset at the twelve and under level and the seventeen and under boys and girls finished first in both their 200 yard races (boys twelve and under: 1st: Connors; Porter; Doonan; Ulmer; 2nd: Daly; Hurley; Queenan; MacCormack; girls twelve and under: 1st: Ryan; Lehr; Mahoney; Meehan; 3rd: Costa; Kelly; McElhinny; Lehr; 4th: Mahoney; Fortin; Buckley; Hunt; boys seventeen and under: 1st: Doonan; Roach; Drybanski; Conway; 2nd: Kuppens; Kelly; Cunningham; Zappolo; 3rd: MacCarthy; Yeager; Muir; Gammon; girls seventeen and under: 1st: Daley; Durkin; Nelson; Hernan; 3rd: Sacks; Fortin; Teague; Englander; 5th: Swain; James; Regan; Hurd). With the first medleys of the season complete Cohasset had accumulated 60 points to Hanover's 24.

The ten and under boys and girls were up next in the fifty yard freestyle. Once again the home team dominated with first place finishes in both events (boys: 1st: Carrier, J.; 3rd: Salerno, J.; 4th: Buckley, T.; girls: 1st: Michalowski, A.; 5th Farren, A.; 6th Kucinski, K.).

The 100 yard individual medleys followed and the twelve and under boys and girls kept up the pace with wins in both their races (boys: 1st: Ulmer, W; 2nd: Connors, R.; 3rd: Queenan, C.; girls: 1st: Meehan, S.; 4th: Mahoney; 6th: McCarthy, C.). The fourteen and under boys followed suit with first, third and fourth places and the girls finished second, fourth and sixth (boys: 1st: Drybanski; J.; 3rd: Cunningham, C.; 4th: Porter, N.; girls: 2nd: Garber, C.; 4th: Teague, M.; 6th: Previte; M.). The event was rounded off with wins for both the seventeen and under boys and girls and a nineteen point increase in Cohasset's lead (boys: 1st: Doonan, B.; girls: 1st; Nelson, M.).

With the medleys in the bag, it was back to the younger team members, and the eight and under boys again started well with first, second and fourth places in the 25 yard freestyle (1st: Fontaine, A.; 2nd: McCarthy, M.; 4th: Michalowski, C.). The girls just missed the win, but made their own important contribution with second, third and fourth place finishes (2nd: Teague, M; 3rd: Bodner, K.; 4th: Axelson, M.). The ten and under boys and girls produced a similar pattern of results. A win for the boys and second, third and sixth position finishes for the girls (boys: 1st: Murphy, C.; 2nd: Mahoney, R.; 4th: MacCormack, P.; girls: 2nd: Donohue, M.; 3rd: Adkins, O.; 6th: Seraikas, A.).

In the 50 yard races Cohasset continued to dominate the event with wins in five of the six races (boys twelve and under: 2nd: Doonan, B.; 3rd: Porter, I.; 4th: Plante, J.; girls twelve and under: 1st: Lehr, T.; 4th: Buckley, A.; 6th: Dunn, B.; boys fourteen and under: 1st: Zappalo, N.; 2nd: Conway, C.; 4th: Porter, N.; girls fourteen and under: 1st: Heman, E.; 3rd: Teague, M.; 4th: Campbell, A.; boys seventeen and under: 1st: Roach, K.; 2nd: Kuppens, C.; 3rd: MacCarthy, E.; girls seventeen and under: 1st: Nelson, M.; 4th James, K.). The individual freestyle finished with Cohasset ahead by a margin of eighty six points.

The butterfly was up next and, once again Cohasset was off to a winning start courtesy of the eight and under boys (1st: Adkins, J.; 2nd: MacCarthy, R.; 3rd: Green, C.). The girls didn't quite make the win but finished well, claiming second, third and fifth places (2nd: Farren, N.; 3rd: Carrier, A.; 5th: Berube, B.). Cohasset won the next two races at the ten and under level (boys: 1st: Shipp, M.; 2nd Salerno, J.; 4th: MacCormack, P.; girls: 1st: Michalowski, A.; 2nd: Karski, E.; 4th: Berube, M.). The twelve and under boys were pushed back into second, third and fifth place finishes and the girls pulled back to win their race (boys: 2nd: Daly, R.; 3rd: Ulmer, W.; 5th MacCormack, T.; girls: 1st: Mahoney, C.; 2nd: Ryan, K.; 6th: McElhinny, C.).

The butterfly event finished with a win for Cohasset in all four of the fifty yard races (boys fourteen and under: 1st: Conway, C.; 2nd: Cunningham, C.; girls fourteen and under: 1st: Garber, C.; 3rd: Durkin, L.; 4th: Englander, E.; boys seventeen and under: 1st: Gammon, B.; girls seventeen and under: 1st: Nelson, M.; 2nd: Fortin, S.; 4th: Sacks, M.). Going into the next event Cohasset had established a 135 point lead.

In the breaststroke the eight and under boys once again led off with a win (1st: McCarthy, M.; 2nd: Berube, G.; 3rd: Swain, G.). The girls just missed the win but took second, third and fifth place (2nd: Farren, N.; 3rd: Chase, C.; 5th: Axelson, M.). At the ten and under level again there was a win for the boys and a third, fourth and fifth places for the girls (boys: 1st: Buckley, T.; 2nd: Leahy, S.; 4th: Faber, J.; girls: 3rd: Seraikas, A.; 4th: Murphy, O.; 5th: Axelson, M.).

At the fifty yard level Cohasset came on strong with wins in five of the six final breaststroke races ending the event with a stunning 171 point lead (boys twelve and under: 1st: Porter, I.; 2nd: Hurley, P.; 4th: Queenan, C.; girls twelve and under: 1st: Lehr, S.; 2nd: Asnault, A.; 3rd: Buckley, A.; boys fourteen and under: 1st: Zappolo, N.; 2nd: Kelly, T.; 3rd: Yeager, A.; girls fourteen and under: 2nd: Durkin, L.; 3rd: Fortin, S.; 4th: Swain, K.; boys seventeen and under: 1st: Roach, K.; 2nd: Gammon, B.; 3rd: Porter, N.; girls seventeen and under: 1st: Daley, M.; 4th: Regan, M.; 5th: Hurd, A.).

In the afternoon's last individual event - the backstroke - the home-team produced wins right across the board at all age levels. Starting with the usual plucky effort from the youngest swimmers right through to the mature performances of the seventeen and under boys and girls, the Cohasset swimmers powered home confidently in every race (boys eight and under: 1st: Fontaine, A.; 2nd: Adkins, J.; 4th: MacCarthy, R.; girls eight and under: 1st: Buckley, M.; 2nd: Bodner, K.; 5th: Farren, V.; boys ten and under: 1st: Carrier, J.; 2nd: Shipp, M.; 3rd: Mahoney, R.; girls ten and under: 1st: Haber, A.; 2nd: Karski, E.; 6th: Adkins, O.; boys twelve and under: 1st: Doonan, B.; 3rd: Connors, R.; 4th: Ofsthun, C.; girls twelve and under: 1st: Ryan, K.; 2nd: Mahoney, M.; 3rd: Costa, A.; boys fourteen and under: 1st: Drybanski, J.; 2nd: Doonan, P.; girls fourteen and under: 1st: Heman, E.; 2nd: Garber, C.; boys seventeen and under: 1st: Muir, K.; 2nd: MacCarthy, E.; girls seventeen and under: 1st: Daley, M.; 3rd: James, K.).

The afternoon rounded off with the one and two hundred yard free relays. Cohasset had already established a comfortable lead, but swimmers took off with the same determination to win. In the first two races of the event the eight and under boys and girls both swept the board with first, second and third place finishes (boys: 1st: Adkins; Swain; McCarthy; Fontaine; 2nd: Berube; McCarthy; Green; Michalowski; girls eight and under: 1st: Buckley; Teague; McCunney; Farren; 2nd: Bodner; Littauer; Malerti; Carrier; 3rd: Axelson; Berube; Chase; Farren). The ten and under boys again took first and second and places, while the girls grabbed second, third and fifth (boys: 1st: Salerno; Shipp; Mahoney; Carrier; 2nd: Buckley; Faber; Kennedy; Leahy; girls: 2nd: Axelson; Farren; Donohue; Michalowski; 3rd: Murphy; Seraikas; Haber; Karski; 5th: Adkins; Kelly; Caron; Berube).

At the twelve and under level both the boys and girls again took the win and the event finished with an unopposed win for the seventeen and under boys and a close finish for the girls who placed second, third and fourth (boys twelve and under: 1st: Porter, Connors; Ulmer; Doonan; 2nd: Daly; Hurley; Plante; Ofsthun; girls twelve and under: 1st: Ryan; Mahoney; Lehr; Meehan; 2nd: Mahoney; Kelly; Costa; Lehr; 3rd: McBride; Donohue; Fortin; Gaumer; seventeen and under boys: 1st: Drybanski; Roach; Zappallo; Conway; 2nd: Doonan; Porter; Cunningham; Kelly; 3rd: Kuppens; MacCarthy; Muir; Yeager; girls: 2nd: Garber; Englander; Durkin; Daley; 3rd: Regan; Richardson; Sacks; Tehranian; 4th: Previte; Hurd; Campbell; Swain). The day ended with Cohasset ahead by two hundred and sixty points, a resounding win.

The team raced again on Wednesday July 2nd, against Duxbury Yacht Club and wasted no time in establishing their dominance once again.

The swimmers started well with wins in seven of the eight 100 and 200 yard medley relays (boys eight and under 100 yard medley relay:1st: Fontaine; McCarthy; Adkins; Kissick; 3rd: Michalowski; Green; Swain; MacCarthy; 4th: Lund; Doonan; Berube; Brown; girls: 1st: McCunney; Buckley; Farren; Teague; 3rd: Bodner; Noble; Carrier; Littauer; 4th: Porter; Zimmerman; Berube; Farren; boys ten and under: 1st: Salerno; Durkin; Mahoney; Carrier; 2nd: Murphy; Buckley; Shipp; Durkin; 4th: Leahy; Heman; MacCormack; Kennedy; girls ten and under: 1st: Kissick; Fontaine; Murphy; Michalowski; 3rd: Farren; Seraikas; Karski; Donohue; 4th: Kelly; Kucinski; Berube; Adkins; boys twelve and under: 2nd: Ulmer; Porter; Doonan; Kissick; 3rd: Connors; MacCormack; Daly; Hurley; girls twelve and under: 1st: Ryan; Lehr; Mahoney; Meehan; 3rd: Mahoney; Kelly; Buckley; Lehr; 5th: Costa; Dunn; Baumgarten; Fortin; boys seventeen and under: 1st: Berg; Roach; Tehranian; Conway; 2nd: Doonan; Zappalo; Drybanski; Hurd; 5th: Kuppens; Kelly; Cunningham; MacCarthy; girls seventeen and under: 1st: Daley; Anderson; Garber; Heman; 2nd: Sacks; Durkin; Teague; Englander; 4th: Regan; Fortin; Swain; Richardson). By the end of the medley relays, Cohasset had accumulated 70 points, to Duxbury's 32.

In the 50 yard frees the ten and under boys and girls did not produce wins, but with second, third and fourth places, added a valuable eight points to the score (boys: 2nd: Carrier, J.; 3rd: Murphy, C.; 4th: Buckley, T.; girls: 2nd: Michalowski, A.; 3rd: Farren, A.; 4th: Kucinski, K.).

In the 100 yard individual medleys that followed, Cohasset took first place in all six races, increasing their lead by twenty three points (boys: twelve and under 100 yard individual medley: 1st: Kissick, J.; 3rd: Porter, I.; 4th: Connors, R.; girls twelve and under: 1st: Meehan, S.; 4th: Buckley, A.; 5th: Baumgarten, E.; boys fourteen and under: 1st: Drybanski, J.; 2nd: Cunningham, C.; girls fourteen and under: 1st: Garber, C.; 3rd: Teague, M.; 5th: Previte, M.; boys seventeen and under: 1st: Berg, P.; girls seventeen and under: 1st: Swain, K).

The next event was the individual freestyle, and Cohasset finished first in two of the four 25 yard races, and won four of six races at the fifty yard distance (boys eight and under 25 yard freestyle: 1st: Fontaine, A.; 2nd: Kissick, C.; 3rd: McCarthy, M.; girls eight and under: 2nd: Teague, M.; 5th: Bodner, K.; 6th: Carrier, A.; boys ten and under: 1st: Durkin, T.; 2nd: Durkin, J.; 3rd: Salerno, J.; girls ten and under: 3rd: Murphy, C.; 4th: Donohue, M.; 5th: Adkins, O.; boys twelve and under: 1st: Doonan, B.; 3rd: Porter, I.; 5th: Ulmer, W.; girls twelve and under: 3rd: Mahoney, C.; 4th: Mahoney, M.; 5th: Lehr, S.; boys fourteen and under 50 yard freestyle: 1st: Zappalo, N.; 2nd: Conway, C.; 3rd: Hunt, A.; girls fourteen and under: 1st: Durkin, L.; 2nd: Heman, E.; 5th: Campbell, A.; boys seventeen and under: 2nd: Tehranian, K.; 3rd: Roach, K.; MacCarthy, E.; girls seventeen and under: 1st: Anderson, C.; 2nd: Lehr, R.; 5th: James, K.). With the individual freestyles complete, Cohasset's score was now 158 to Duxbury's 87.

The 25 yard butterflies produced an additional four wins and the 50 yard event a further four so that by the half way point in the meet Cohasset's score stood at 216 to Duxbury's 119 (boys eight and under 25 yard butterfly: 1st: Swain, G.; 2nd: Adkins, J.; girls eight and under: 1st: Farren, N.; 2nd: Buckley, M.; 3rd: Carrier, A.; boys ten and under: 2nd: Shipp, M.; 3rd: Durkin, J.; 4th: Mahoney, R.; girls ten and under: 2nd: Murphy, C.; 3rd: Kissick, H.; 4th: Berube, M.; boys twelve and under: 1st: Doonan, B.; 4th: Ulmer, W.; 5th: MacCormack, T.; girls twelve and under: 1st: Meehan, S.; 2nd: Mahoney, C.; 3rd: Lehr, T.; boys fourteen and under 50 yard butterfly: 1st: Conway, C.; 2nd: Doonan, P.; 4th: Cunningham, C.; girls fourteen and under: 1st: Garber, C.; 2nd: Durkin, L.; 3rd: Teague, M.; boys seventeen and under: 2nd: Tehranian, K.; 3rd: Kuppens, C.; girls seventeen and under: 2nd: Lehr, R.;

In the 100 yard breaststroke event, once again Cohasset's swimmers put in a series of strong performances, winning all four of the 25 yard races, and five out of six of the 50 yard races (boys eight and under 25 yard breaststroke: 1st: MacCarthy, M.; 2nd: Adkins, J.; 3rd: Swain, G.; girls eight and under: 1st: Farren, N.; 2nd: Buckley, M.; 3rd: Carrier, A.; boys ten and under: 1st: Noble, J.; boys 50 yard breaststroke: 1st: Leahy, S.; 2nd: Durkin, J.; 3rd: Buckley, T.; girls ten and under: 1st: Michalowski, A.; 2nd: Fontaine, L.; 4th: Seraikas, A.; boys twelve and under 50 yard breaststroke: 2nd: Porter, I.; 4th: Connors, R.; 5th: Plante, J.; girls twelve and under: 1st: Lehr, S.; 3rd: Kelly, M.; 5th: Asnault, A.; boys fourteen and under: 1st: Zappalo, N.; 2nd: Kelly, T.; 3rd: Yeager, A.; girls fourteen and under: 1st: Durkin, L.; 2nd: Fortin, S.; 3rd: Swain, K.; boys seventeen and under: 1st: Roach, K.; girls seventeen and under: 1st: Anderson, C.).

Going into the last individual event, Cohasset was now 137 points ahead of Duxbury. The youngest team members started their backstroke races with three out of four wins at the 25 yard distance (boys eight and under: 1st: Fontaine, A.; 3rd: Kissick, C.; 4th: Michalowski, C.; girls eight and under: 3rd: Buckley, M.; 4th: Bodner, K.; 5th: Farren, V.; boys ten and under: 1st: Carrier, J.; 2nd: Murphy, C.; 3rd: Salerno, J.; girls ten and under 25: 1st: Fontaine, L.; 2nd: Kissick, H.; 5th: Adkins, O.). The fifty yard events produced more mixed results, but with three out of six wins, Cohasset went into the final event with a 155 point lead (boys twelve and under 50 yard backstroke: 2nd: Kissick, J.; 3rd: Ulmer, W.; 4th: Daly, R.; girls twelve and under: 2nd: Ryan, K.; 3rd: Mahoney, M.; 4th: Costa, A.; boys fourteen and under: 1st: Drybanski, J.; 2nd: Hunt, A.; 4th: Doonan, P.; girls fourteen and under: 1st: Heman, E.; 3rd: Regan, M.; boys seventeen and under: 2nd: Berg, P.; girls seventeen and under: 1st: Daley, M.).

The afternoon ended with the free relays and, although their lead was never in jeopardy, Cohasset's swimmers pushed hard to finish undefeated at both the 100 and 200 yard distances (boys eight and under 100 yard free relay: 1st: Fontaine; Swain; Adkins; Kissick; 2nd: McCarthy; MacCarthy; Green; Michalowski; 4th: Doonan; Rice; Lund; Berube; girls eight and under: 1st: Buckley; McCunney; Teague; Farren; 3rd: Bodner; Noble; Zimmerman; Carrier; 4th: Berube; Chase; Farren; Malerti; boys ten and under: 1st: Mahoney; Salerno; Durkin; Carrier; 2nd: Shipp; Murphy; Buckley; Durkin; 4th: Horrigan; Pratt; MacCormack; Kennedy; girls ten and under: 1st: Fontaine; Donohue; Michalowski; Kissick; 3rd: Murphy; Karski; Farren; Adkins; 4th: Berube; Gibbons; Kucinski; Caron; boys twelve and under: 1st: Doonan; Connors; Ulmer; Kissick; 3rd: McCormack; Plante; Ofsthun; Daly; girls twelve and under: 1st: Mahoney, Costa, Hunt; Lehr; 3rd: Mahoney, C.; Lehr; Ryan, Meehan; 4th: Libby, McBride; Salerno; Regan; boys seventeen and under 200 yard free relay; 1st: Berg; Roach; Conway; Tehranian; 2nd: Hunt; Doonan; Drybanski; Zappolo; 4th: Yeager; Cunningham; MacCarthy; Kuppens; girls seventeen and under: Anderson; Daley; Lehr; Heman; 2nd: Durkin; Teague; Englander; Garber; 5th: James; Plante; Anderson; Campbell;

It's a lot to take in, with this "two-for-one" reporting but, the bottom line is, that the Cohasset Swim team has launched the 2003 season with the same confidence and success of last year's Championship winners.

Congratulations to the team for a tremendous start to the season, and to the coaches Ted Hughes, Blake Worrall and Casey Anderson for a job well done and a special thanks to all the parents who regularly give up most of an entire day to support the meet.

Cohasset will swim again on Friday July 11th against Eel River, at Eel River Swim Club. We wish them all the best in the competition and for the rest of the season.

est scorer with 46 goals and 21 assists. Reed Smith, another Cohasset resident, will anchor the Southeast defense, after a season at BC High where he got all-league recognition. The fourth Cohasset squad member is Christy Mihos, a defenseman at St. George's.

Scituate is represented on the team by Scituate High defenseman Chris Connelly, BC High's JP Sylvester, a defenseman, and midfielder Tim Ferris.

Hull's Garrett Curran, a goalie at Tabor Academy and a gold medallist a year ago, returns to the cage, as does his father, Stu Curran, as assistant coach.

Norwell's Zac Trudeau, a Milton Academy midfielder, will see plenty of playing time, as should four Weymouth standouts, attackman Matt Murray and defenseman Andrew Keefe, both gold medallists a year ago, and defensemen Chris Luongo and Brian Fredrickson. Milton residents include Dennis Lynch and Mike McClain of Milton HS, and Kyle O'Brien of Catholic Memorial. Players from Canton, Braintree, Ashland, Medfield and King Philip HS round out the squad.

Marshfield's Nate Balboni and Medfield's Bob Aronson are also assistant coaches.

More Cohasset Lacrosse News

The annual Cohasset alumni lacrosse game, held a couple of weeks ago, was a huge success. Thirty-four players participated in the contest, held as a fundraiser for the Bourke Corcoran Memorial Scholarship Players ranged in age from 50-something parents Hank Kucinski and Terry Kahn to five members of the just-graduated senior class. Standouts in the game included four Leahys — brothers Dave, Ken, Tom and Pat — as well as current college players Ronan Buick, Kevin DeVito and Eric Libby.

David Leahy III, Cohasset's first Division One lacrosse player and a member of the Class of 1995, received the annual Founder's Award at the annual lacrosse banquet, sponsored by the Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters.

The dinner at Atlantica attracted well over 100 players, family, and friends, with letters and awards given to both girls' and boys' varsity and JV team members. Speakers included former head coach Ken Ekberg, founding Boosters president Dave Leahy Jr, and coaches Laurel Hickey, Matt Rossi, Torin Sweeney and Kevin Orcutt.

tial of juniors-to-be Aidan Buick and Joe Durkin (John's cousin) a lot. Mark Davis and Mike Hajjar are expected to add depth to the attack and/or midfield.

"I think up front we have potential," said Orcutt. "Jake could be as good as he wants to be. Joe Durkin is a tough kid. He's going to be a player, and so is Aidan (Buick)."

In back, senior-to-be netminder Nick Murphy is the incumbent. He played well in stretches this season and should pick up invaluable experience playing for the southeast team at the Bay State Games team this summer. However, he could see a challenge next spring from quick and athletic soon-to-be soph Ben Libby.

Spirito is an All-Eastern Mass defender who is virtually irreplaceable in the coach's opinion and Lynner provided a quality physical presence on the defensive line that will also be difficult to replace. Conor Buick and Steve Davis are two solid returning defenders, but there are a lot of questions beyond that.

Among the candidates who will likely be looked upon to step into key roles next year, said Orcutt, are Trevor Brady, John Grimm and Jeff Brown, who comes aboard from Derby Academy.

"Overall, I think our talent right now is average, but with some hard work I can see this group overachieving and maybe making a run at the postseason next year," concluded Orcutt. "Without that hard work, though, this program could fall into an abyss pretty quickly."

(7-5-1) appeared in pretty good shape so far as playoff hopes are concerned.

At the moment, Canton (7-7) is holding on to the fifth and final spot, but Stoughton (5-9-1), Morrisette (4-7-2), West Roxbury (4-8-1) and Cohasset were certainly within reach.

The question is can the Post 118ers heat it up again like they did 12 months ago?

"Well, we probably played our best game of the year last Tuesday, and I'd like to think we can keep it going," noted Arnold, referring to the 7-2 win over Morrisette. "Our bats came alive in that game for the first time in a while. Everybody was making good solid contact, and that's something we haven't seen consistently. And Eric Dmohowski pitched a great game."

Dmohowski, a recent graduate from B.C. High, was masterful on the mound, going the distance. The two runs against him came on solo home runs, both times with the count 0-2 in his favor.

"Yeah, Eric and I had a little talk about that," said Arnold with a chuckle. "But, overall, he was great. He really kept those hitters off balance."

Arnold credits the team's turnaround at the plate to a few recent batting practices where a pitching machine was borrowed and set to 90 miles per hour.

"We've seen a lot of hard throwers this summer, so this was something I felt we could really use," said the 10th year head coach. "It sure looks like it helped."

The bats continued to swing true on Tuesday, the Post 118ers pounding out eight hits to take a 6-2 decision.

Dmohowski again got the call on the mound, and again came up big, scattering three his and two walks while striking out six.

Both of visiting Stoughton's runs were unearned and came in the top of the third to open the scoring. Cohasset would get those runs right back, though.

After Jack O'Leary singled to open the home half of the third, shortstop Mike Gulinello followed with a blast over the fence and off the scoreboard in right center, making it a 2-2 game.

The game remained tied until the bottom of the fifth when the hosts strung together a walk and four hits to score four runs. Gulinello led off with a walk and a steal of second, and then scored on a Brian Woods base hit. Dmohowski then helped his own cause, doubling home Woods, and then scoring on a Brian Signorelli single. Signorelli then stole second and Tim Pilczak plated him with the fourth hit of the frame.

Thayer Academy junior-to-be Greg Malley was slated to get the go on the mound last night for Post 118 at Milton.

The boys will travel to Braintree tonight (5:45 p.m., Braintree High), play a doubleheader against Morrisette at Adams Field in Quincy on Saturday and then wrap up the regular season at home (Scituate High) Monday night (5:45 p.m. start). Kevin Signorelli was in line to start against Braintree, while O'Leary and Dmohowski were expected to get the nods on Saturday.

Arnold said he will likely go to Chris Carr in Monday's regular season finale, though Malley (who has two of the team's four pitching wins) could also be available.

"I honestly feel we have it in us to win four of our final five and maybe all five, and eight or nine wins may be enough to put us in (the playoffs)," concluded Arnold. "Our pitching has been pretty good on the whole. We've lost a lot of one and two run games. If our offense is set to start clicking, there's no reason I can see we can't rip off a nice little win streak to end the season.

"Either way, though, I'd like to see us go out strong. We've got a lot of younger players who'll be back next year, and you'd like to see them go out on the right note and get fired up about next year. I'd also like to see the players who won't be back, especially the ones I've had for a few years now, finish on a positive note."

Legion Notes

Among the younger players who are getting it done of late are juniors-to-be Mike Barba (Scituate High) and Ben Murphy (Xaverian). Both started the season as deep reserves. However, with a couple of veterans falling by the wayside for one reason or another, the two youngsters have gotten their chance to play virtually every day, Barba at second base and Murphy in the outfield, and both have made the most of the opportunity.

"These two guys have probably matured the equivalent of two seasons in a couple of weeks," assessed Arnold. "They were a little shaky to start, but they've both settled down and done a real nice job, and they keep getting better as their confidence increases."

Both players have done the job in the field and continue to pick up steam at the plate. Both made contact in all three of their at bats Tuesday, with Barba finishing 1-for-3 with a solid base hit. Both also had solid lineouts.

It almost appears as if statistics are completely overlooked when fans cast their ballots. Fans adoringly vote Troy Glaus into the starting third base position, willing to look the other way as he hits a meager .258 into mid-July. He starts every year, therefore he must deserve it. Boston's Bill Mueller has quietly put together a season in which his batting average is 70 points higher and, while not even a power hitter, is slugging over 100 points higher than Glaus. While Glaus will have his name announced on Tuesday at 9 p.m., Mueller won't even be invited to sit on the bench.

In addition to this starter madness, the outdated rule of naming a representative from every team simply must be stopped. This is not Little League, where we care about all the players feeling good about themselves. It's the All-Star game. Teams should be made up of, get this, players who are all stars in the Major Leagues.

Who is Lance Carter, you might ask? Tampa Bay's "flamethrower" who will bring to Chicago six blown saves and an ERA up over four.

And Mike Williams? Wasn't he that really good closer for Pittsburgh last year? Why, yes he was. But because the piddling, pathetic Pirates needed a representative, his 1-3 record and 6.62 ERA were apparently good enough for All-Star recognition. I could name just about anyone in Boston's abominable bullpen who have had seasons to match or surpass that gem of a statline.

Last year, I watched the game and felt depressed for about a week. This year, the game has managed to crawl underneath my skin for a depressing week before even the first pitch.

Girls U16 team got their kicks this spring

The Cohasset U-16 girls soccer team just completed their most successful season ever. The team won the indoor championship at the South Shore Sports Center in March, and followed that by winning the Coastal Youth Soccer League outdoor championship in June.

The outdoor championship qualified the team for the Massachusetts Tournament of Champions in Amherst, where the team finished in sixth place with a record of 1-1-1. Their only loss was a tough 1-0 contest against Sandwich, who finished first in total points in the Tournament.

On the way to winning the CYSL championship, the girls beat Hull in the semi finals, 3-0, controlling play the entire game.

In the finals, they faced the undefeated Hingham team, and again won 3-0, exploding for three goals by Elizabeth Stone, Casey Anderson, and Lauren Rizzotti. Goaltender Cecelia Chapman recorded the shutout, with the aid of the team's outstanding defense.

Coach John Englander was pleased with the overall team effort. "Many of these girls have played together for six years, and this year they really showed what they can accomplish as a team. They should be very proud of the way they played, and the way they represented their town."

The girls now look forward to the fall, where most of them hope to be playing on the High School team.

Crossing roadways isn't a snap for local turtles

They seek dry, soft ground to lay eggs

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Snapping turtles in the mulch, snapping turtles at construction sites and snapping turtles in the roadway.

Over the past few weeks snapping turtles have been making tracks that have turned up in local police logs across the South Shore as concerned homeowners and motorists report sightings.

Here are some excerpts from the Hingham police log over the past two weeks: Free Street, caller reports large snapping turtle in driveway; Capt. Thompson Lane, resident reports large turtle stuck in soccer net; Cushing Pond Road and Cushing Street, caller reports large turtle walking in road; Kilby Street, caller reports large snapping turtle in road.

Unfortunately local roadways can be deadly for snapping turtles.

Two of the lucky ones, both females, are now in recovery at the New England Wildlife Center in Hingham while their cracked shells heal from unintended encounters with automobiles.

In fact the motor vehicle is one of the few "predators" of the adult snapping turtle, which is a successful species in the state, according the state Division of Fisheries and Wildlife, dubbed MassWildlife.

Over the past several weeks, the females have left the safety of ponds and streams to lay their eggs in soft, well-drained ground. The journey can take the turtles across roadways, which can pose a danger.

"They are probably one of our most common fresh-water turtles as common as the painted turtle," says William J. Davis, MassWildlife biologist. "However, they are far less visible until we get into the month of June and the nesting season."

Davis explained female snapping turtles look for well-drained soils or sand to dig a burrow and deposit their eggs. They lay 15-20 eggs in a typical clutch and leave once their eggs are laid. The time it takes for the eggs to develop is dependant on the weather. If it's dry and hot, they will develop quickly. If it's cold and damp, the babies may not emerge until the following spring.

Although the adult turtle has few predators – the eggs make a tasty meal for some birds like hawks and crows and mammals such as skunks and raccoons, which eat the vast majority of snapping turtle eggs.

"The snapping turtle is long-lived (upwards of 30 years) and the female lays hundreds of eggs in her lifetime – enough survive and maintain the population," Davis said.

Veterinarian Gregory Mertz, director of the New England Wildlife Center, carefully lifted one of the two injured snapping turtles recovering at the center onto the examining table to explain how the shell was repaired. The breaks in the shell are coated with epoxy and a metal plate holds the pieces of the shell together. Mertz said the animal control officer in Pembroke delivered one of the turtles and a citizen in Hingham brought the other turtle to the center. The two females will be released back into the wild near where they came from in a couple of weeks, he said.

"They're a hardy species," Mertz said. While other turtle species have become endangered due to diminishing habitat, the snapping turtle continues to do well. They can thrive in pure water, brackish water and stagnant water, he said.

In fact the NEWC usually sees snappers with cracked shells, but rarely treats a sick snapping turtle. Mertz explained once repaired, the cracked shells, which consist of bone with a layer of skin, will grow back and be as good as new.

Snapping turtles get their name from their ability to strike quickly in catching their prey. They are not a threat to people in water and will swim the other way, says Davis of MassWildlife.

"Only when they are out of the water and vulnerable can they get aggressive," he said. In other words they can deliver a bite. "Since they bite up toward the top of their shell, snappers should be held by the tail with their belly facing toward you."

Davis said when the snapper is out of water, it is on a mission – so should a good Samaritan wishing to help one get across the road, and it is safe to do so — he or she should make sure the turtle is put on the side of the road in the direction it wanted to go. If bitten, seek medical attention to prevent a possible infection, he said.

While permits are required to harvest snapping turtles commercially, Davis said, no license is required to hunt snapping turtles, whose meat is edible and tastes like chicken.

Despite some commercial harvesting and the danger of the roadways, Davis marvels at the snapping turtle's successful longevity on earth and its future.

"They are common and abundant. There is a snapping turtle population in every town in the Commonwealth and every water body in the state," he said. "They are well adjusted to the environment.

"If I had to say who would survive the longest – humankind or the snapping turtle – I'd say the snapping turtle would be here long after the Homo sapiens is gone," he said.

About the snapping turtle:

Omnivorous – they will eat almost anything they can catch and swallow.

Life expectancy – about 30 years on average in the wild.

Weight – often more than 20 pounds; state record is about 75 pounds.

Behavior – in water, they are fairly docile; on land they can be aggressive when disturbed

Beak – is sharp and horny but has no teeth. Very strong jaws.

Other features – each webbed foot has five clawed toes; long tail; hard shell ranges from brown to olive green to black to tan.

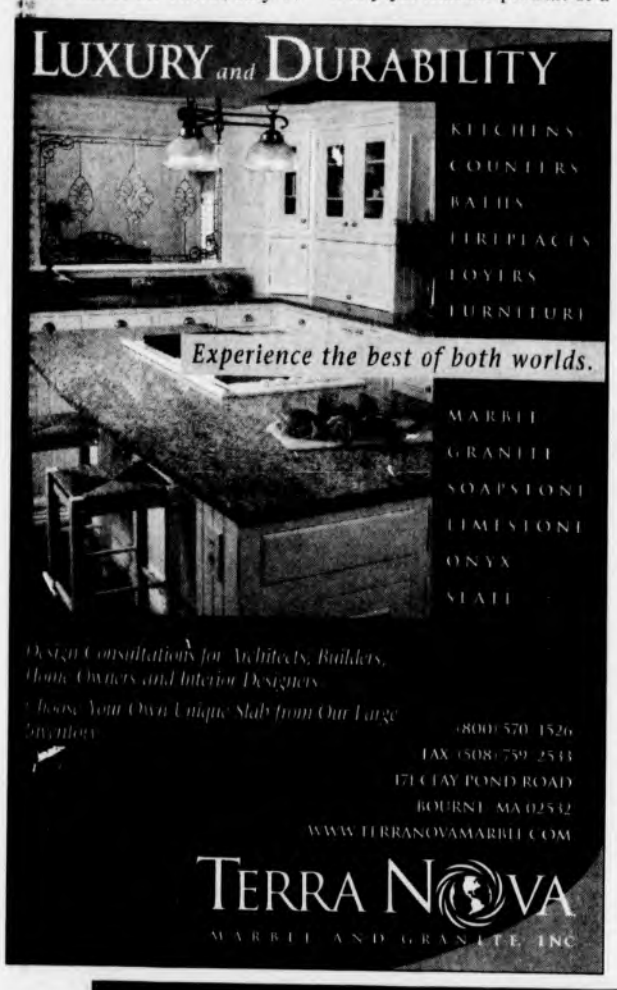
Lunch with Lipman at Buttonwood Books

Buttonwood Books & Toys will host "Lunch With Lipman" at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset on Thurs., July 17 from noon to 2 p.m.. Grapevine Caterers in Cohasset Village, will provide lunch. Elinor Lipman will discuss her latest book, "The Pursuit of Alice Thrift", a funny yet realistic portrait of a young female intern at a Boston Hospital who is aces in the learning department but deficient in social skills. Her no nonsense, direct manner alienates her associates and discomforts her patients. Other key players are Ray Russo, a fawning candy salesman with a murky past, who begins to woo Alice, and two friends from the hospital, RN Leo Frawley and fellow doctor Sylvie Schwartz. Lipman once again delights with the humor and originality that mark all her novels and creates in Alice Thrift a character who will gain the reader's affection and respect.

Lipman is the author of the novels "The Dearly Departed", "The Ladies Man", "The Inn at Lake Devine", "Isabel's Bed", "The Way Men Act" and "Then She Found Me". She has taught writing at Simmons, Hampshire, and Smith colleges, and won the 2002 New England Booksellers fiction award. Reservations are requested for planning purposes. This is a free event and the public is welcome. Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 to order a signed copy if unable to attend.



'Touch-A-Truck' July 20

Cohasset Call Firefighters Association presents its second annual "Touch-A-Truck" event Sunday, July 20, noon to 4 p.m. at the Cohasset Family Health Center, 223 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Route 3A.

Admission is $5 per person or $20 per family. Bring your camera.

Proceeds will go to The Cohasset Firemen's Benefit Association.

Sponsors of this event are B.E.G. Associates, Suburban Companies, Graham Waste Services Inc. and 3A Towing.

Free concert on the common

The public is invited to a free concert Tuesday, July 15, at 7:30 p.m. on the Town Common. This performance will be by the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh.

It is a good idea to bring either lawn chairs or blankets to sit on, and from time to time, inset repellent is a good item to have available. Call the Recreation office at 781-383-4109 to check on the status of concerts should you be in doubt as to weather conditions.

Garage dance

Are you feeling hot, hot, hot in the summer sun? Cool off at a dance at the Garage, Friday, July 11, from 7-10 p.m. This dance is for current fifth-graders who will be attending sixth grade this fall and all above grades. The door charge is $5 per person and snacks and refreshments will be sold as well.

Music Circus 'Franklin' signups

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct Music Circus registration for "Franklin" Tuesday, July 15, from 9 a.m. to noon and again from 5 to 7 p.m. at the recreation office in the Town Hall for children in the playground program.

Music Circus registrations for children involved in the Playground Program will be held every Tuesday at the Recreation office from 9 a.m. to noon and from 5 to 7 p.m. at the recreation office in the Town Hall.

"Franklin" will be held at the Music Circus on July 31. Children will be walked down from playground with their counselors.

Dog obedience classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will continuously, throughout the summer, offer dog obedience classes taught by Happy Dog Training School.

Third session classes will be held on Monday evenings, on the Town Common, Cohasset, starting for Obedience with Distractions. For all classes the fee is $100 for the five week, one hour per week program. Dog owners are required to have their dogs shots/inoculations up to date.

To register for the next available session, call the Recreation office at 781-383-4109. A new session will begin approximately every five weeks. Classes are limited in size and participants will be accepted on a first call, first enrolled basis.

Garage hours

During summer vacation, the Garage will be open the following days/times:

Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, 3 to 7 p.m.; Fridays, 4 to 10 p.m.

Every first and third Saturdays, 5 to 10 p.m.

Hull concert

The popular band concert and swing dance programs at the Bernie King pavilion at Nantasket Beach will continue next Sunday, July 13, with Jim Sacchetti and the Swingers, from 2 to 4 p.m. rain or shine, according to a recent announcement from Nantasket Beach Merchants Association president, Leonard Hersch. The local merchants group has been sponsoring the summer series for several decades. All programs are free and presented as a public, community service.

The recently re-built pavilion is fully handicapped accessible. It is suggested that people bring their own folding chairs. All events are scheduled for Sunday afternoons through Labor Day weekend.

Finally ready to rock

Tile layer finds new life with Humarockers

By Matthew Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

As a rule, rock 'n' roll — at least at the entry level — is generally considered a young person's game. But then, rock 'n' roll has also never strictly played by the rules.

With that in mind perhaps, two years ago David Burridge a Humarock tile layer, former carpenter and restaurant owner, Marshfield native and longtime fan of the Beatles, Rolling Stones and all the other classic 1960s and 70s rock he grew up on — decided to fulfill a lifelong secret ambition and began taking guitar lessons at age 48. He also began talking to some of his musically talented local area friends about the long-range plan of forming a band and performing their debut gig on his 50th birthday.

That milestone event finally happened this past March, two days early actually. Burridge and friends, appropriately dubbed the Humarockers, made their band debut at Humarock's neighborhood club The Nautical Mile on the 15th, just before the band's bass player hit the half-century mark on the 17th.

"I've always been a big fan of the music. I grew up in the classic rock era of the '60s and '70s."
Humarock resident
David Burridge

And the gig went just fine, thank you. By Burridge's own account, the Humarockers served up an energized mix of 60s/70s rock/R&B cover material and blues jamming that drew an approving crowd of more than 100 to the Mile, many of them dancing straight through until the band's closing tunes.

The response has been positive as such that the Humarockers have already booked four monthly return dates at the Nautical Mile through the summer, including the next gig scheduled for this Friday at 9 p.m. With Burridge also now doubling as the band's manager, the Humarockers have additionally landed a couple of private party dates for September.

"I've always been a big fan of the music," said Burridge at his home in Humarock. "I grew up in the classic rock era of the '60s and '70s and saw the Stones, the Who, the Doors, Ten Years After and quite a few others you'd care to name from back in the day. I wanted to learn to play myself but never really got around to it for reasons like married life and kids, etc. But I've always been kind of a closet musician and it's great to finally get out there and live the dream out."

The Righteous Brothers play the South Shore Music Circus July 11.

They haven't lost that lovin' feeling

Music still motivates Righteous Brothers

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

The induction earlier this year of The Righteous Brothers into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame seemed long overdue to many people, including the "Brothers" themselves — Bobby Hatfield and Bill Medley — who will bring their unique brand of blue-eyed soul and rock 'n roll to the South Shore Music Circus on Friday.

"We were ve[redacted] a long time [redacted] get in," explai[redacted]edley last week by tele[redacted] phone from his home in Newport Beach, California. "There had been a huge amount of politics at play in the past and we didn't know if it would ever happen. I knew of at least one heavyweight guy in particular who didn't want us in. We had been pretty disgusted with the whole thing for quite a while."

Artists become eligible for induction into the Hall of Fame 25 years after release of their first record, which in case of "The Righteous Brothers" was 1988. Their wait wasn't over, however, until March 10 when they joined fellow performers AC/DC, The Clash, Elvis Costello and The Attractions and The Police as honorees at the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame's 18th annual induction ceremony at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York

"Bobby and I have always been able to trust each other when we perform together. We've always had the kind of relationship that has been based on knowing that we can rely on each other. We just do

"It was a wonderful evening which was even more special, because we shared it with our families," says Medley. "We saw some people we hadn't seen in years and we got to meet a lot of new people. It was interesting, too, to perform for this audience. We did 'Lovin' Feeling,' which we've done hundreds and hundreds of times in concert, of course, but this was still different. These were our peers and at these kinds of events the audience is really listening to see whether you've still got it. I'd like to think that they saw

Byrne jazzes it up for annual benefit

By Matthew Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

For one Saturday afternoon each summer, there may be no better place for local area jazz fans than under the tent on a private, elegant stretch of waterfront property at Rexhame Beach in Marshfield.

That's where the annual "Jazz By the Beach" event has become a well-affixed tradition of South Shore summer entertainment since starting up in 1989. The yearly fest is an intimate but lively jazz concert featuring Norwell's own internationally known vocalist Donna Byrne, and to benefit Road To Responsibility (RTR), a Marshfield-based non-profit organization providing residential, recreational, employment and day habilitation to adults with disabilities.

Now in its 14th year, "JBTB" is back once again for its show at the Rexhame Beach estate this Saturday, 2-6 p.m.

Although still something of a well-kept secret, "JBTB" has nonetheless grown steadily in its near decade-and-a-half. Along with the concert, the event now includes a food-and-spirits buffet, a live auction, awards and raffles, and each year's show is invariably a sell-out, attracting hundreds of jazz fans and RTR supporters.

Byrne will be performing with her usual, equally acclaimed band of seasoned South Shore area jazz players, including her husband [redacted] Marshall Wood, pianist Paul [redacted] and drummer Jim Gwin, plus, the [redacted], an additional horn player and pos[redacted]ist. Two of Boston's best-known radio personalities, Ron Della Chiesa of WGBH and WPLM (Plymouth) and Jordan Rich of WBZ-radio, will serve as guest hosts and emcees.

"Jazz By the Beach is always a more upbeat and spirited show than we usually do in our typical club dates like at the Regatta Bar and elsewhere," said Byrne. "Because it's an outdoor show and in the afternoon, of course. We tend to draw from the side of our repertoire that best fits that mood and atmosphere. So there's not too many mellowed-out type ballads. It's pretty much uptempo jazz, blues and rhythmic material, sort of in a user-friendly way to the audience, since a lot of the people at this show are there mainly as supporters of RTR along with the other typical segment of devoted jazz fans."

Byrne's latest CD is "Licensed to Thrill", released last year on the independent A Records label, and featuring her regular studio band including Wood, Gwin and pianist Tim Ray, plus notable guest players Scott Hamilton (tenor saxophone) and Bucky Pizzarelli (guitar). The disc is the singer's sixth solo effort beginning with her 1990 debut "Sweet & Lovely", and her seventh overall including a 1996 collaboration with Boston-based trumpetist/bandleader Herb Pomeroy, "Walking On Air".

Musically, the latest disc offers more of Byrne's distinct, captivating vocal style that has won the singer worldwide acclaim. Like this praise from no less an advocate than Byrne's friend and past co-headliner Tony Bennett:

"It doesn't get any better than this...One of the best young jazz singers in the country today. She's the real McCoy."

Over the years, Byrne has come to believe that the Rexhame Beach site and the consistent blessing of sunny weather has been a winning combination for the "JBTB" event.

Said Byrne, "We've had really good luck with the weather for `Jazz By the Beach.' I remember the one year we did get rain just happened to be the time about five years ago we held the event at Pier 44 in Scituate instead of at Rexhame Beach. We know now that Rexhame Beach is really the only place for this show."

Internationally known vocalist Donna Byrne headlines at Jazz By the Beach Saturday, July 12.

Cobb salad rediscovered

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Cobb salad, much like Buffalo chicken wings, has a storybook birth by a restaurateur (in this case Robert Cobb of Hollywood's Brown Derby) who threw together an impromptu dish only to have it become a classic. A bold combination of lettuces, hard-boiled egg, avocado, bacon, chicken, tomatoes and blue cheese, Cobb is a composed salad, one that is perfect for a summer lunch or supper. The problem is sorting out the ingredients, dressing them properly, and then combining them in the right amounts. A soggy, tired pile of ingredients just won't do on a perfect Saturday in July.

Traditionally Cobb Salad contains watercress along with other greens. The recipes I checked included red leaf, chicory, romaine, bibb and/or iceberg. Romaine was my favorite for the crunch as well as flavor. The red leaf and bib were too buttery, the chicory sharp, the iceberg stiff and lacking flavor. Watercress is listed in every recipe and works well as a supporting green with just enough spice. To one head of romaine (or two hearts) or about 8 cups of romaine, I used one bunch of watercress, which yielded about 3 cups. This ratio provided a nice balance of flavor.

For the bacon, I used 1/2 pound of thick-cut bacon since it is meatier. Instead of trying to crumble it once it is cooked, I found it much easier to cut it into matchstick pieces before frying. I used two avocados in the salad as opposed to many recipes that used only one. As for the eggs, a generous four seemed best and I quartered them instead of chopping or dicing for a cleaner presentation. The amount of cheese varied greatly. I found anywhere from one to eight ounces and finally settled on 2 ounces or 1/2 cup crumbled blue cheese. Cherry or grape tomatoes are the only type with any flavor in the supermarket. I used one pint which I halved.

As for the vinaigrette, several of the recipes were heavy in ingredients like mustard, Worcestershire, and garlic. I wanted a light, bright dressing that allowed the ingredients to take center stage. I ended up with a simple recipe using white balsamic vinaigrette, shallots, a touch of mustard and olive oil. Who needs Worcestershire sauce with a salad? A composed salad is best when many of the ingredients are tossed with the dressing separately. (Tossing all the ingredients together is not much of an option since it creates an unholy mishmash of a salad.) I started with the greens, then the chicken, and then drizzled the balance of the ingredients with dressing just before serving. I also found that tossing the avocado with lemon juice added flavor and stopped discoloration.

The chicken, vinaigrette, eggs and bacon may all be prepared hours ahead of time, but the salad needs to be composed immediately before serving.

REALLY GOOD COBB SALAD

You can omit the chicken in this salad if you like - it will then accompany a chicken dish nicely. You can also make it with fried chicken if you want to go all out.

For The Vinaigrette:
1/2 teaspoon Kosher salt
2 tablespoons white balsamic vinegar
1/2 cup extra virgin olive oil
1/2 teaspoon Dijon mustard (optional)
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallot from one small shallot, freshly ground pepper to taste
For the Salad:
4 split chicken breast halves (2 whole breasts with skin and bone), about 10 ounces each
4 large eggs
1/2 pound thick-cut bacon
1 head romaine lettuce or 2 hearts, washed, dried and cut into bite-sized pieces, about 8-10 cups
1 bunch watercress, washed, dried and thick stems removed, about 3 cups
1 pint cherry or grape tomatoes, each halved
2 medium avocados, ripe but still slightly firm, cut into 1/2-inch pieces
1/2 cup crumbled blue cheese, about 2 ounces
3 tablespoons minced chives or 1/4 cup thinly sliced scallions, white and light green parts only

1. For the vinaigrette: In a small bowl combine the salt and vinegar and stir for 10 seconds to dissolve salt. Add remaining ingredients and whisk for 15 seconds or until the mixture is smooth, thickened and evenly colored. May be made a day ahead and stored airtight in the refrigerator. Remix ingredients before using.

2. For the chicken: Heat the oven to 450 degrees. Season the breast halves liberally with salt and pepper and place skin side-up in a shallow baking dish. Cook until juices run clear and the internal temperature of the thickest part of the breast reaches 160 degrees, about 20 to 25 minutes. When the chicken is cool enough to handle, peel away the skin and remove breast meat from the bone with either a small knife or your fingers. Cut the chicken into a 1/2-inch dice and set aside.

2. For the eggs: Place the eggs in a medium saucepan and cover with cold water to cover by 1 inch. Bring to a boil over medium-high heat. Remove from heat, cover and let sit for 10 minutes. Transfer the eggs to a bowl of cold water into which several ice cubes have been added and allow to sit for 5 minutes. Tap the entire surface of each egg on a countertop and then roll on the counter to further crack the shell. If the peeling is difficult, do it under cold running water. Half or quarter the eggs, cover and refrigerate until needed.

3. For the bacon: Cut the bacon into matchstick-sized slices and fry in a heavy duty skillet over medium heat until well browned and crisp, about 6 to 7 minutes. Drain on paper towels and set aside.

4 To finish the salad: Toss together the romaine, watercress, and 4 to 5 tablespoons vinaigrette until the greens are lightly coated and arrange them on a serving platter or large shallow bowl. Now toss the chicken with about 4 tablespoons vinaigrette until moistened and well flavored. Arrange the chicken, tomato, avocado, and eggs; separate rows on top of the greens. Drizzle vinaigrette over tomato, avocado and eggs. Sprinkle bacon, cheese and chives or scallions evenly over the salad and serve immediately.

that we still do."

Medley and Hatfield, both 62, first came together in 1962 when their respective groups — Medley's Paramours and Hatfield's Variations — joined forces. Their first gig was a college prom where they divided their $40 earnings five ways. Under the name The Paramours they released the single, "There She Goes (She's Walking Away)," on the Moonglow label in December of that year. The following spring, the act had been whittled down to just Medley and Hatfield, who got their new name after an appreciative African-American audience member described the duo's sound as righteous. Their debut single was the rocking "Little Latin Lupe Lu," written and produced by Medley.

Before long, famed record producer Phil Spector leased their Moonglow contract and added "The Righteous Brothers" to the roster of voices on his Phillies label.

"At first, we didn't know what Phil was going to do with us. We thought he would make some sort of 'Da Doo Run Run' or 'He's A Rebel' with us. Instead, he brought us in to meet Barry Mann and Cynthia Weil so they could play the song he had them write for us, "You've Lost that Lovin' Feeling.' Our mouths just about dropped open when we heard it. I remember saying, 'What a great song for the Everly Brothers,' because that's what it sounded like to me" recalls Medley.

"We gave it a try though. It had a huge range with a real high note in it, so I had to keep starting lower and lower. It really brought out my baritone for the first time. It was a very significant song, thanks in great measure to Phil Spector's work in the studio. The way he applied his 'wall of sound' (the combining of soaring orchestration and multilayered vocals) is what made 'Lovin' Feeling' an amazing song and truly a classic."

Following the mega-success of the 1964 release of "Lovin' Feeling," Spector put his grandly orchestrated style to work for the deep-voiced Medley and the high-pitched Hatfield on a string of chart-topping ballads: "Just Once In My Life," "Hung On You," and the Hatfield-voiced "Unchained Melody," which Medley produced.

In 1966, Verve Records bought "The Righteous Brothers" contract and they continued their hit-making there. Their first release for the new label was another Mann and Weill song, "(You're My) Soul and Inspiration," but with Spector out of the picture, Medley handled most of the producing duties.

In February of this year, Spector was charged with first-degree murder after a woman was found shot to death in his Los Angeles mansion. Medley has followed the widely reported story, but prefers to remember his former record producer for the professional association they once shared.

serious about music lessons, he put himself in capable hands, that of blues singer/guitarist, guitar instructor and Weymouth resident Rick Russell, who in turn has become a member of the Humarockers as well. Russell enjoys a strong Boston area following with his group The Ricky "King" Russell Band, and has been playing professionally for three decades, including regular gigs with his band at the Yard Rock in Quincy, Jamie's Pub in Marshfield and five years through the mid '90s as house band at the House of Blues in Harvard Square.

Other Humarockers include lead vocalist Tina Britney (who sang for the popular Boston band the Lowgistics during the '80s), her husband and drummer Brad Britney and keyboardist/vocalist Jeff Forti. All of these players come from, as Burridge says, "the other side of the bridge," in Marshfield.

At any given Humarockers gig, the band draws from a wide range of the revered, old-school rock-'n'roll/R&B its members are ever-nostalgic for, from the Beatles and Stones to the Dave Clark 5 and Aretha Franklin to such nuggets as "Dirty Water," "Wooly Bully," "Secret Agent Man" and many more.

Said Burridge, "Where we'd like to go with the Humarockers is we'd like to get the word out about the band and generate more venues to play in the area. By and large, I think we're better suited as a live band for private parties than for clubs."

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

WEDNESDAY, JULY 9

The Scorpio moon forms a 90-degree contact to Jupiter this morning. Its influence may generate an easier, lighter mood. On the other hand, don't go overboard and make extravagant plans or promises. You can get a lot accomplished today, if you are well-organized. Plan to initiate new activities before 1:58 p.m., when the moon aligns with Mercury and becomes inactive. The remainder of the afternoon is ideal for redoing projects already begun, making repairs and remodeling.

THURSDAY, JULY 10

The moon enters ebullient Sagittarius at 2:48 a.m., remaining there today and tomorrow. There are a couple of rough spots, however. Today, the moon forms 90-degree alignments to Uranus at 6:46 a.m. and Mars at 3:56 p.m. Slow down and use caution while driving or operating machinery. Avoid taking chances or doing anything risky. The combination of a lunar contact to Neptune and applying Venus-Mars alignment makes this evening prime for social or romantic activities.

FRIDAY, JULY 11

The moon and Pluto conjoin at 8:13 a.m., warning you to wake up in a good mood. Think before you say or do something you will later regret. Fortunately, storm clouds move out quickly, and sunny astrological weather prevails during the remainder of the day. The best period for initiating new enterprises occurs between 8:30-11:53 a.m., when the Sagittarius moon aligns with Jupiter and becomes inactive. Get back in the swing of favorite sports or hobbies. Put on your party hat and let the good times roll this evening.

SATURDAY, JULY 12

The final windup to this month's full moon begins at 4:21 a.m., when the moon enters Capricorn. The full moon will culminate tomorrow afternoon, generating high energy this weekend. Capricorn is an ambitious, business-oriented sign. That means that you can be most productive, if you have work projects to accomplish. A lunar opposition to Saturn at 12:36 p.m. prompts you to focus on commitments you have made to others and follow through. Lunar alignments to Mars and Venus this evening set the stage for social gatherings.

SUNDAY, JULY 13

Resolve to start this day with a peaceful, positive attitude. It is often difficult to sleep and get proper rest on a full moon eve; therefore, people may be grouchy and difficult to please. The planet Mercury moves into Leo at 8:10 a.m., remaining there until July 30. Hard work, self-discipline, handling responsibilities are the prominent themes of this full moon. At 3:21 p.m. the full moon culminates at 21-degrees of the sign Capricorn. At this time the moon becomes inactive for the remainder of the day.

MONDAY, JULY 14

Planetary patterns this week promise a relaxed, casual pace. Today the moon enters Aquarius at 6:38 a.m., remaining there today and tomorrow. This is a period when people are likely to reach out and network with others to achieve their goals. There is one rough spot in effect today. This occurs between 8:21-11:21 a.m., when the moon opposes Mercury. Sidestep stubborn, obstinate behavior. Be willing to compromise and understand another's point of view. The remainder of the day rates high across the board. Be more adventurous; follow your bliss.

TUESDAY, JULY 15

The Aquarius moon prompts you to be more innovative, open-minded. Influences today may spark new awareness, insights, learning experiences. The green light is on for new starts before 1:19 p.m., when the moon forms a harmonious alignment to Pluto. After that a lunar polarity to Jupiter takes over, bringing a time to slow down and think things through. There may be a tendency to act impulsively or carelessly. Give other plenty of freedom and space. This alignment culminates at 6:57 p.m., and the moon becomes inactive.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 16

Signing contracts or making long-range plans or commitments are off limits for the remainder of the week. Take advantage of relaxing planetary energies, and take extra vacation time. The moon enters Pisces at 11:14 a.m., remaining there until Friday evening. In addition, Mercury prepares to oppose Neptune, the planetary ruler of Pisces. This combination is great for creativity, fantasy or just mellowing out and enjoying life. On the other hand, it can be most difficult if you have a lot of work to do. You must carefully organize your time and pay extra attention to details, accuracy.

THURSDAY, JULY 17

Yesterday's advice applies to today as well. The moon continues to travel in Pisces, active throughout the day. There is one pitfall in today's planetary picture, however. A lunar alignment to Pluto is in effect between 5:49-8:49 p.m. Deep feelings, hidden resentments may surface. Choose your words carefully and avoid touchy subjects in this period.

FRIDAY, JULY 18

It may be difficult to get motivated to work today. The Pisces moon continues to place an emphasis on taking it easy, following the path of least resistance. This is not a time to make long-term decisions or financial commitments. The moon enters Aries at 7:20 p.m., bringing an energy boost and making the evening prime for partying.

Summertime splendor in the sunny border

Green thumbs up

By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

A tiny, fluttering green jewel hovers before my eyes as I emerge from the back of a sunny border laden with a handful of weeds.

As if dangling by a puppeteer's strings, the minute little hummingbird patiently awaits my departure so that it may continue its systematic course through the garden to sip nectar from a wide array of colorful flowers. Sunlight suddenly illuminates its iridescent red throat as the male ruby throat effortlessly glides among the slender stalks of catmint, salvias and coral-bells. Moments later, his wings a blur, the magical little creature streaks across the backyard to visit several hanging baskets of fuchsias and million bells overflowing with dangling pink and red blossoms.

Honeysuckle, nasturtiums, and flowering maples (Abutilon) prove irresistible lures with many more blooms to follow in the weeks to come to entice our smallest birds to visit my garden throughout the growing season.

Years ago, when my gardens were in their infancy, poppy red, harvest gold and avocado green were in vogue and dominated both my indoor and outdoor color schemes. Warm toned perennials in fiery oranges, yellows, reds and bright gold were prevalent throughout my borders and were ideal for attracting hummingbirds that gravitate to brightly colored tubular flowers.

Pastel colors and cool tones have become my preferred palette in recent years with pink, white, lavender, blue and lemon yellows predominant in the majority of my gardens. The hummingbirds enjoy many of these softer-colored flowers but to ensure continued visits from these special little birds, I have adopted a warm color scheme in a renovated border around my deck. Container gardens and hanging plants on the deck supplement the perennial plants in the surrounding garden and throughout the day, hummers can be seen darting among the flowers.

Our bloom season seems to be running a week or two behind due to the cold, damp springtime weather, but heat and humidity are quickly bringing the borders along to reveal their summertime splendor. For many gardeners like myself, the early summer garden is the highlight of the gardening season. The border surrounding my deck has been overflowing with spectacular color for several weeks. The showy blooms of poppies, peonies and iris have faded but have been gradually replaced by a broad expanse of electric yellow sundrops (Oenothera fruticosa).

Despite their tendency to spread rather aggressively, the glow of a multitude of 2-inch cheerful yellow flowers is worth the inconvenience of having to thin them severely every year. During the fall, their foliage becomes a lustrous reddish-bronze offering an appealing touch of color when many other perennials have declined. A cousin to the common sundrops, the Ozark primroses (O. missouriensis) exhibit huge 3-5 inch flowers on plants only 6 inches tall. Given well-drained soils, these small, clumping plants feature decorative buds, spectacular blooms and serve as a perfect edging plant that is better behaved than its wandering relative.

The family of salvias offer ideal, long blooming companions to the sundrops. Among the perennial sages, Salvia sylvestris 'May Night' is well deserving of its designation as a 'perennial plant of the year'. Dense, deep purple, two-foot spires above crinkled green foliage bloom for weeks and if removed promptly, blooming may recur. Full sun and well-drained soils produce large, husky plants. Other cultivars include S. Blue Queen and S. Blue Hill demonstrating blue-violet flowers, S. Snow Hill with lovely white spires and S. Rose Queen for shades of rose pink. Soft, hairy, wavy leaves characterize the charming Salvia verticillata cultivars. Clusters of lavender or white flowers on arching 12-inch stems bloom throughout the summer if spent flowers are removed. Look for S. Purple Rain and S. alba for a delightful display of long-lasting flowers in full sun and well-drained soil.

Certain plants have become invaluable workhorses for my sunny borders and may be seen throughout my gardens. A recent addition to this list of long bloomers is the charming Siberian catmint (Nepeta sibirica). Irresistible to hummingbirds, the two- to three-foot stems bear soft lavender-blue flowers that seem to blend with every color scheme. Sun and well-drained soils are preferred. This sturdy, upright catmint is ideal for the mixed perennial border and an excellent companion to my profusion of daylilies.

An equally appealing perennial for the front of the border is the recently introduced Geranium 'Rozanne'. Attractive lobed leaves are slightly marbled and looked great all summer. Similar to many of the larger-leafed perennial geraniums, the flowering stems gradually elongate over the season giving the appearance of knitting surrounding companion plants together. Beginning in June, dozens of saucer-shaped blossoms are produced above an expanding 20-inch mound. The pleasing, two-inch flowers continue until frost appearing deep blue with white centers during the cooler times of the day and fading to a paler shade of lavender when exposed to full sun and midday heat. These hardy plants are the perfect complement to daylilies, heliopsis, coreopsis, shasta daisies and echinacea.

My neighbor (Joan Chrusciel) and I welcome you to tour our national daylily display gardens during July to view the splendor of summertime bloom. Due to the chilly damp spring, the bloom season has been delayed and will most likely not peak until after the middle of the month. We are located on Brookwood Road in Hanover. A limited number of plants may be available for purchase later in the season.

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

A BONE TO PICK

One of the many causes of hearing loss is otosclerosis, an abnormal growth of bony tissue in the middle ear that immobilizes structures. The disease involves rapid bone remodeling (rebuilding) in the tiny bones of the middle ear. As the disease progresses, the bones become more dense than normal. The abnormal bony tissue growth usually freezes the stapes (the stirrup bone), which rests against the entrance to the inner ear (the oval window). As a result, sound waves have difficulty reaching the inner ear. The process usually worsens slowly over the years until there is a moderate hearing loss. A first treatment option is a hearing instrument, which may boost sound sufficiently to overcome stiffness in the middle ear bones.

For some people, hearing loss happens because sound waves find it impossible to reach their destination in the inner ear. Hearing loss is often the result of aging, although it can be caused (or made worse) by illness, medications, injury, heredity, or prolonged exposure to loud noise. Are you hearing less than you used to? Come visit us at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, and find out why and what you can do about it. P.H. 781-337-1144. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health.

P.S. Otosclerosis is thought to be a genetic disorder that typically surfaces in early adulthood, but it can occur in older adults as well.

Train towns cross about gates' design

Mitigation dispute process may start

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Greenbush towns of Scituate, Hingham and Weymouth have joined with Cohasset in setting the stage for a potential fight with the MBTA over the type of gates to be used at grade crossings.

The towns want quad gates that employ four arms to stop traffic and the MBTA is pushing for standard crossings with median barriers or traffic channeling delineators.

The towns sent a letter on June 9 to the MBTA asking the transit authority not to send design packages showing the use of standard gates until the issue is resolved. But the MBTA continues to send along designs that depict standard grade crossings with median strips.

Quad gates use four arms to stop traffic and would therefore eliminate the need for the median barriers or traffic channeling delineators, which would be used for narrower roads. The medians and delineators are unsightly, town officials say, and could negatively impact historic neighborhoods. Because Greenbush is a whistle-free corridor — meaning whistles would only be sounded for emergencies — standard grade crossing treatment needs medians to prevent impatient motorists from skirting around a closed gate to beat an oncoming train.

The gates issue is still before

Town leaves mark on Kentucky town

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

If you happen to travel to downtown Liberty, Ky., you might think you're on South Main Street in Cohasset.

That's because the brand-new Liberty City Hall is modeled after the former Paul Pratt Memorial Library building. The building's new sign also has a familiar "look," because it was designed and made by Cohasset's Hassan Woodcarving & Sign Company.

The town hall and sign are no coincidence, but a result of Cohasset's picturesque beauty charming the Liberty mayor, Steven Sweeney, whose daughter and son-in-law lived in town.

Former 'Garage kid' is still focused on achieving his goals

Is on staff at Our World

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Returning home after college graduation, students may sometimes feel overwhelmed with the thought of joining the "real world." For Cohasset resident Tony Bramblett, that couldn't be farther from the truth.

Roughly one week after receiving his degree, Bramblett came on board as the development coordinator for the Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum. The museum, which will be housed in the 1929 wing of the old Osgood School, is devoted to creating opportunities for children throughout the South Shore to gain global awareness through play spaces, rotating exhibits, and programming.

Bramblett's position requires orchestrating major fund-raising for the project, which he is sure to handle with ease, considering the accomplishments he has achieved so far.

"I kind of have a little bit of history in town," he said.

In 1998, Bramblett, along with friend Jaime Butman, began working on building a teen center in the old public works garage. The two had hopes of providing teens in town a place for dances and socializing, and planned to call it simply, the Garage. For having no fund-raising experience prior to this endeavor, Bramblett and Butman excelled, raising roughly $50,000 for the space. The Garage (overseen by the Cohasset Youth Resources Committee and the recreation department) continues to invite young adults in for movie night, parties and other social events, years after Bramblett and Butman have outgrown their teens.

Bramblett was not always sure of the career path he would follow. He began his studies at Bates College in Maine as a bio-chemistry major, hoping to someday become a doctor. After two years, he decided to switch to art history.

While working in the development office at school, Bramblett began to see that his love for art history could be combined with his interest in fund-raising, and might

Stressed out about planned bump-outs

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It may be up to voters at town meeting to decide if controversial "bump-outs" should be an added safety feature in the $1.8 million Village Revitalization project.

Bump-outs would potentially allow pedestrians better visibility at crosswalks by allowing them to stay on the curb and see past parked cars, which the selectmen believe currently poses a safety risk. The issue of bump-outs came to a head during a heated portion of Tuesday's selectmen's meeting where officials decided to consider whether votes should have the final say.

The revitalization project has been in the works for upwards of seven years and is being paid for through grants and private donations.

To give people an idea of what the proposed bump-outs would look like, Town Manager Mark Haddad said he would contact the DPW about putting up traffic delineators to mark the proposed sites, which went up Saturday. The island at the top of Depot Court was removed as part of the demonstration to make sure trucks like the large ladder engine of the fire department could make the turn.

Haddad was against installing any physical bump-out delineators because they would eliminate parking spaces. Part of the streetscape improvements include re-aligning village parking, which will result in a net loss of just one space, but keeping the parking as is for the bump-out trial would eliminate more spaces.

With the addition of the very visible markers came a petition, written by Ralph Dormitzer, a member of the Village Renaissance Committee, opposing their existence. The petition was

All meetings are at Town Hall unless indicated otherwise.

Hedlund hours at Town Hall

The July office hours for Sen. Robert Hedlund will be held in the Cohasset Town Hall on Thursday, July 17 from 12-1 p.m. in the 2A Vestibule.

Sen. Hedlund also maintains a district office at 66 Sea St., North Weymouth that is accessible Monday through Friday for constituents and appointments with the senator. The telephone number there is 781-340-9866.

Correction on septic design

A story in the July 3 Mariner should have said the Board of Health approved a four-bedroom septic design for 3 Jerusalem Lane. The article incorrectly stated the septic design was for three bedrooms.

Keep well clinics

The Cohasset Board of Health monthly keep well clinic for July with Judy Fitzsimmons, R.N., P.H.N. and Jan Bennett, R.N. is Thursday July 24 from 1–3 p.m. Harborview senior housing off Elm Street (behind the police department).

Keep well clinics are for all town residents regardless of age!

New principal starts at Deer Hill

New Deer Hill Principal Keith Gauley began setting up shop in his new office last Friday. Due to prior engagements he will not begin his full-time position until Aug. 1.

Supt. Edward Malvey said Gauley is "extremely excited" about his new position.

"For any administrator to walk into a brand-new building is exciting. It's rarely an opportunity you get in this field," he said.

Gauley was the former principal of the Center Elementary School in Abington.

Recreation fees

School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn said he, along with Supt. Edward Malvey and Recreation Department Driector Jack Worley will meet in early September to "iron out procedure and protocol" and set up rules for payment when school facilities are used for recreation programs. Flynn said this will be a good way to "protect what we have" and also allow others to have access to the new facilities. Flynn said a final decision will be made prior to the start of basketball season.

Avalon letter

School Supt. Edward Malvey sent a finalized version of the School Committee's letter to the Zoning Board regarding AvalonBay, a 200-unit apartment complex planned for Route 3A. The letter details what the School Committee thinks the project's impact on what the schools will be.

School construction

The school construction projects are all going according to plan, said Supt. Eedward Malvey. At various meetings over the last two weeks, construction officials provided Malvey with progress reports.

Malvey said he had been concerned about contractors maintaining their schedules after hearing that workers hadn't been seen on site at the Deer Hill School. After the meetings, he said his fears were allayed and everything seems to be progressing well.

"I believe the next to last week in August, we should be done," said Malvey.

Still to be completed at Deer Hill are window repairs and trim, as well as cleaning of the construction areas.

The front portion, or "E" wing, of the middle-high school is expected to be finished Aug. 20. Canopies may be needed over the doors of the two main front entrances, which may still require some finishing touches, but all barriers will be down and the main doors will be open in time for the first day of school.

The "D" wing of the school, which includes the new music room, will be completed by September, and Malvey said he has been told the new auditorium will be completed by Sept. 15, which he said is "critical."

The connecting of the middle school to the high school, and finishing the middle school itself are scheduled for completion this December.

New Osgood stage

After two years of focusing a portion of its fund-raising efforts toward the purchase of a new stage, the Osgood PSO was granted permission by the School Committee to move forward with its plans. The 24-foot stage, which collapses for easy storage, can also be moved on wheels to provide a performance space both indoors or out.

While the Osgood School was being built, plans for a stage had to be eliminated due to budget issues. The PSO has been working hard ever since to provide a stage area for the children at the school.

The stage will cost roughly $20,000 and will be paid for in its entirety by the Osgood PSO.

Beautification Committee

Selectmen are in the process of forming a program to help keep various town properties looking nice. Much like the towns of Norwell and Scituate, Cohasset would like to start a beautification committee where members would help plant flowers on islands and other small properties around town. For those interested, call Town Hall at 781-383-4105

New Stop Sign

There is a new stop sign at the end of Forest Avenue Extension, making the intersection a three-way stop.

Schools contract out for cleaning service

Will see how well it works

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

After much discussion, the School Committee has voted to contract out for cleaning services on a trial basis to protect the town's investment in its new school buildings, as well as save money.

Committee members have hired the services of One Source, a company operating out of Somerville, to provide cleaning for school restrooms and locker rooms on a nightly basis, among myriad other duties, including major cleaning during school vacations and over the summer.

The school's current budget will be able to cover the cost of hiring the company, but in order to maintain a high level of cleanliness, as well as have someone in the buildings during the day, additional help is needed.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said the school department was not in a financial position to add to custoidal staff to keep up with the cleaning needs of the expanding schools. The department would have had to add three more custodians to the nine it currently has just to keep up with cleaning. With that not being an option, the schools chose to outsource the work while retaining five of the nine custodians as well to perform needed chores.

Currently, custodians are being paid an average salary of $32,000 a year. With the recommended full staff of 12, the cost would be roughly $384,000 a year. By outsourcing, the town would save around $140,000, and will still be able to protect its investment by providing the level of cleaning the buildings need.

"We have increased significantly the size of the schools," said Haddad. "It's important to protect the $51 million investment the town has made."

A July 8 letter, which Haddad sent to Supt. Edward Malvey, stated One Source made a bid of $247,152 for services for one year, which includes cleaning during vacations. The current available budget for the schools is $206,020, which leaves a gap of $41,132.

"For a lot of different reasons, we have to try this at least once."
— School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn.

Haddad said because the town will be eliminating one position in the DPW, those funds would be transferred from the town budget to the school budget at the fall Special Town Meeting.

Malvey said the original bid has since dropped to $238,653, as certain aspects of the contract, which would not have a negative effect on the cleaning, were pulled.

Haddad said the school has $18,000 included in the current budget for the purchase of cleaning supplies and paper goods, which gives Malvey the flexibility to purchase products at the best deal he can, whether that be through the outsourced company or otherwise.

The town's finance office had recommended retaining four current custodians, but the School Committee decided to keep five, although members said six would be better.

During school hours, there will be one custodian at each of the schools, with one custodian working during after-school hours at the middle-high school and another sharing time between Osgood and Deer Hill.

The custodians working during after-school hours will be primarily responsible for the cleaning of various office spaces, such as the nurse and guidance offices. One Source employees will only work during after-school hours.

"For a lot of different reasons, we have to try this at least once," said School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn.

If the schools try the service and everything goes well, it will make sense to keep the services, if not, Flynn said they'll "go back to the drawing board."

Flynn said an assessment could be made about the new system after about five months. At that time, School Committee members would be able to tell if an additional custodian is needed.

But committee member Mark DeGiacomo asked, "Where would $32,000 in the middle of the year come from?"

School Committee members were also concerned about the issue of snow removal. Previously, custodians have been responsible for shoveling and sanding the walkways and entranceways at the schools. Having one custodian during the day at each school makes that an impossible task.

"We have to be clean, safe, clear and sanded," said Malvey.

After speaking with Haddad about the situation, Malvey said he was told the DPW will pick up the snow removal as part of its duties, but committee members are concerned in a snowstorm the DPW might be tied up elsewhere and school will have to be closed for a snow day.

Malvey said he was assured either the DPW will get the schools cleared out, or Haddad said he'll get it done somehow, to which Flynn joked, "does he have a shovel?"

Haddad said the snow removal issue will be an ongoing discussion and a solution will be found prior to this winter.

The school department has notified the custodians' union about the new cleaning program. School custodians will continue to work over the summer with a transition period when the company comes on board Sept. 1.

Custodian fears action will lead to cleaning house

Questions how outsourcing work will impact jobs, students

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Several Cohasset custodians will find themselves out of work now that the school department has hired an outside group to take over cleaning duties at the schools.

At least one custodian sees the move as changing the way day-to-day procedures are run at the schools.

In previous years, custodians have been responsible for not only keeping the schools clean, but transporting food for lunches, setting up for special events, and being a friendly face who will open a thermos when mom has twisted the top on too tight.

When school begins this fall, only five of the nine current custodians will be returning to work.

"I don't know how it's going to work out," said Ted Holland, who has been a Deer Hill custodian for eight years.

Holland has come to know the students at Deer Hill very well over the years. He has been involved with everything from clothing drives to benefit the Lakota Sioux of Wamblee, S.D., to fishing a retainer out of the garbage when it has been accidentally thrown away.

Over the summer, he enjoys bumping into students who give him a friendly, "Hi Mr. Holland."

While Holland is lucky and will keep his job, he feels for the workers who are going to be laid off and worries about what the future could bring for his job, when the cost of outsourcing climbs next year.

"It doesn't make me feel very secure in my job," he said. "We're left in limbo."

Holland spoke at last week's school committee meeting, and asked members to consider the impact a decision on contracting an outside company will have for everyone involved with the school system.

"The current custodian staff has an approximate total of 100 years of service experience. We take great pride in our ability to facilitate a clean and safe environment," he said. "We take extra steps to provide special services to all staff members. When a special school event is being held, such as school plays and concerts, we are always there to help out. An outside contracting company will not supply this level of service."

Holland also brought up the issue of safety, and said that children who forget a book or homework and return to school after hours to retrieve it will not have the security of knowing who is in the building.

"They know the custodian at the school and feel safe entering the building. If a private company is to take over, the students' safety may become jeopardized."

Supt. Edward Malvey said he doesn't see hiring out a company as being a safety issue and that the children will come to know the new people in time, just as they came to know the current custodians. He also said the workers are subject to criminal record offense or CORI checks, which the company follows up on.

Holland wishes the town would rethink its decision, but knows "it's a little too late for that."

In preparation for what might come, Holland is considering other career options such as getting his Class Two license or going into air conditioning.

"I've already thought about what I have to do. It doesn't look good for us," he said.

HAPPENINGS

Dog obedience classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will continuously, throughout the summer, offer dog obedience classes taught by Happy Dog Training School.

Third session classes will be held on Monday evenings, on the Town Common, Cohasset, starting for Obedience with Distractions. For all classes the fee is $100 for the five week, one hour per week program. Dog owners are required to have their dogs shots/inoculations up to date.

To register for the next available session, call the Recreation office at 781-383-4109. A new session will begin approximately every five weeks. Classes are limited in size and participants will be accepted on a first call, first enrolled basis.

Carillon concerts on the Common

The 79th Annual Series of Summer Carillon Recitals will be given to the 57-bell carillon in the tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset, on eight successive Sunday evenings at 6 p.m., through Aug. 17. The public is invited to bring lawn chairs, blankets and picnic suppers to Cohasset Common; to the courtyard off Highland Avenue extension; or to the sunken terrace in the middle of Stagecoach Way; the pedestrian walk that runs off Main Street across from the tower. Printed programs will be distributed on the Common, and may also be found in a stand by the church courtyard. In case of rain, listen from your parked cars.

These hour-long concerts are free of charge. After each program, the public is invited to tour the tower, view a demonstration of the instrument, and perhaps play a tune on the bells if they wish.

Carillonneurs for the remainder of the series are as follows: July 20, Alexander Solovov, Elena Sadina and Sergei Gratchev, three Russian carillonneurs currently living in Mechelen, Belgium will play; July 27, James Fackenthal of the University of Chicago; Aug. 3, John Agraz of the University of California at Berkeley will perform; Aug. 10, Dionisio Lind, Carillonneur of The Riverside Church in New York City; and the last concert on Aug. 17, will be performed by St. Stephen's own Head Carillonneur, the multi-talented Sally Slade Warner.

For more information, please phone Sally Slade Warner at 978-475-2599; or Mary Kennedy, the assistant carillonneur at 781-383-9599; or the at St. Stephen's Church office, 781-383-1083.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

BIRTHDAY WISHES

Happy, Happy Birthday number five to Miss Kyle Burke from her family and friends. Kyle turned five this past Tuesday, July 15 and is so excited to be a "whole handful." We all hope you have a wonderful year Kyle and enjoy being five!

IT'S A GIRL!

Anne and Alex Marshall of Cohasset announce the birth of Taylor Alexandra Marshall who arrived precisely at 10:13 a.m., June 10. Taylor tipped the scales at 5 lbs., 7 oz. and measured 19 ins. in length. Available for extra hugs are grandparents Ruth and Bent Hermansen of Bornholm, Denmark; and Penelope Spurr Marshall of Biddeford Pool, Maine. Taylor is also the granddaughter of the late Julian Howard Marshall Jr.

BU DEGREES

The following Cohasset residents received degrees from Boston University this spring: Christian N. Ford (M.D. in medicine); Ellen G. Kielmeyer (Ed.M. in policy, planning and administration); Robert C. Morgan (B.S. in communication); and Kristin L. Niessink (M.S. in nutrition).

HONOR ROLL

David DeVito of Cohasset was named to the 12th grade honor roll for the second semester at Tilton School in Tilton, NH. Keep up the hard work, David.

Paul B. Cotter, son of Dr. Paul and Margaret Cotter, was named to the fourth quarter honor roll at St. Sebastian's School in Needham. Paul was a 10th grader this past year. Super work, Paul.

DEAN'S LIST

Great work to both of these students. Elizabeth W. Anderson and Jason Richard Brown, both of Cohasset, earned dean's list status at Curry College for the spring 2003 term.

Rebecca Moje has been named to the dean's list for the spring semester at Tufts University, an honor which requires a semester grade point average of 3.4 or greater.

NEW GRANDDAUGHTER

Sound the trumpets! Merle and Joan Brown of Beechwood Street are the proud grandparents of a brand-new baby girl, Audrey Joan Fleming. Audrey arrived June 27 at 9:58 a.m. and tipped the scales at exactly 7 lbs. She measured 20-1/2 ins. long. Her big brother is Christian and her proud parents are Marcy and Don Fleming of Plympton. Also out shopping for pink are grandparents Donald and Nancy Fleming of Mattapoisett, great grandmother Blanche Bennett of Hanover, and great grandfather Peter Omilnowicz of Webster. As most of you know, grandfather Merle is a member of the Cohasset Board of Selectmen.

BLUEBERRY FEST

Yum, Yum, Yum! The annual Blueberry Festival will be held at the Beechwood Congregational Church, on Thursday, July 24 at 6:30 p.m.. The "all you can eat" dinner will include pasta with meat sauce, salad, bruscetti, beverages and blueberry sundaes. Following dinner, blueberry items will be auctioned off. Dinner for adults is $8 and $4 for children. To make reservations, call 781-383-1298.

FRESHMAN MENTOR

Ashley Ulmer will serve as a junior advisor at Williams College for the incoming Class of 2007. Junior advisors live with first-year students and serve as informal mentors for them throughout the year. Ashley was selected for this position for her ability to interact with people from backgrounds different from her own, and for her enthusiasm to promote communication between people. Junior advisors must also have shown a willingness to challenge and explore new ideas and to possess the ability to motivate others.

Music plays a big role in summer production

This story is third in a series, outlining the process from start to finish, of producing children's theater. The Children's Drama Workshop, founded by the Deveney sisters, Beth, Grace and Sarah, is in its 15th year.

For actors in this year's Children's Drama Workshop production of "Jack Beanstalk," learning lines and stage cues aren't enough. This production requires rhythm, of which there is an abundance in this year's cast and crew.

This year's show has many musical numbers which the children are very excited about. With a diverse selection of music and movement, this show truly has something for everyone.

The Arrows, who will be pointing Jack along his journey in the sky, perform dance routines to the music of Michael Jackson and Beyonce Knowles.

Eleven-year-old Fiona McBride said her favorite dance is done to Beyonce Knowles' "Crazy in Love."

"It's really fast and you move around a lot," she said. She thinks having musical numbers in the show "makes the play more fun to watch," and shows a different kind of talent.

Gabrielle Rodman, who is also 11, said her favorite dance is "Crazy in Love" as well.

"These are really cool songs that Beth picked and it adds a lot to the play," she said.

Eleven-year-old Mimi Mahoney said her favorite dance is "Love at First Sight," by Kylie Minogue.

"I like the song and the dance," she said. She also thinks the show will be better with the dancing because it will make it more interesting for people to watch.

Twelve-year-old Ana Bottary, who has been studying dance and gymnastics for years, will be performing a solo at the beginning of this year's show, which will include a back handspring. She said her favorite dance is "Crazy in Love" as well, and thinks people will enjoy the dancing in the show.

Mexican Jumping Beans in the play dance to Buster Poindexter's "Hot Hot Hot."

Tucker DeSisto, 6, said he enjoys dancing to the music and said he'd heard the song on the radio before he heard it at drama. He said he likes dancing because "I like the moves and I like having exercise."

The conga line is what motivates five-year-old old Adam Game. "I like it because we spin around," he said. "I like wiggling around."

Cole Maher,7, said he likes the song 'Hot Hot Hot," because "it's awesome." He also said that when they were first learning the dance "it was hard, but then it gets really easy."

Caroline Lengyel plays a fairy who dances to "Kung-Fu Fighting." Doing Karate moves with the other fairies in her group, she said the dance and song are both "cool." She and her group are just starting to learn this new routine and while she has a great time with this dance, she said her favorite dance is still "Hot Hot Hot."

But the actors on stage aren't the only ones participating in the show who have talent. All staff members helping the Deveneys have been stars in past shows and have continued helping out each summer now that they have surpassed the age limits.

Caroline Carr has been dancing since the age of five and helps Beth come up with choreography as well as teach it to the students.

"I've known Caroline since she was five and she's 18 now," said Beth. "She puts in a lot of hours."

Melissa Crawford also helps with choreography and teaching dance numbers. While she hasn't studied for as many years as Carr, Beth said she has "a lot of natural talent," and is a great motivator to the children.

Carr played the role of Ariel in one production of "The Little Mermaid," a few summers back, and coincidentally, so did staff member Katrina Reardon.

Reardon switches between teaching singing and dancing to the children. Jared Krupczak helps with the songs as well, but is more of the motivational type.

Caitlin O'Connell also helps teach the songs to the children and Beth said she has an excellent voice as does staff member Katie Kuppens.

Angela Micciche and Christina St. Pierre both help with various tasks Beth needs help with. "There's so much running around that I give them to do. They're essential staff members," she said.

Beth has written this year's play along with sister Grace, and said music is extremely important in any show where children are the stars.

"I think it's more fun for the kids to watch other kids dance," she said.

For the staff, watching the play and dances come together brings back memories of what it was like when they were in the show. No matter what happens during practice, they all know from experience that somehow, things always manage to work themselves out by show time.

"We're amazed every year," Beth said.

While the play is still a work in progress, the Children's Drama Workshop wants to let the community know that it is looking for donations of all kinds of materials to use for set construction. Materials such as cardboard, foam, fabric, paint, etc. would be highly appreciated. Your trash could be a treasure!

Local businesses, warehouses, homeowners, or artists may donate their goods by contacting Tyler from CDW at (917) 805-3161. The CDW thanks you in advance for helping make your community play a big hit!

The production will be staged Aug. 5, 6 at the Deer Hill School auditorium_

Former 'Garage kid' is still focused on achieving his goals

provide job opportunities at museums. He then began to dream of one day becoming director of a large-scale art museum, such as the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston.

"I want Malcolm Rogers' job," he said, mentioning its current director.

To make that dream come true, Bramblett will eventually enroll in graduate school, but said, "in the interim, it was part of my career plan to get experience in development."

Linda Shropshire of the Our World museum said because of his experience at Bates, along with his knowledge of Cohasset, Bramblett will be a great person to support the museum's fundraising efforts. She said in the short time he's been with the museum, he's "Jumped right to the task," and is very enthusiastic about his position.

The experience Bramblett will receive through working with the Our World museum will be invaluable, as he is one of only two employees on the payroll at this point, and holds the only full-time position. While a large amount of work is done by volunteers and the museum Board of Trustees, Bramblett said, "I'm the only man that sits in the office every day."

Because it is still in the beginning stages, Bramblett will be responsible for many different aspects of the museum's fundraising and development. He thinks this will be an advantage for him, because working for a museum that has already been established might not have provided the opportunity to become so involved. That, coupled with Our World's being located in the town where he grew up, makes this seem like a perfect fit.

"It's definitely neat to be in your own hometown," he said.

However, after living in a town all your life, Bramblett finds that people sometimes have a hard time separating the kid who started the Garage, with the adult that is involved with the museum.

"It's definitely a challenge to get people to take you seriously when you're young," he said.

Bramblett said he sometimes finds himself dressing up a little more and jokes about not shaving for a few days before a meeting so he'll look older.

He knows firsthand what it is like to live in a small town. He believes the museum will provide a much-needed service, because many children living in small communities, which can be found all over the South Shore, are often isolated from other cultures. The museum will therefore provide a place where children can come to learn not only about the differences between cultures, but their similarities as well.

By this fall, Bramblett said the major part of the museum's construction will be over. The walls and doors will be up, and the space will be exhibit ready. Once plans for the exhibits are finalized, their construction can begin.

As a way to utilize the space before permanent exhibits are built, there will be various programs put in place such as multi-cultural cooking classes, language classes for toddlers and elementary-age children, storytelling activities, as well as theater and art programs. There will also be the option of renting out the space for birthday parties.

The museum is slated to open, complete with exhibits, in September 2004.

When not working for the museum, Bramblett expresses the artist within himself by painting and drawing. He also loves going to the beach and cooking.

He is currently living in Osterville on Cape Cod with his father, but still spends much of his free time in Cohasset.

IT'S HAPPENING

Blueberry Festival

The annual Blueberry Festival will be held at the Beechwood Congregational Church, on Thursday, July 24 at 6:30 p.m.. The "all you can eat" dinner will include pasta with meat sauce, salad, bruscetti, beverages and blueberry sundaes. Following dinner, blueberry items will be auctioned off. Shop hours are Monday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; and Sunday noon to 4 p.m.

For more than five decades the proceeds from the consignment shop support the MYR of worthy programs including scholarship funds for towns of Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Cohasset. The shop is staffed by volunteers. Andi Merrill of Scituate is the shop manager.

The shop will be closed Sunday, July 27 through Sunday, Aug, 17, and Fall and winter consigning only will start Monday, Aug. 18 and Tuesday, Aug. 19 from 10 to 11:30 a.m.

Shop will be open at regular hours for consigning sales Wednesday, Aug. 20. For more information, call 781-383-0687.

Garage hours

During summer vacation, the Garage will be open the following days/times:

Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, 3 to 7 p.m.; Fridays, 4 to 10 p.m.

Every first and third Saturdays, 5 to 10 p.m.

Reaching out to seniors in town

CEA is only a phone call away

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Maintaining an independent lifestyle is something that becomes increasingly difficult the more a person ages. Someone who could once hop into the car and run to the store for a loaf of bread may find that making a trip to a convenience store is suddenly not as convenient. The Council on Elder Affairs knows how important it is for seniors to feel independent, as well as safe, and are working hard to address those needs through its outreach program.

Outreach Coordinator Carol Barrett organizes a number of programs, of which many focus on providing services to seniors living at home, allowing them to remain there for as long as possible.

CEA Director Kathy Bryanton said that through her efforts, Barrett has "lent a lot of support to people in keeping them independent."

After working as a nurse administrator at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston for 25 years, Barrett has gained much experience in both assessing a patient's needs and finding solutions to any problems they might face. She said that roughly half her patients in Boston were elderly, which has given her the experience necessary to assess problems in critical situations.

"I have a lot of knowledge. It's experiential knowledge," she said, adding that each year that goes by, she is constantly learning.

Her position with the CEA is part-time, but requires a lot of planning and problem-solving on her part. "I retired," she said with a smile, as it is obvious she is still very hard at work.

"I have around 240 clients. The majority of people I see are over 85 or have some significant medical problems," she said.

"We try to be a place where people can call and ask for help," she said, and feels the CEA should be a resource seniors feel comfortable calling on for assistance with any aspect of their lives. A big part of Barrett's job is finding solutions for the challenges seniors in town face.

"We coordinate services. When we can bring services in, we do," Barrett said, and if a need cannot be met with the resources the CEA has, she will find a way to have those needs met by someone who can.

Seniors who are able to live on their own may need a helping hand where transportation is concerned. The CEA offers a van service which will travel anywhere within a 15-mile radius.

An escort shopping program is also offered, which drives shoppers over to Shaw's to pick up groceries. Barrett, along with volunteers, works with individuals, helping those who need assistance as they pick up their items. When they return home, groceries are carried inside for them.

Barrett said individuals who are house-bound can make out a shopping list, which someone will pick up before the trip, and the shopping will be done for them. Groceries will also be put away for those individuals.

For every day the CEA is open, either Barrett or a volunteer will make a check-in call to seniors on the telephone reassurance list. The list currently has 18 names, and those who participate can look forward to hearing a friendly voice on the other line each day, making sure they have everything they need.

In addition, the CEA also participates in a program called "Are you OK?" which is affiliated with the Norfolk County Sheriff's Department. From 6 a.m. to noon, 365 days a year, an automated calling service will ring the homes of those who participate. If there is no answer the first time, the computer will notify the person on duty, and that person will make a call to the home. If there is still no answer, the emergency contact for the elderly person will be called, and if they cannot be reached, a call will be made to the Cohasset police who will make a "friendly visit" to the home to check on the elderly person.

The CEA also works closely with the fire and police departments through a program called "File for Life." Members of the departments meet with CEA employees monthly to think of ways to keep senior residents safe.

Through the "File for Life" program, Barrett compiles a folder containing personal records of the senior. Their name, emergency contact, list of medications and healthcare proxy are just some of the important pieces of information contained. The file is stuck to the front of the refrigerator where those responding to an emergency know to look for it.

Because of the file, "If there's a 911 call, everything goes," said Barrett.

The CEA also provides a series of educational workshops every October featuring topics such as retirement planning, legal matters, and other financial matters. Last year's workshop was titled, "Do I have enough money to live on and will my money last?" This

EDITORIAL

Its own worst enemy

If White House Press Secretary Ari Fleischer is looking for a new PR job he might contact the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority, which is in charge of the Greenbush project.

We can't speak with authority about why the MBTA is botching whatever positive public image it might have been able to engender with regard to Greenbush because all our calls are directed to spokesmen, who provide us with pat answers.

We haven't been able to talk to Andrew Brennan, who is the MBTA's director of environmental affairs, for years. And we're not allowed to talk to senior project coordinator Darrin McAuliffe

So we really can't explain why the MBTA continues to submit design packages to the affected towns showing standard grade crossing treatment with median barriers when the type of gate to be used for the project has yet to be determined.

But, nevertheless, the MBTA – which has apparently ignored a June 9, 2003 letter from four Greenbush towns stating there is disagreement over the gates issue that is still before the Army Corps of Engineers — continues to submit grade crossing designs using standard crossing treatment. There was also no response to a June 5 letter Cohasset selectmen sent to Transportation Secretary Daniel Grabauskas on the same issue. The Army Corps is overseeing Section 106 consultations under the federal Historic Preservation Act that have not concluded. Yet the MBTA continues to submit 60 and 90 percent design plans on grade crossings, according to Cohasset Town Manager Mark Haddad. A big MBTA design package arrived at Cohasset Town Hall earlier this month, prompting Mr. Haddad to initiate a dispute resolution process with the MBTA which Scituate, Hingham and Weymouth have now joined.

The towns signed mitigation agreements with the MBTA, including a step-by-step informal dispute resolution process that details how to go about handling unresolved issues between the MBTA and towns. If Greenbush were rolling full steam ahead, then initiating a dispute resolution might not be a big deal. But with construction on hold until the MBTA resolves outstanding permitting issues, land acquisitions, and yes, mitigation matters – any more bad press cannot be a good thing.

Here's the issue regarding gates. Greenbush is slated to be a whistle-free corridor, which means no whistles will be sounded at grade crossings except for emergencies. Therefore if standard grade crossings are used, median strips are needed to prevent an impatient motorist from trying to skirt around stopped traffic to beat an oncoming train. Quad gates, however, would not require median strips because they use four arms that stop traffic on both sides of the road.

The towns are opposed to median strips and channeling traffic delineators, which would be used on narrower roads, because they're unattractive and could have a negative effect on historic neighborhoods.

We're not sure the standard crossings with medians would be any cheaper, but if quad gates are more expensive then the extra cost would certainly be short dollars in a project that is now hovering around the $470 million mark. There is no federal prohibition to the use of quad gates.

The towns are taking the issue very seriously. In the joint letter, Mr. Haddad stated:

"I cannot stress how important this issue is to Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham and Weymouth. I would hope the MBTA will afford the towns the courtesy of a response to this filing, unlike the last two requests put forward to the Secretary of Transportation and the MBTA that went unanswered."

Since Mr. Fleischer, who is stepping down from this White House job, is probably not going to come to the Bay State for work, then the MBTA might take a page from its contractor, Cashman Construction. Its community liaison Tom Carroll walks the Greenbush streets in his work boots and hard hat and mixes with the people most affected by the project. Mr. Carroll is always available and always returns calls but unfortunately, cannot speak for the MBTA.

The MBTA should remember Greenbush is a public project and needlessly upsetting the towns by not responding to a simple request is not the way to win friends.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Reducing Rte. 3 rush-hour traffic

TO THE EDITOR:

Terry Fancher, speaking for the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, has said on a number of occasions that the Chamber's primary goal in supporting Greenbush is to reduce rush hour traffic congestion on Route 3. The same message was recently reiterated by a banner waver on the Derby Street bridge, urging drivers to support the Greenbush restoration. The Route 3 rush hour traffic reduction goal was also the main impetus behind Greenbush many years ago as part of the original Big Dig mitigation that led to the restoration of the Old Colony Line.

The irony for the Chamber is that if Greenbush is not built and the Greenbush rush hour capacity is moved to the Plymouth Line, substantially more cars will be removed from Route 3, at a tiny fraction of the cost of Greenbush. Senator Bob Hedlund recently made this same observation.

This is an alternative that makes enormous sense.

One of the Greenbush negatives has always been the small number of "new" riders it will attract. The number is small because many would-be riders are already taking other forms of mass transit on the South Shore, primarily the commuter boat. Of equal significance is the Old Colony rush hour scheduling bottleneck between Braintree and Boston. As a result, only three Greenbush rush hour trains can be run. Thus the extremely low new rider figure of 1,708 and the resulting extremely high cost per new rider of $271,000.

If the three-train capacity were moved to the Plymouth line, virtually all the riders would be new riders. And the cost per rider would be infinitesimal when compared to Greenbush, because the line is already built.

Senator Hedlund lends further credence to this alternative by pointing to the 20-year, 22 percent growth rate for the Plymouth area (compared to 3 percent for the area Greenbush would serve).

Why the MBTA planners didn't do this simple math years ago will forever remain a mystery. However, help is on the way and hope springs eternal. State transportation planners in the Romney Administration are presently reviewing Greenbush using objective criteria. One would hope they will conclude that the better long-term traffic reduction solution is the one that puts the capacity on the Plymouth Line, where the growth is. Senator Hedlund is right on target in supporting this alternative. The membership of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce would do well to follow his lead if traffic reduction is their primary goal.

Bump-outs are a terrible idea

DEAR SELECTMEN:

The "bump-outs" currently simulated in the center of the village are among the worst ideas ever proposed for our small town. Why can't we just fix the sidewalks, install new curbs and remove the asphalt buildup from the street and call it a day? If there is money left over, just extend the sidewalk into adjacent areas.

We don't need a cutesy central village area. And, when was the last time that we had a pedestrian incident in town? Let's just get on with fixing what is wrong and spend our money wisely.

Police beach support appreciated

TO THE CHIEF OF POLICE ROBERT JACKSON:

The Sandy Beach Association Board of Trustees wishes to thank the Cohasset Police Department for its continuing support at Sandy Beach. The response to calls is always prompt and the many difficult situations that occur are handled with speed and efficiency.

We thank the officers who provide this service at all times, and particularly wish to commend Prosecutor Rick Grassie and Sgt. John Conte for their dedication and professionalism in dealing with a recent incident.

We are indeed fortunate to be able to call upon "Cohasset's Finest" when needed.

Dump out the bump-out

TO THE EDITOR:

There are many problems in our town that require study and change; the pedestrian crossings along Main Street are not among them. Here we are making unnecessary alterations in the town traffic and parking patterns which have more adverse than beneficial consequences.

First, there have been no minor or serious pedestrian accidents crossing sparsely-traveled Main Street in our sleepy seaside town. Narrowing the distance we walk across the street will have no further safety impact. New York City has no "bump-outs" and far more traffic!

Second, as a busy physician with an office off Main Street, we would lose several parking spots for patients including the handicapped space at the corner of Depot Court and Main. This is unacceptable, as there is no other handicapped space for wheelchairs. The spots in the town parking area require several stairs to reach Stagecoach Way.

Third, the large trucks servicing the various stores on Main Street would have less street space for turning or parking. The bump-out at the corner of Main and Depot Court would markedly narrow the corner; the bump-out across from Cohasset Hardware would remove the one straight curb area or larger trucks to discharge their loads to stores in Town.

Fourth, there would be no real aesthetic advantage to changing the streetscape with these bump-outs. If any changes are to be made, they need to address far more important street concerns: the height of Main Street (now about 18 inches higher than years ago), burying the electric wires and replacing the curbs and/or sidewalks.

Let us not make change for change's sake, but rather consider the adverse consequences of adding bump-outs to our town. I strongly advise against making these alterations to Main Street.

Ronald H. Goldenson, MD

No bump-outs

Board of Selectmen

Please spare us the "bump-outs" now being outlined on several streets in the village.

I have been driving these streets for 70 years and both fail to see the need for these "bump-outs" and am concerned that they will actually increase the hazards there. These streets are narrow enough as they are and any such encroachments will only make dodging of other cars even more difficult.

As a matter of fact, the narrow streets and need for caution and slow driving are part of the charm of the small time. If anything is needed it is further visible warning to drive slowly. These are not thoroughfares and there is no need to speed through. Normal pedestrian caution seems to have worked to date.

Self-defense sprays

TO THE EDITOR:

The recent discovery of the remains of Molly Bish, the still unsolved murder of Christa Worthington on Cape Cod, and the countless other attacks on women all across this state should ignite an outcry against legislators who continue to defraud the public of any means of self-defense. A case in point is Chapter 180, the draconian Gun Control Act of 1998. This legislation, championed by the group Stop Handgun Violence, forces women (no matter how endangered) to go to a police station to obtain a Firearms Identification Card (FID), pay $25, and be fingerprinted and photographed — all just to be granted the right to carry mace or pepper spray! This absurd requirement creates a needless barrier that, in practice, discourages most working women from having any means to defend themselves and their children.

Representatives Tom O'Brien and Bradley Jones have filed bills (H.R. 2288 & 3380) to remove this ludicrous requirement from Massachusetts gun laws. Please contact Speaker of the House of Representatives Tom Finneran (617-722-2500) and ask him to put this life-saving legislation on the fast track for passage in the legislature. Women should be encouraged to carry non-lethal defense sprays not made helpless victims by a legislature totally oblivious to their real safety needs.

HEALTH NOTES

Summer protection — food allergies and exposure

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Food allergies affect 6 to 8 percent of school-age children. Recently, the board has received information about inadvertent contamination of food areas and misuse of medications used in relieving symptoms of anaphylactic reaction to foods.

In summer, when our kids are out of school, they live in a much more unstructured environment than when they're in school. It's important for parents to become more careful in protecting their children from the risks some of them are exposed to when out of school. If your kids are in summer programs for swimming, sailing, sports or other forms of recreation, it's your responsibility to ensure that these programs have the safeguards to protect the participants from dangers specific to your children about which the sponsoring organization should be told.

Talk to the sponsors and find out what safeguards are in place (or missing) which your child might need. Some agencies recommend that parents, together with providers of recreational and other services develop an individual health-care plan specific to their kids. Such plans would cover description of possible symptoms indicating an underlying condition such as allergic reaction to latex, or peanuts, etc. Discussion of action to be taken in case of an attack. Parents should provide consent to administer medication and share information, lists of who to call, etc. No child should be excluded from activities due to risk of exposure to allergens or other perceived dangers if the risks are controllable. If you have questions about preparing your children for a healthy summer, contact the public health nurse at Town Hall.

Lawn care follow-up

Last week, we talked about the forthcoming plan to do something about initiating environmentally sound lawn care in a demonstration on the common with the board of Health by asking Police Chief Bob Jackson to request his troops to collect business cards from the various lawn practitioners they encounter in town. Instead, Bob said he had enough familiarity with landscapers in town and produced a list without bothering his officers. On reflection, it's probably true that the police have more important things to do than going about town and getting the names and addresses of landscapers.

In fact, when I mentioned this to Officer Lisa Matos at the beach yesterday, she said "Sometimes we give them our card."(showing me a ticket form) Bob's and Lisa's response demonstrated the excellence of the public servants we have in Cohasset. As we speak, the landscapers' list is being modified and expanded by the Board of Health for use in our next effort which will be a questionnaire to determine the character of the turf management provided by those on the list.

Nevertheless, the Board of Health has a listing of landscapers working in Cohasset. It will be more complete and informative as time goes on. We are often asked for such a listing, and it is now available at the Board of Health in its current form.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Board of Health.

LIBRARY CORNER

Remember to put a bean in the bean jar for each book you read this summer! Our free Tuesday evening performances are underway thanks to the generosity of the Friends of the Library.

Photo exhibit

"Sandscapes" — A show of contemporary landscape photographs by Cynthia Vallino will be on display through Aug. 23 at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The show includes photographs of the sand "spit" area off of Third Cliff in Scituate, as well as other coastal areas on the South Shore. The show also includes images from the White Sands National Monument in Alamogordo, New Mexico, an area renowned for its expansive white sand dunes.

According to Vallino, "Many of the photographs in this show are abstract images, and quite different from typical seaside landscapes. They're really a study of the wide variation in textures, colors and patterns found in coastal areas. Sand is the perfect medium for seeing the results of dynamic changes along the coast — the landscape is constantly changing."

Vallino's photographs have been selected for numerous juried exhibitions in Southern New England, and her work has received awards and honorable mention in several shows. In 2002, she was selected as a gallery artist at the South Shore Art Center. She has also served as co-chair of the juried photography show at the North River Art Association's Festival of Arts in Marshfield Hills.

Storyteller

Storyteller and author, Elisa Pearmain, will present her, "I Wonder" tales performance on Tuesday, July 22 at 7p.m. She will share folktales that will inspire us to read, to think, and to create. Elisa tells fun world explanatory tales, and then invites the audience to make and tell them with her. A book raffle will begin at 6:55 for all children. The performance will start promptly at 7p.m.

Coloring contest

"A coloring contest will be held for all children up to 9 years of age. The coloring sheets, "Read!Think!Create! at your library, are on Mrs. Moody's desk. The contest begins July 17 and ends July 31. Prizes for all ages.

Reading program

It's not too late to register for the Summer Reading Program, "Read! Think! Create! At your library". Story Hours and Puzzle Club have begun.

CMHS reading list

Students, don't wait until the last minute to do your summer reading! The Summer Reading list for Cohasset Middle/High School is located in the Young Adult Room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The list is also on the school website, www.ssec.org, select school district — Cohasset. The Osgood and Deer Hill suggested lists are in the Children's Room on Mrs. Moody's desk. Don't forget, you can use the online catalog to check for the availabilty of the books and to place holds. Just go to www.cohassetlibrary.org.

Politically correct television, movies

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

There is a story still making the rounds after all these years that Britt Reid, radio's crime-fighting Green Hornet, had a "faithful Japanese valet, Kato" who suddenly became Reid's "faithful Filipino valet, Kato" on Dec. 8, 1941.

The story is undoubtedly apocryphal because in the 60-some years that have passed since the Japanese behaved so badly at Pearl Harbor, a lot of researchers have pored over a lot of scripts and tapes to find it, and no one has.

I can attest to the fact that it never happened, because I rode with Britt nightly in his "sleek, super-powered Black Beauty" as he prowled the streets of the city, hunting "the biggest of all game! Public enemies who try to destroy our America."

All of which is a clever way of taking us into the subject of today's discussion — how quickly yesterday's goodies can become today's poison.

If you were busy channel-surfing for the latest Shannon Tweed epic on cable at the time, you may have missed the Fox Movie Network's cancellation of its whole summer movie festival, "Charlie Chan's Mystery Tour," due to complaints by Asian-Americans.

I was a fan of Charlie Chan at the time the movies came out in the '30s, and I couldn't see anything wrong with two white actors (Warner Oland and Sidney Toler) wearing makeup that drew the corners of their eyes up and saying "Ah so!" enough times to prove them Chinese.

Charlie was a hero to most of us. He was the best detective on the Honolulu police force who outwitted the Round Eyes at every turn while he solved crimes around the world and spouted the wisdom of Confucius — or Earl Derr Biggers, the white man who authored the Chan books.

But Eddie Wong, executive director of the National Asian-American Telecommunications Association, saw it differently.

"Charlie Chan's shuffling, subservient manner, exaggerated accent, and fortune-cookie chatter did not resemble my parents, friends, or any Chinese person I knew," he wrote to Fox. "Asian-Americans feel that Charlie Chan is a demeaning portrayal that is culturally inaccurate and 'entertaining' at our expense."

Presto! Charlie was gone.

Someday, if you want to check him out on DVD and watch him behind closed curtains, you'll find Charlie in a dark corner of American entertainment along with "Amos and Andy," a show once so popular that department stores used to pipe it in so that shoppers wouldn't miss it.

When television replaced radio, they tried Amos and Andy on the tube, but the time had passed for such African-American "humor" as made by the Mystic Knights of the Sea Lodge, the Kingfish, and Lightnin', and viewers had learned to shudder at Andy's favorite phrase, "I'se regusted!"

Why do I have the feeling that if they had remade the film "Casablanca" in the 1960s, Major Strasser, the prototypical Nazi officer, would have been Comrade Ivanov of the NKVD?

And if they made it again in 2003, he would be the Ayatollah Ding Dong, that is, if General Ting Ling of North Korea didn't get there first.

ON THE BRIGHT SIDE

JEANE DALY

I glanced out the kitchen window when I heard the car pull into the driveway and laughed when I saw the two figures get out. My husband, Jack, and his buddy Larry, decked out from head-to-toe in golfing duds, were talking a mile a minute as they came into the kitchen.

"Good game?" I asked.

"Great game," they responded in unison.

After lunch, I knew enough to exit the room el pronto, or I'd never escape the never-ending discussion on stance, swings, knee, arm, and head positions.

Working outside in my garden, I could still hear their voices bantering back and forth from inside. Gradually Larry's voice grew louder and louder, then I heard him cry out, "God, she's beautiful; trim and as light as a feather. I wouldn't go anywhere without her now."

I heard my dear husband say he could hardly wait to get a peek at BB.

Now this conversation had my full attention. Who was BB?

Larry rambled on and on about her virtues; my heart sank. Was he cheating on his saintly wife? Did my husband really want to meet this home-wrecker?

I couldn't believe my ears when he said he was bringing her to the public golf course the next day to meet the guys.

"Great! All the guys have heard of her and I must say she has quite a reputation. A real hot number, I've been told," my almost ex-husband said.

The following day after golf, I asked Jack about this infamous BB.

"Larry's right. She's beautiful, she has it all. Who wouldn't want her?" he answered arduously.

"Are you crazy?" I asked dangerously.

Looking slightly puzzled by my tone of voice, he asked if I wanted to see her?

"She's out in the car," he said grinning.

"What is that tramp doing in our family car? Have both you and Larry gone wacko?"

Dumbstruck, I waited in the kitchen while he went to fetch the tainted damsel.

Racing back into the kitchen he thrust a golf club at me and said, "Meet BB. This is her, Big Bertha. Better known to the guys as BB."

I couldn't help but notice as he spoke his hands ran gently up and down her shaft, he was visibly trembling with joy. Endlessly, he went on about her magnificent characteristics. After two long minutes had passed, I left the room unnoticed, as he talked on and on, oblivious to the fact that I had gone.

His birthday was in a few weeks and BB would make the perfect gift. But, I would make it very clear to them, she could only have him on weekdays, he was all mine on the weekends.

POLITICAL NOTES

House passes municipal aid package

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D-Hingham, announced passage of a compromise relief initiative for municipalities struggling to balance their budgets in the face of the Commonwealth's economic crisis.

The municipal relief legislation allows cities and towns to raise revenue through adjusted fees and fines, offers relief from restrictive state regulations and mandates, and provides the necessary tools to preserve essential local services.

The Commonwealth provides municipalities with approximately $4.49 billion in assistance each year with local school aid, additional assistance, lottery revenues and school building assistance.

Among the benefits of the Conference Committee package:

- Municipalities can transfer a percentage of funds between most city departments during the last two months of the budget year.
- Allow for local treasurers to modernize search procedures for abandoned property owners. Provide cities and towns with options for reducing their unfunded pension liability payments in FY04 and FY05.
- The legislation also offers an early retirement incentive program for employees as a tool for reducing payroll costs to cities, towns, counties, authorities and other districts in the Commonwealth.

"This legislation will provide some much needed relief to our communities in this difficult fiscal crisis" stated Bradley

Additionally, the legislation would reform the arcane Emergency Finance Board by eliminating the Board but allowing the Attorney General, State Treasurer, State Auditor and the director of accounts at the Division of Local Services to carry out many of its duties.

Bike Safety Day

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Recreation Commission and the youngsters and staff of the Summer Playground Program, I would like to express our appreciation for the Cohasset Police Department and the Cohasset Police Association for their very generous donation of time and effort and for their interest in our community.

On Friday, July 11, the Cohasset Police Department and the Cohasset Police Association organized and ran their annual Police Safety Day for the youngsters in the Playground Program. The Cohasset Police Department and Association extended themselves to our community by providing a cook-out for the youngsters attending the Playground Program and staff as well. The children and staff alike were enthralled by the many items of bona-fide police equipment that was available for them to experience.

The commissioners and staff of the Recreation Department and the youngsters involved in the Playground Program truly appreciate their continued interest in and concern for our community and its residents. I believe that I am able to speak on behalf of the residents with children in the Playground Program, thanking the Cohasset Police Department and the Cohasset Police Association.

John M. Worley, Director Recreation Commission

Bump-outs opposed

Selectmen:

I am writing to tell you that I vehemently oppose the "bump-outs" that are proposed for downtown Cohasset.

They look like a real impediment to vehicular traffic and I can't see a safety issue that they might resolve.

I have been walking around Cohasset for more than 35 years and I have never experienced a problem with the downtown area.

Since the crosswalks have been in place, it is safer than ever. To say people need those "bump-outs" to see around the monstrous SUV's is a pretty sad reason for spoiling the Town. Let people obey the speed limit and the problem, if there is one, disappears.

Downtown Cohasset has a charm all its own. Please stop tampering with it.

Exposure to political gumbo has varying effects

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

An analysis and recap of the week in state government.

Combine a scandal, conceits of skullduggery, announcement of a surplus, reversal of decision making on the most important policy disputes of the day, advancement of a bold new bid to help the economy, suggestions that the Red Cross should have to compete for your blood, and gubernatorial heroics out of "BayWatch," but with fresh water.

Oh, and a former Democratic gubernatorial candidate announcing her new career as a TV reporter.

The result: a potent concoction — political gumbo, call it — with widely varying effects on those exposed to it. The mix of events could leave a person confused, amused, enraged, anxious, excited, bored and fatigued — and all in one day, too. Some were left babbling incoherently from exposure to the combination. Of course, some in the press would suggest the Legislature would do that anyway — and some in the Legislature would suggest that's what the press does all the time.

For those inclined, or paid, to dwell on the details, it was an engrossing week. No, that's a different legislative procedure. How about if we say, the overriding topic was reversing vetoes. Over 30 of the governor's vetoes had been undone by mid-day Thursday (July 10), with more to come, and House Speaker Thomas Finneran said the override process could stretch on into the fall.

The overrides put back about $40 million in spending, and the number was climbing. The administration says every dollar added to the bottom line with an override is a dollar the budget is out of balance. The overrides are significant — restoring the Legislature's preferences on matters from full-day kindergarten grants to fees on sex offenders and the composition of the courts. And the administration signaled its objections to the Democrats' priority setting when Lt. Gov. Healey asked why $400,000 was directed to taxpayer-funded golf courses instead of rape crisis centers closed by the budget crisis.

Actually, there are those who were saying the most important topic on the minds of the powers that be — certainly in the House, though the Senate's acquiescence was needed — was reversal of a veto of a bill allowing the Speaker and Senate President to give pay raises to their leadership teams without going through the regular legislative process.

The mix of events could leave a person confused, amused, enraged, anxious, excited, bored and fatigued — and all in one day, too.

Why the Speaker was so bent on forcing through something that made the Legislature look so bad was anyone's guess, but in the end the consensus came down to something like: he wanted to be good to his people, felt it was the right thing to do, and saw a chance to increase his command over the loyalty of the members he leads by gaining more direct control over their salaries. Not to mention proving himself more powerful than the governor, and the Legislature more powerful than the executive. In the end, really, Finneran knew he didn't have much to lose — the people driven crazy by his behavior in such affairs were driven a bit crazier, but how much does that really matter? Experience has shown: not a lot.

Meanwhile, the Romneys wanted no unnecessary attention paid to their jet-ski feat — well, okay, maybe a little unnecessary attention. After a morning the Beacon Hill commentariat spent speculating how the Lake Winnipesaukee rescue came to enjoy screaming headlines in the Herald and no coverage whatsoever in the Globe, the governor's people called to say he'd been persuaded to overcome his extreme reluctance to make any hay out of the incident. He really didn't want to talk about it, but if anyone wanted to ask how he and his very good looking family rescued those people, shucks, he'd take a few questions. No one could blame him for enjoying the moment.

The State House was a kind of Six Flags for the politically minded

• Municipal relief — Mixed in, but distinct from, the budget vetoes was passage of a measure allowing cities and towns to raise revenues through a variety of new local option fees. The bill came out of a conference committee about the same time headlines started hitting local papers about fire stations closing and other municipal difficulties.

• O'Brien will become consumer troubleshooter for 56 — Consumer issues such as the finance workshops she ran were probably the personable but smart former treasurer's strong suit in office, and she'll try to project that combination as she begins her new professional life as a special assignment reporter for Channel 56.

• State actually ran surplus – sort of — The fiscal year just ended on June 30 has closed out with a $133 million surplus, Gov. Mitt Romney's budget chief announced. But in a warning to the Legislature, he said that is only enough to run state government for 50 hours, and new spending on programs should not be undertaken. The state budget for the new fiscal year, begun July 1, Eric Kriss said, is barely in balance, provided lawmakers do not override any of Romney's $201 million in vetoes. The next fiscal year, fiscal 2005, which begins July 1, 2004, is expected to start with a $1 billion gap, assuming a "robust" economic recovery, he said.

• Reilly will team with Lt. Gov. on crime commission — A commission of top state officials sets out on an ambitious mission to overhaul the state's criminal justice laws and modernize its crime fighting policies. The panel – announced by Lt. Gov Kerry Healey – gained a sense of fresh urgency in the wake of rising violence in Boston and other cities.

• State shuts down mass-lottery.org — Emails and cellphone text messages promised recipients they had won $30,000 from the Massachusetts lottery: just visit a certain Web site, www.masslottery.org, and enter personal credit information to claim the prize. Problem was, the claim was a fraud and when the real state Lottery caught wind of the scam, they shut the website down.

• IG calls for suspension of dep officials in emissions flap — Inspector General Gregory Sullivan called it a "dark secret." Two officials at the Department of Environmental Protection hid problems with the state's vehicle emissions testing program for two years, allowing tens of thousands of cars to spew illegal toxins into the air. Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey asked the agency's new commissioner, Robert Golledge, Jr., to investigate the allegation before deciding whether to fire the officials.

• Top five veto overrides — Your list may differ, but here's five that attracted attention – and passed both branches:

1. Additional assistance to Cities and Towns
2. Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission
3. Early Retirement Incentive Program
4. Full Day Kindergarten and Early Intervention Grants
5. GIC Premiums

Beacon Hill Roll Call

By Bob Katzen
beaconhill@aol.com
July 7-11, 2003

QUESTIONS

Senator Robert L. Hedlund

Representative Garrett J. Bradley

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for over 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.
THE HOUSE AND SENATE: BHRC records local representatives' votes on eight roll calls and local senators' votes on seven roll calls from the week of July 7-11. Most of the roll call votes are on legislative action surrounding Gov. Romney's overrides of items in the $22.1 billion fiscal 2004 state budget.

	Hedlund	Bradley
CONFERENCE COMMITTEE MUNICIPAL RELIEF PACKAGE (H 3944) House 151-3, Senate 31-4, approved the conference committee version of a municipal relief package giving local cities and towns more management flexibility, fiscal choices and revenue raising options in order to compensate for this year's cuts in local aid. Provisions include an increase in the maximum fine for parking violations, failure to stop and blocking intersections, increased fees for towing, gun registration, fire department permits and auto leasing; permitting school districts to charge students in kindergarten through sixth grade for bus transportation to school; allowing communities to offer early retirement incentive programs for local workers and to reduce the next two fiscal years' unfunded pension liability payment by an amount equal to their loss in local aid; authorizing cities and towns to work with the Registry of Motor Vehicles to design and sell distinctive vehicle license plates and keep the profits and allowing communities to bid for state contracts for maintenance of public ways including snow and ice removal. Supporters said the package is a fiscally responsible one that does not raise taxes but gives local communities the tools to increase revenues and make up for the recent cuts in local aid. Opponents said the package does not offer sufficient relief to make up for deep local aid cuts, raises too many fees and does not offer the type of reforms necessary to make a real difference. Both branches later gave final approval to the measure and sent it to Gov. Romney. (A "Yea" vote is for the package. A "Nay" vote is against it).	Y	Y
$10 MILLION FOR KINDERGARTEN GRANTS (H 4004) House 141-12, Senate 36-3, overrode Gov. Romney's $10 million veto reduction (from $23 million to $13 million) for kindergarten development grants to continue improving existing full-day kindergartens and encourage the transition of half-day kindergartens to full-day ones. Override supporters said the grants are important to ensure quality kindergartens for thousands of children and to help meet the goal of making all kindergartens full-day ones. They said these children should not suffer because of the state's fiscal crisis. Override opponents said the cut is necessary to keep the budget balanced and noted that this grant program was designed to be an incentive for communities to move toward full-day kindergartens but was never intended to be funded indefinitely as a permanent subsidy program. Some noted the grants often go to large communities at the expense of smaller ones that cannot afford costly grant writers to apply for the funds. (A "Yea" vote is for the $10 million. A "Nay" vote is against the $10 million).	N	Y
STATE EMPLOYEES' HEALTH INSURANCE PREMIUMS (H 4004) House 130-23, Senate 32-6, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of language that sunsets a new law requiring state employees earning over $35,000 per year to pay 20 percent instead of the current 15 percent of their health insurance premiums. The sunset language provides that after June 30, 2005, these employees go back to only paying 15 percent. Romney's veto would require them to permanently pay 20 percent. Override supporters said the sunset provision is fair because it would save money over the next two years but then allow the legislature to revisit the issue for these hardworking state employees. Override opponents said it is not unreasonable for state workers earning over $35,000 to permanently pay 20 percent and noted many cities and towns and private employers do not pay the generous 85 percent that the state pays. (A "Yea" vote is for the sunset provision requiring these employees to pay 20 percent only until June 2005. A "Nay" vote is against the sunset provision and favors requiring these employees to permanently pay 20 percent).	N	Y
$75 SEX OFFENDER REGISTRY FEE (H 4004) House 134-22, Senate 32-7 overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a section imposing an annual $75 fee on every sex offender for as long as he is required to register with the state's sex offender registry. The fee would be waived for any offender if it is determined the payment would constitute an undue hardship on him or his family. Override supporters said the fee will help pay for the operation of the sex offender registry that informs the public of the whereabouts of these predators and helps to protect society. They said it is unfair for the legislature to raise fees on law-abiding citizens for all kinds of things and not impose a fee on these dangerous criminals. Override opponents said the fee is well intentioned but may have the unintended consequence of being a disincentive for these offenders to register. They said it is more important to encourage these offenders to register so that the public knows where they live and work. (A "Yea" vote is for the $75 fee. A "Nay" vote is against the $75 fee).	N	Y
PONKAPOAG GOLF COURSE (H 4004) House 114-42, Senate 33-6, overrode Gov. Romney's $250,000 veto reduction (from $1.1 million to $850,000) in funding for the operation of the state-owned Ponkapoag golf course in Canton. Override supporters said this course is funded by the people who pay fees to play golf and argued the reduction may result in inadequate upkeep of the course. They noted the state is studying whether to get out of the golf course business but said the courses must be maintained until a decision is made. Override opponents said it is outrageous that the state is in the golf course business when important human service programs and local aid are being cut. They argued that there is state money, not just player fees, spent on maintaining these courses and noted the state could make money by leasing operation of this golf course to a private manager. (A "Yea" vote is for the $250,000. A "Nay" vote is against the $250,000)	N	N
$23 MILLION LOCAL AID (H 4004) House 140-15, Senate 36-3, overrode Gov. Romney's $23 million veto reduction (from $379.7 million to $356.7 million) in funding for the local aid category "additional assistance." Override supporters said these funds are desperately needed by cities and towns that have already had their local aid reduced and argued the $23 million would help prevent cutbacks and layoffs of teachers, police officers and firefighters. They noted the $23 million restoration is feasible because the legislature overrode the governor's veto of a section reducing the amount the state reimburses pharmacies that fill Medicaid prescriptions for the state. Override opponents said that "additional assistance" is a unfair, special category of local aid that uses an archaic system under which some communities receive millions of dollars and others receive zero dollars. They argued the entire system should be revised and the money should be distributed equitably. (A "Yea" vote is for the $23 million. A "Nay" vote is against it).	Y	Y
MARRIAGE CERTIFICATES (H 4004) House 122-33, Senate 29-5, overrode Governor Romney's veto of a section raising from $4 to $50 the amount cities and towns are required to charge for a marriage license and mandating that $46 of the $50 be turned over to the state. The section does not change the part of current state law that allows any city or town to ignore the law and set its own fee for a marriage license. Override supporters said most communities charge only between $4 and $15 and that none of that revenue goes to the state. They said the hike to $50 is reasonable and would generate much needed revenue for the state. Override opponents said the section is ambiguous, contains technical errors and would only raise revenue for the state if a community did not set its own fee and followed the state mandate to charge $50 and give $46 to the state. They noted that changing the state-mandated fee is meaningless if communities can still set their own fee at higher or lower than $50 and retain all the revenue. (A "Yea" vote is for the section raising the fee to $50 unless a city or town sets its own fee. A "Nay" vote is against the section).	N	Y
$10 FEE TO APPEAL SPEEDING AND TRAFFIC VIOLATIONS (H 4004) House 11-144, sustained Gov. Romney's veto of a section imposing a $10 fee on anyone who challenges a non-criminal traffic violation in court. Override supporters said this $10 fee is reasonable and is not much different than existing court filing fees for many types of cases. They argued that the fee would generate much needed revenue for the state. Override opponents said that people should not have to pay for an initial hearing on a speeding or traffic ticket. They said this fee goes too far and noted that it is adequate to impose a fine on anyone found guilty of the violation. There was no vote on this veto in the Senate because the House sustained the veto and a successful override is required in both branches in order to override the governor's veto. (A "Yea" vote is for the $10 fee. A "Nay" vote is against it).		N

the Army Corps of Engineers as part of Section 106 consultations under the national Historic Preservation Act.

The issue potentially puts the MBTA in violation of its mitigation agreements with the towns because the Army Corps has not rendered its decision regarding the type of gate. The Army Corps has asked the MBTA to arrange a meeting with the Federal Railroad Administration, MBTA safety experts and town officials, along with Corps staff, to review the gates' issue.

The towns say receiving design packages at this stage puts them at a disadvantage because they are forced to submit comments on designs that may not go forward. Cohasset Town Manager Mark Haddad explained if the towns decide not to submit comments and median barriers are used, the towns would have had no input on the final design of the most important aspect of the project, grade crossings.

Hingham Town Administrator Charles Cristello said the towns don't want to review submittals while the whole question of quadrant gates is up in the air.

"I cannot stress how important this issue is to Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham and Weymouth."
— Town Manager Mark Haddad

"We want the design submittals held back until that issue is resolved," he said.

In a letter released Tuesday by Cohasset selectmen, the four towns have joined together to start the informal dispute resolution process as spelled out in their mitigation agreements with the MBTA.

"I cannot stress how important this issue is to Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham and Weymouth," Haddad wrote in the joint letter this week. "I would hope the MBTA will afford the towns the courtesy of a response to this filing, unlike the past two requests put forward to the Secretary of Transportation and MBTA that went unanswered."

MBTA spokesman Joe Pesaturo said nothing has changed since February when the general manager of the MBTA put the Greenbush project on hold pending resolution of outstanding permitting, land acquisition and mitigation issues.

"The project is on hold to give MBTA staff enough time to accomplish those three things," Pesaturo said.

In the first stage of a dispute resolution, the MBTA and the towns' authorized representatives agree to confer in good faith to resolve the dispute (in this case, quad gates) to their mutual satisfaction. If the matter cannot be resolved, the dispute could reach the second stage involving a meeting with the general manager of the MBTA, a senior official of the state Executive Office of Transportation and selectmen. If not satisfactorily resolved at that level, either party may seek legal remedies for breach of the mitigation agreement.

While construction of the 17.7-mile Greenbush line is on hold, Gov. Mitt Romney has said he would also use this time to review the cost of the estimated $464 million project.

Norwell resident Ralph Rivkind, chairman of Greenbush on Track, hands out a "Greenbush YES!" bumper sticker to Ken Gomer of Weymouth at the South Shore Chamber of Commerce's annual summer outing.

Greenbush backers have new website

Overwhelmed by the number of people who have joined the pro-train advocacy group Greenbush on Track (GOT) since it was created two months ago, GOT's chairman unveiled a new web site to keep all members updated on the future of the commuter rail line.

GreenbushOnTrack.com features information about the plan to restore the 17.7-mile rail line along the South Shore. It explains the environmental, economic and social benefits Greenbush would bring to the region — which is the only part of Eastern or Central Massachusetts not connected to Boston by commuter rail. And the site highlights the widespread editorial support for the commuter rail project, as well as a video clip of Gov. Mitt Romney speaking about Greenbush.

"We have received so many responses that the best way to communicate with all of GOT's members is through this web site," GOT chairman Ralph Rivkind said. "Sending hundreds of emails and making hundreds of phone calls just got to be too unwieldy. Now we can keep all Greenbush supporters in the loop easily. And we hope other pro-train people join GOT, which they can do by visiting www.Greenbushontrack.com."

Citing a recent poll that revealed citizens favored restoring Greenbush service by more than three to one, Rivkind said he is confident that GOT's membership will continue to swell.

"We knew people wanted Greenbush restored, but we were blown away by how many people have volunteered their time and energy to making sure it happens," Rivkind said.

Town leaves mark on Kentucky town

Sweeney said about Cohasset. "It is one of the most beautiful places we've seen and we loved coming up."

The old Liberty City Hall, which was built in the 1940s or earlier, had become decrepit; the city council allocated funds to build a new one and was looking at different architectural styles, Sweeney explained.

"I'm a traditionalist, I like the old style," he said.

But it was actually his daughter's suggestion that the Pratt building be used as a model. So she took pictures and emailed them to Sweeney who showed photographs of the classic Greek Revival building to the Liberty City Council.

"It is one of the most beautiful places we've seen and we loved coming up."
— Steven Sweeney, mayor of Liberty, Ky.

"They liked it a lot," Sweeney recalled, explaining the interior is laid out dramatically different than the Pratt building to facilitate a town hall use.

The Liberty City Hall, is red brick, not yellow, like the Pratt building and the cupola is not as "opulent," but otherwise the exterior looks very similar, he said.

The town hall was built for about $250,000, far less than estimates of $400,000 and up because the town did its own construction management, Sweeney said. [He noted a house in Liberty that brings $175,000-$200,000 would sell for $600,000-$700,000 in Cohasset].

"We've been in it about three months now," he says about the new town hall. "But we're waiting for the finishing touch – the David Hassan sign." (The sign, which Hassan shipped last week, went up Tuesday).

Although it is not unusual for a Hassan sign to be ordered for a building outside Cohasset [Hassan signs are in places as far away as Sweden and Wales], Hassan said he was intrigued when "a gentleman with a strong southern accent" — who turned out to be Mayor Sweeney — stopped in the shop to inquire about a sign for a town hall in Kentucky

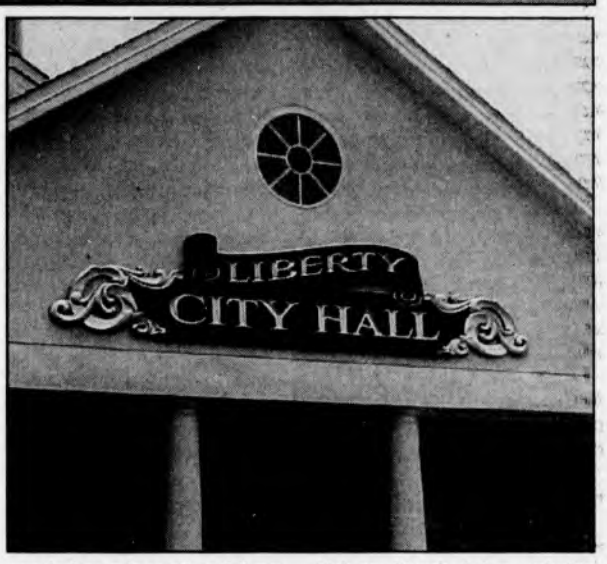
At right: David Hassan's sign provided the finishing touch to the new Liberty City Hall.



"I gave him a pencil sketch and didn't really expect to hear from him again," Hassan said. But a couple of weeks went by and Sweeney called to say he was ready to order the sign, he recalled, and the two exchanged a series of emails.

Knowing how town government can work, Hassan said he was surprised to get the order. "It didn't take a committee of 20 to decide," he said with a laugh. The 15 ft. by 3 ft. sign is carved out of mahogany and the letters are in 14 carat gold leaf.

"I'd seen a lot of David's signs in Cohasset and he was the one and only guy I went to see to put a sign together for us," Sweeney said.

Sweeney's daughter and son-in-law, Laura (Sweeney) and Robert Johnson lived on Forest Avenue and Beach Street during their four years in town. The couple has relocated to Liberty with their child, who is the Sweeneys' first grandchild.

"We harassed her to come back," said Sweeney, who is in his fifth year as mayor of Liberty.

Liberty, which has a population of 1,850 and was founded in 1806, has another tie to the Cohasset-North Scituate area. Abraham Lincoln's ancestors came from North Scituate. The 16th president's father settled in Casey County where Liberty is located before moving to Larue County where Abe was born in a log cabin.

"I was shocked when I drove through Hingham and saw a statue of Abraham Lincoln," Sweeney said. "So I did some research and found out Lincoln's family was from up in those parts."

year's workshop will be on Social Security taxes and will be held every Wednesday for four weeks, beginning the second week in October. There will also be a light supper offered for those who attend.

But with all the helpful services the CEA provides, some are strictly social. "Celebrations," Barrett said, are held for holidays, such as Christmas, Thanksgiving, Valentine's Day, St. Patrick's Day, Memorial Day, as well as at the end of the summer barbecue.

For any event the CEA holds, transportation will be provided for those who cannot come on their own.

One of the main concerns Barrett has is continuing funding for various programs the CEA offers. Some of its transportation programs to Boston have already been cut and she worries that with the way the economy is now, and the war on terrorism still in progress, more money will be continually needed to be spent on security. That money may have to come from funds previously set aside for senior programs, and she feels it is very unfortunate that the seniors who have spent their whole lives in their communities are the ones who may suffer from cuts in funding.

How to reach the CEA

signed by more than 300 Cohasset residents from Saturday afternoon to around 3 p.m. Tuesday. Copies of the petitions were stationed at various downtown shops including Cohasset Hardware, French Memories, and Tedeschi's.

Before Tuesday night's meeting, Jim Watson, owner of Cohasset Hardware said, "They're going to have to listen to 300 signatures in two days."

Haddad began the bump-outs conversation with, "I will say that as of today, I have received two very positive comments."

Dormitzer was in attendance at the meeting, stating that he had complied the petition to "elicit the opinion of the people," and that there had been no advertising or any prompting to sign, just the availability of petitions around the village.

"People don't want this particular revitalization," he said, noting that many people he has spoken with have said they don't see the bump-outs as keeping in character with the historical feel of the village.

Dormitzer also said he thought there could be a simpler, more cost-effective way to provide change to the village, and said, "something just doesn't feel right," about the current plans.

Board member Michael Sullivan said once the project is done, "it won't be that much different," noting that the plans will set a better traffic flow pattern and allow more space for pedestrians to congregate.

Dormitzer did not agree. "I really do have a feeling that it's wrong," and likened the plans to providing the feel of an urban wasteland, he said.

Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris brought up the notion of perception and said people may see the bump-outs as being one thing, when really she feels they will help aid in the safety of pedestrians. She sees the bump-outs as being able to slow traffic and give the town back the feeling of being a small town, which has been lost over the years. With people driving fast through town to pick up something quick on their way to somewhere else, she sees the changes as slowing people down and making it a more inviting place.

Dormitzer said he "finds the town very polite," and has a very different view of what the bump-outs would bring. He did, however, acknowledge that "it wouldn't be bad to be able to see around the SUVs."

Sullivan came back to the point of making the village more accessible to pedestrians and said, "I see it as more room for pedestrians, what's wrong with that?"

Board member Tom Callahan said, "People argue, why do anything, the sky's not falling." To which Dormitzer replied, "This town is inherently safe."

"The concern should be public opinion!" said Watson from the back of the room, who was reminded by McMorris to not turn the meeting into a shouting match.

Roger Hill of Highland Avenue joined in and said, "I think it's too bad that all of a sudden we get a million and a half dollars and we're dying to spend it."

He also said if it was necessary, he would get people to sign a petition to have a special town meeting so the decision could be a collective one rather than just made by the five selectmen.

"I've been to every Waterfield meeting and not one thing the residents or merchants have said has been put on their plans," Hill said.

From there conversation turned to the proposed bump-out at Depot Court and the ability of the fire engines to make the left-hand turn. Haddad said he was out with the fire chief watching traffic patterns as well as the engine making the turn, and both were fine. The department used its largest ladder truck and were successful. With the island now removed, the road is actually larger than it was before without the bump-outs.

Members of the board stated that the Waterfield Group cannot make plans that constrict traffic, and the bump-outs will not.

The question of what is historical was raised to which board members said there is nothing historical about a gas station or a convenience store.

Callahan said if people want historical, maybe the town should go back to having dirt roads. He also brought up the common and said "if they want history, we'll put cows there."

Board member Fred Koed made the point that with the bump-outs, there will be no "breakdown lane" at the top of Depot Court, which could pose a problem for a fire truck trying to make it around the corner if a car can't move. He also said, "The Witches of Eastwick would never have been filmed here with the bump-outs," which some members disagreed with.

Watson said, "You people do not get it."

Karen Quigley of the Cohasset Environmental Support Group said she has seen many kids riding bikes on the sidewalks that pose more of a problem for pedestrians than cars. She also said it is important for selectmen to listen to the residents.

"Whatever the reason the townspeople are opposed, they are opposed and we are the town," she said.

Koed said if this project were proposed for an area such as Stop & Shop, people probably wouldn't care as much, but they do because we're dealing with a historical center.

"When you're dealing with history, people don't like change," he said.

"I think the term bump-out is causing the problem," said Sullivan.

Conversation continued and came back to McMorris who explained that the whole purpose for the plans is to provide pedestrian safety and calm traffic.

Watson proposed that the board, "be more understanding of public opinion and bring this to a vote of some sort."

Sullivan stated that "there's a total divide," to which member Merle Brown said, "we're not going out to bid until January," and suggested they make the discussion an article on the warrant at town meeting to give people the chance to vote.

Haddad said the delineators will be left up for another week or two and that no final decision will be made before this fall. Discussion will be ongoing with selectmen, and could be continued at town meeting.

OBITUARIES

Loraine Stevens

A memorial service for Loraine Stevens will be held at the Vedanta Center, 130 Beechwood St. on Friday, July 18 at 10 a.m. Ms. Stevens died May 31, 2003 at Boston Medical Center due to complications following surgery. She was 89.

A native of Washington, D.C., she had been a puppeteer in Chicago. During World War II, she served as a WAC (Women's Army Corps) of the U.S. Army. In New York, she was involved in civil defense for the army. She was a five-year resident of the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home.

After the war, she served as a secretary to a number of notable personalities, including authors Paul Brunton and John Steinbeck as well as actress Gloria Swanson.

A longtime member of the Vedanta Center in Massachusetts and Ananda Ashrama in La Cresenta, Calif., she served Rev. Mother Gayatri Devi who passed away in 1995. Ms. Stevens often traveled to India.

An avid animal lover, she raised many cats and dogs. She also loved to sing and had a beautiful singing voice.

She leaves her nieces, Carol-Leigh Duce and Nancy DiMaio; her nephew, Haskell Frei; and many grand and great-grandnieces/nephews. She also leaves her best friend, Ella May Damiani.

Funeral arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Cohasset.

Joseph M. McMath

Joseph M. McMath, Jr. 81, of Scituate, owner of Cohasset Limousine & Taxi Service from 1980 to 2000, died July 11, 2003, at Life Care Center of the South Shore in Scituate after a long illness.

Mr. McMath also was a bartender 35 years for Arthur Roebuck Catering.

He was a Navy veteran and served in the Navy reserves.

Mr. McMath was born, raised and educated in Somerville.

He leaves his wife, Aurora (Cordo) McMath; five daughters, Theresa Colby, Elizabeth Steverman and Kathleen Field, all of Scituate, Linda Daley of Norwell and Donna Bagni of Pembroke; two sons, Michael McMath of Connecticut and Dennis McMath of Marshfield; a sister, Phyllis Curran of East Boston, 13 grandchildren and a great-grandson.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Mary of the Nativity Church, Scituate.

Interment was in the Massachusetts National Cemetery in Bourne.

Arrangements were handled by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Donations may be made to St. Mary of the Nativity Church, 1 Kent St., Scituate Harbor 02066.

Alberta Whitcomb

Alberta (Gillette) Whitcomb, 78, died Saturday in Alexandria, Va. of pneumonia and a heart ailment.

Born in Duluth, Minn., she was the daughter of Albert C. and Annie W. Gillette. She was educated in Minnesota and Florida schools and graduated from the Madeira School. She then attended the Parsons School of Design in New York.

She married the late Robert B. Whitcomb in 1943, and following the war, they moved to Cohasset where she was a well-known painter who displayed her work in numerous shows and was a member of many civic and social organizations. From 1969 to her husband's death in 1975, the couple lived in a wooded retreat on a pond in Norwell.

In 1975, Mrs. Whitcomb moved to Georgetown and in 1998, to Virginia.

She leaves her three daughters, Margaret Bandery of Annandale, Va., Anne Jacob of Manchester, N.H. and Jane B. Whitcomb of Freehold, Va.; her two sons, Robert B. Whitcomb of Providence and David M. Whitcomb of Saugatuck, Mich.; her six grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Interment was private.

Funeral arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Cohasset.

Catherine M. Turner

Catherine M. (Cheever) Turner, 83, of Cohasset, died July 2, 2003, at South Shore Hospital after a long illness.

Born in Boston, she was the daughter of the late John and Mary (Buckley) Cheever. She attended Dorchester High School and Boston Business School.

Mrs. Turner was employed for more than 30 years as an office manager at Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant in Cohasset. Prior to Hugo's, she worked at Harvard University. She retired in 1983.

After retirement Mrs. Turner and her husband enjoyed traveling to Europe, Hawaii, Africa, and Jamaica.

Wife of the late Arthur L. Turner for 46 years, she leaves two daughters, Cathy and her husband, James, Pryles of Hanover and Elizabeth and her husband, Stephen, Venti of Hanover; two grandsons Michael David and Kevin James Pryles of Hanover.

A funeral Mass was held at St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset. Interment was private.

The arrangements were handled by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Donations may be made to Etrusco Associates Inc., 1 Common St., Scituate or Animal Rescue League of Boston, 599 Washington St. Pembroke, 02359.

A spring to remember

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

Spring, for the outgoing seniors, is the time to shine. It's the last hurrah on the field, the ultimate opportunity to boldly lead a team through a season of challenges, captain a tourney-bound, or be the emotional guide of a young and re-building team.

The 2003 CHS graduate athletes had a Senior Spring for the books, with shining success in virtually all sports.

The clearest example came, of course, from the State championship tennis team, which compiled a stunning 24-0 season, in which only one match came within a hair of anyone questioning the team's invincibility. Led by starter captains Lindsay Grossman and Julie Shea, the team was so utterly deep and dominant that their state finals win over Tantasqua was decided in 45 minutes, about a half-hour shorter than a typical opening round blowout.

The boys lacrosse team charged deep into the playoffs for the third straight year, riding the back of a core of eight tremendously dedicated and talented seniors. Whether it was the scoring of Curt Kahn, the non-stop energy of Robert Hickey, or the stop-all defense of Nick Spirito, the seniors led the way to a school record 16 lacrosse wins in a row, finishing the season with 20. Although the season was cut short in the semi-finals of the South Sectional, this senior class was largely responsible for the legacy of excellence that will continue during next year's re-tooling season.

The girls lax program, still in the process of an ascent to prominence, had another winning year behind their graduating seniors. Maura McKenney finished off a remarkable career with well over 100 goals, the benchmark akin to 1,000 points in high school basketball, while senior Gia Petrakis finished her fourth year as the Lady Laxers goalkeeper, tallying well over 500 saves during her tenure. In talking about recent successes of the team at any given point in the season, coach Torin Sweeney always made mention of the positive influences his seniors had over the team, both on and off the field.

The track program continued to hold their mantra of "quality over quantity," again with seniors leading to another excellent season, as far as individuals. The boys team failed in their bid to three-peat as SSL champs, but

Injury adds to insult

Things go from bad to worse in final week for Post 118 squad

By Mike Spellman
SPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Talk about adding insult to injury.

In a week that has featured matters going from bad to worse to nightmarish for the Cohasset Post 118 Legion team, the way Monday night's lopsided loss to Stoughton ended seemed almost apropos.

Fired up by the thought on bringing pinch runner Brendan Stella home from third base with his first run of the season, one of the Post 118 standouts momentarily lost his head when he got under a pitch and popped it up for the final out of the game, hurling the bat away in disgust as he trotted helplessly down the first baseline...and right off the ankle of team head coach Scott Arnold, resulting in a cracked bone and multiple contusions.

"Yeah, I spent the better part of the night in the hospital," said Arnold on Tuesday, a

Major League champs give 'A's' plus effort

The Major League A's are the CYBSA Baseball Champions.

Capping off a terrific 13-4-1 regular season, the A's Progressed through the playoffs beating the Rangers in the first round, winning two of three against the very competitive Dodgers and meeting the Red Sox in the Finals, best of three championship series.

Rained out on Sunday June 22, the A's and the Red Sox squared up on Monday the 23rd. The A's, not having beaten the Red Sox in the regular season came to win. A strong start allowed the A's to come away victorious in the first game, easily Winning 5 to 1.

Game two was Tuesday. Again, prepared with an all or nothing mindset, the A's took an early lead in the game. Defense was the name of this game, with clutch performances by outfielders Jack Murphy, Andy McKenna and Derek Schwanter against the hard hitting Red Sox. The infield was shored up with John Maher at first, Mike Monaco at second, Mike Froio at short and David Toomey at third. Brendon Doonan turned in a solid performance behind the plate, catching for pitcher Nick Savage. Rotating in was first year player Chase Murphy in right field. On the injured list was Andrew Smith, and away on family business was first year player Jake Kissick.

The last three innings were very intense with Red Sox Jordan Berry hitting a two-run home ran off X s relief pitcher John Maher. This tied the game up at 5-5. In the top of the sixth inning, Jordan Berry stepped to the plate again. John Maher handled the pressure and got Jordan to hit a fly ball to center Field which was easily handled by Andy McKenna. The bottom of sixth inning, with the game tied, and the home team A's had their last at bat. Mike Froio got on base with a single and stole second and third. Two outs, the winning run on third, and Derek Schwanter comes to the plate. He connects for a base hit and drove in Mike Froio to win the

Davis tries not to ask 'What if'

Former Cohasset lax star sets sites on future, not past

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Though he starred and left an indelible impression at Cohasset High, his high school lacrosse career will forever be linked to Hingham High.

In his sophomore, junior and senior years, Matt Davis' lacrosse seasons ended with games versus the neighboring high school to the north. Two years ago, Davis' Skippers were topped in the Div. 2 state championship team by Hingham. Last year, the Harbormen again crushed the Skippers postseason dreams, this time in the semifinals. This stretched Hingham's six-year record over Pilgrim Conference rival Cohasset to whatever and zero, regular season and postseason combined.

The memories Davis carries from his final clash with Hingham will at least be bittersweet. His Skippers finally avenged their run of futility against the Harbormen by dominating them in a May 6th regular season clash, 12-10 — a game not as close as the score might indicate, as Hingham added a couple of meaningless late tallies. Davis, who finished the game with two goals and two assists, celebrated along with teammates following the final horn, though all the while he knew something wasn't quite right with him physically.

Davis' instincts were correct. Early in the third quarter, he had landed awkwardly diving for a ball that was headed out of bounds. Turned out he had broken his collarbone, an injury that ended his season.

"I was happy to finally beat Hingham, but I really couldn't enjoy it all that much," said

All-Scholastic girls tennis team

Cohasset's Grossman, Stone and Caron-Shea team named among area's elite

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

Several of the young women you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

Honestly, the entire starting lineup for the state champion Cohasset High team received consideration. Holly Graham was a force at third singles all season, losing just once in league play, and the second doubles team of Emilie Sullivan and Corey Evans was likewise near perfect in the regular season, and scored crucial wins in a pair of 3-2 team decisions in the postseason. All three players were deservedly awarded Honorable Mentions. The better news, as far as CHS tennis fans are concerned, is that all three are juniors, so they'll be back next spring helping the Lady Skippers try to defend their state tile and vying again for All-Scholastic honors.

In the end, we limited ourselves to a team of just 11 singles players and four doubles teams, and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top female tennis players in Marinerland for this honor:

Singles

Elizabeth Stone - Sophomore
First Singles - Cohasset

Elizabeth Stone

Burst on to the varsity scene last year to give Cohasset the most frightening 1-2 punch arguably in the state (along with fellow Mariner All-Scholastic Lindsay Grossman), which paved the way a first ever state championship for the Lady Skippers this spring.... Liz went 12-0 to remain unbeaten through her first two regular seasons...has yet to drop a singles game in South Shore League play in two years…two-time SSL all-star…went 4-2 in postseason, her two losses coming to Bourne's state individual semifinalist Sasha Sullivan and Tantasqua's Morgan Reynolds in the state championship match (though that showdown was determined by tiebreak play after Cohasset has already clinched the title)…played the postseason on a badly sprained ankle that kept her out of action the last two weeks of the regular season…has represented the USTA of New England on both the Zonal and Super National teams…the high honors student also play soccer and golf, and enjoys skiing…working as a tennis instructor this summer…sister of Kelly Stone, a 2001 Cohasset High grad, was a star doubles player.

Lindsay Grossman - Senior
Second Singles - Cohasset

Lindsay Grossman

After playing three years at first singles, Lindsay graciously agreed to move down a spot in the rotation in order to make room for sophomore sensation Elizabeth Stone…the two formed an incredible one-two punch that paved the way to a first ever state championship for the Lady Skippers…went 10-2 in South Shore League play and 15-3 overall in the regular season…only losses came playing at number one singles in place of the injured Stone to Norwell star Angie Bizzozero (twice) and Notre Dame's Ashley Hawkes…went 5-1 in the postseason, which included a 6-0, 6-0 win at second singles in the 3-2 state championship match over Tantasqua…now a three-time Mariner All-Scholastic…finished her varsity career with a 51-7 record…four-time South Shore League all-star…plays off season tennis at the Weymouth Club…also a 2002 Mariner All-Scholastic in basketball and a standout for the CHS soccer team this past fall…National Honor Society member…ranked 7th in her graduating class…an Appalachia Project volunteer…would like to continue playing tennis at Colgate University…leaning toward majoring in Biology

Lindsay Horne - Freshman
First Singles - Scituate

Lindsay Horne

Lindsay Horne burst on the scene in her freshman year, earning the number one singles nod a few days into preseason workouts and never letting go…finished with a perfect 12-0 record in Patriot League play, leading the Sailors to a 9-1 record in league and a share of the PL title with Hingham….overall record was 16-2, her losses coming to state individual semifinalist Liz Stone (Cohasset) and defending state individual champ Katrina Elder-Bush of Brookline…Patriot League All-Star…season highlights included two wins over Hingham star Meaghan Doyle and Duxbury's Jenna Kent… made it to the third round of the state individual tourney, where she again fell to Cohasset's Stone… plays tennis year round at the Scituate Tennis Club…also played soccer and basketball at SHS this year…Scituate coach Bob Beatty: "Lindsay had a remarkable first year, and she's only going to get better. She has all the skills, and she's a strong competitor too. She always gets tougher as the match goes along, especially when she's pushed."

STAFF PHOTOS/ALAN CHAPMAN

Courtney Caron (right) made the third partner in three years for three-time South Shore League all-star doubles player Julie Shea (left), but the pair gelled quickly, lost just one match all season and played a huge role in the Lady Skippers march to a 2003 state championship.

Cohasset super soph Elizabeth Stone has yet to drop even a single set in two years of singles play in the South Shore League, making her an easy selection for the second time as a Mariner All-Scholastic.

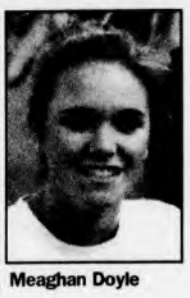
Meghan Duffy - Senior (Capt.)
First Singles - Marshfield

Meghan Duffy

This talented three-sport All-Scholastic capped her MHS career with a great season at No. 1 singles… Duffy went 15-3 this season, helping Marshfield finished third in the Old Colony League…Duffy upset the No. 3 seed in the State Individual tournament, but pulled a groin muscle in the match, effecting her play in the next round…Solid all-around play was this OCL All-star's greatest asset…Duffy played at No. 2 singles last season and doubles the year before…Also a basketball and field hockey All-Scholastic, Duffy plans to attend college in the fall. Marshfield coach Roberta Daniele: "Meghan has that athletic drive that makes the difference between a mediocre player and a top player. She had to learn a new position and she did it easily."

Meaghan Doyle - Sophomore
First Singles - Hingham

A two-year starter at the No. 1 spot for Hingham, Doyle enjoyed another solid season and received her second-straight Patriot League All-star nod…Doyle went 7-2 (8-4 overall) in limited PL action this season, as her coach opts that she don't compete against weaker opponents… Doyle's clutch play helped the Harbor-women capture a share of the PL title (11-1) and earn a berth in the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney….She also played in the State Individual tournament…Just a sophomore, the two-time All-Scholastic Doyle will return to her top singles post next season. Hingham coach Deb Boles: "She had a good record this season and it could have been even better, but I don't like to play Meaghan against some of the weaker competition. I think her ability speaks for itself. She's a great player."



Meaghan Doyle

Heather Haggerty - Sophomore
First Singles - Hanover

Heather Haggerty

A third singles player and All-Scholastic last season, Haggerty jumped to the No. 1 spot and enjoyed another successful year…A two-time Patriot League All-star, Haggerty went 8-4 in league this season…Her confidence as such a young player is her greatest asset…Her play was instrumental in Hanover's return to the Div. 2 South Sectional team tourney, where they topped Abington, 4-1, before falling to top-seeded Bourne…Held her own against some of the Patriot League's best players, including taking Scituate's Lindsey Horne to three sets in a match this season…Just a sophomore, Haggerty will most-likely return to her No. 1 post next season.

Diana Trebino - Junior
Second Singles - Hingham

Was the Harbor-women's ace in the hole many times this season, consistently coming up with crucial wins… Finishing at 9-1 in league, 10-4 overall, her highly competitive nature was this Patriot League All-star's greatest asset…Her play on the court helped lock up several matches, resulting in a co-championship of the PL…Saw time at first singles this season as well…Also a talented field hockey player at HHS, Trebino will captain the girls tennis squad next season and will most-likely return to her No. 2 spot. Hingham coach Deb Boles: "Diana is a great competitor. She'll go down a set, up a set, and fight for every point to the bitter end. She doesn't live, eat, and breathe tennis, but she gives 110 percent and that's all I can ask."

Diana Trebino

Jen Sheehan - Senior (Capt.)
Second Singles - Scituate

Jen Sheehan

Talk about finishing a career with a flourish, Jen jumped from doubles to singles play this year and put together a superb overall record of 15-3 at second singles, including a 2-0 record in postseason play, helping to lead the Lady Sailors to a 9-1 league record and a Patriot League co-championship… Patriot League All-Star…split her two matches this season with Hingham star Diana Trebino, her fellow PL All-Star and Mariner All-Scholastic…came back from a first set loss to win her match at Brookline in the second round of the state tourney…played two years of field hockey for SHS before deciding to concentrate exclusively on tennis… Honor Roll student…older sister Allison, who graduated from Providence College this spring, was a former Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic tennis player…will attend Roger Williams this fall and plans to try out for the school tennis team…plans to major in Elementary Education with an eye toward becoming a school teacher…Scituate coach Bob Beatty: "Jen was a talented player and a great team captain and leader, but the thing that stands out in my mind was her refuse to lose attitude. We saw a great example of that in her final high school match against Brookline. That was all mental toughness and intestinal fortitude there."

Angie Bizzozero - Junior
First Singles - Norwell

Angie Bizzozero

Did a fantastic job moving from second to first singles this spring, replacing two-time Mariner All-Scholastic Sara Bitetti (now playing at Providence College)…the 11-5 regular season record might seem on paper something of a disappointment for Bizzozero, who lost only one match combined in her first two seasons of play, that is until one considers to whom she lost…fell twice to both state individual semifinalist Sasha Solomon and Hingham star and fellow all-scholastic selection Meaghan Doyle (though one of those losses was a default due to illness after the match was postponed to another date), and then to Liz Stone of the state champion Cohasset team in the second round of the state tourney… missed three matches midseason due to illness… did go unbeaten in South Shore League play, though, the highlights being two wins over fellow Mariner All-Scholastic Lindsay Grossman of Cohasset…three-time SSL all-star and Mariner All-Scholastic…played second singles the previous two years and now has a career record of 42-6…also played soccer at NHS her freshman and sophomore years and basketball all three years…Norwell coach Derek Sulc: "Angie is just an exceptional athlete and competitor. But even I was surprised at how well she came back after missing a good deal of time due to illness.

Obviously, we're expecting really big things from her next year as a senior."

Meghan Kelly - Senior (Capt.)
Second Singles - Norwell

Meaghan Kelly

Now a two-time Mariner All-Scholastic selection, having also been named for her play at doubles in 2002... truly one of the most pleasant surprises in South Shore this spring in making the jump from doubles play to go 14-2 at second singles...season highlights included a thriller over fellow Mariner All-Scholastic Jen Sheehan of Scituate (6-4, 1-6, 6-3) and two straight sets wins over Hingham's Diana Trebino...lost a heartbreaker to Cohasset's Lindsay Grossman — 6-7 (7-4), 4-6 – in the state tourney...two-time team captain and South Shore League all-star... pushed Scituate freshman phenom Lindsay Horne to three sets in the state individual tourney...was also a key player and captain for the NHS girls soccer team and played basketball through her junior year, making varsity her final year...Honor Roll student...plays tennis year round at the Weymouth Club...has been recruited to play tennis at Hobart College next year (a Div 3 school in New York)...plans to major in Biology and minor in education...would like to play intramural soccer in college as well...Norwell coach Derek Sulc: "Meghan knew how much the team was counting on her this year, and she just took it to the next level. She worked hard in the off-season and then battled in every single match. She never let down. We're going to miss her leadership and that example she set probably as much as her talent."

Kate Schmuttenmaer - Senior
First Singles- Silver Lake

Kate Schmuttenmaer

Kate's final record of 9-7 is deceptive, as she gave several of the top players in this region of the state a worthy battle...Old Colony League all-star...went to three sets with fellow Mariner All-Scholastic Meghan Duffy of Marshfield, unbeaten Cassie Dombrowski of Falmouth and Barnstable's Meridith Cartmell, all fellow league all-stars...played second singles the previous two seasons, but won the competition for the top spot this spring with fellow senior Tara Hostnick...highlight of the season was a three-hour three set win over North Quincy's Lauren Holt...4-6, 7-5, 7-5 (7-1)... was also captain of the Silver Lake basketball team, earning a Mariner All-Scholastic Honorable Mention this past winter, and ran cross country for the school...recipient of this year's Gurney Award as SL's outstanding female scholar-athlete...National Honors Society member...will attend the University of Richmond next year at may try to play tennis...leaning toward majoring in Business with a possible minor in Spanish... Silver Lake coach Kevin Dunn: "Kate is just a fierce competitor. She got thrown to the wolves at first singles several times, but she never gave an inch. She made several extremely talented players battle for each and every point."

Doubles

Julie Shea/Courtney Caron-
First Doubles - Cohasset

Julie Shea

Caron, a junior, made the third partner in three years for three-time South Shore League all-star doubles player Shea, a senior captain, but the pair gelled quickly and played a huge role in the Lady Skippers march to a 2003 state championship... the team went unbeaten in regular season play and then 5-1 in the state championship run, their only loss a three-setter in the state semifinals to Manchester-Essex twins Kara and Marni Powers (the pair's 70th consecutive victory)...the pair also reached the quarterfinals of the state individual championships...Julie is now a two-time Mariner All-Scholastic selection...Julie was also a member of the CHS soccer and swim teams, and the sister of former CHS three sport star Erik Shea (Class of 2001, soccer, basketball, tennis)...Julie will attend Colby College this fall...she is undecided on a major, and is leaning toward going out for the school tennis team...Courtney has been contacted by several college tennis coaches (Wheaton and Merrimack among them)...is also a standout field hockey player for Cohasset High.

First Doubles - Scituate

Katie Driscoll

First year coach Bob Beatty played with the lineups a bit early in the season, but arrived at the conclusion not too far in that this senior-freshman tandem was his best first singles pairing, and that played a big hand in the Lady Sailors march to a Patriot League co-championship... the duo went 7-1, splitting decisions in their two meetings with fellow Mariner All-Scholastics Mollie Williams and Jess Purcell (Hingham)...Patriot League All-Stars...both girls have been active in student government and other sports at Scituate High...Katie, a senior captain, was a three sport standout at SHS, captaining the girls basketball team and also playing field hockey for four years...ranked seventh in her class...National Honor Society member...will attend Boston College ... Shane, a freshman, played SHS soccer this past fall, and plans to play again this fall and also run indoor track in the winter...a Commended Honors student... Scituate coach Bob Beatty: "I mixed and matched with the pairings early on, but Shane and Katie just seemed to click. They were both very good doubles players and they developed a chemistry quickly, and complimented one another's strengths."

Shane Kelly

Jessie Norton/Erin Stanton -
First Doubles - Marshfield

Jessie Norton

Paired together for the first time this season, Norton and Stanton went 15-3 this year, helping Marshfield to a third place finish in the Old Colony League... The all-senior duo reached the quarterfinals of the State Individual tournament, topping four teams before falling to Barnstable...Norton/Stanton cruised through the competition in the Div. 1 South team tourney, winning their three matches in straight sets before falling to Brookline in the quarters...Stanton is a four-year player at doubles, while Norton has previously seen time on the singles circuit...Stanton will attend Dickinson College in the fall, while Norton heads off to UConn to major in Business. Marshfield coach Roberta Daniele: "I think their consistency is what made them successful. They volley nicely and put a good pace on the ball, which can overwhelm an opponent. They were a nice doubles team."

Erin Stanton

Mollie Williams/Jess Purcell
First Doubles - Hingham

Jess Purcell

A veteran doubles player, junior Purcell teamed with senior captain Williams for a solid season for the Patriot League co-champions (11-1, 14-2 overall)...The PL All-stars combined hard-hitting and solid serving to capture wins and helping to lead the Haborwomen to the Div. 2 South Sectional team tourney, but illness kept Purcell out of play...Williams played with fellow captain Kristin Garrity in the last three matches of the season...Purcell will return to her No. 1 doubles post next spring, while Williams heads off to college in the fall. Hingham coach Deb Boles: "Jess was a real hard-hitter, good server and had a good volley, while Mollie was the plotter of the team. They communicated very well together."

Davis, who ended his senior season with 33 points in nine games and his career with over 120 points. "After that, it really hurt just to watch the team play. I wanted to be out there with them so bad, especially in the playoffs."

The Skippers went on to win eight more games in succession without arguably their best player, extending a program best winning streak to 16, earning the team the number one seed in the Div. 3 state tourney. It all came crashing down in the semifinals again, though, as Ipswich stunned the Skippers, 11-6. It was a loss that invariably left CHS coach Kevin Orcutt asking "what if?"

"I'm not saying we would have won that game if we'd had Matt, but I do know he could have made a big difference," said the third year head coach. "Matt was our quarterback, the guy who made us go, the guy who made everyone around him better.

"Ipswich managed to stuff us and prevent us from getting the ball in our offensive end. That's where Matt really excelled. He could really work the ball upfield quickly."

The praise of Davis hardly stops here.

"Honestly, I think Matt was one of the best (high school) players in the state," said Orcutt, who has certainly seen his share of this state's cream of the crop, coaching the Southeast scholastic team to state championship at the Bay State Games in both the summer of 2001 and 2002. "In terms of talent, athleticism, desire, work ethic and the ability to blend scoring, passing and physical play, I'd put him right up there with just about any high school player I've seen."

Orcutt feels this desire he raves about was in full evidence on the play that, ironically, ended Davis' high school athletic career.

"Just about every other player would have given up on that ball that was heading out of bounds, but Matty never gave up on anything," asserted Orcutt. "He was all out all the time. It was the only way he knew how to play."

While Orcutt believes his former star has the ability to play Div. 1 lacrosse, he does not question his decision to accept an offer from Ursinus College in Pennsylvania to play at the Div. 3 level, noting "it's the right place for him right now."

Davis, a National Honors Society member who achieved a grade point average of 3.6 in his senior year, was actively recruited by lacrosse coaches from several large Div. 2 schools and even a few small Div. 1 programs, but chose Ursinus for entirely personal reasons.

"I really like everything about Ursinus," explains Davis, who plans to major in Biology, casting an eye toward studying medicine as a post graduate. "It's a small school with a good Science program. It's in a nice area and I was just comfortable there."

Clearly, academics had a great deal to do with Davis' selection, as the gaudy grade point average might suggest.

"Division 3 sports might be just about right for me," said Davis. "I don't want a situation where sports are going to be all consuming. I want a place where sports have a place, but so does study time."

So, will there be any room in there for hockey? There were, after all, more than a few college coaches interested in Davis for that sport as well.

"I figure I'll at least play intramural hockey," said Davis, a three-time South Shore League all-star on ice who finished his CHS career with over 100 points. "I've been playing hockey most of the time since I was in like the fourth grade. It would be tough to just give it up cold turkey."

In fact, Davis has played a lot more hockey than lacrosse, a sport he didn't even take up until the sixth grade, much later than most of his chums. Indeed, if it hadn't been for these chums, he might never have picked up a lacrosse stick.

"I really liked playing baseball in the spring, but most of my friends started playing lacrosse, so I finally decided to give it a try," Davis recalled.

Obviously, it's a decision he rejoices on a regular basis.

"I like a lot of sports, and love hockey, but lacrosse is my favorite by far," said Davis, who also played football for Cohasset High. "It really is a great sport. It's a lot like hockey, but you don't have to go to the rink all the time. You can just grab your stick and practice or play just about anywhere."

And now he gets to do this on his terms at the college level.

Injury adds to insult

smile on his face clearly indicating he held no grudge against this player he's coached for several years. "The kid was beside himself. He's been calling me every five minutes seeing if there's anything I need done, offering to clean my house or watch the kids."

Under the circumstances, Arnold certainly understands the frustration that must have been present in his standout player at the time he fired away his bat.

A week ago, after back-to-back wins, the Post 118 charges had visions of repeating last year's closing run that saw them win nine of their final 10 games and steal the final playoff spot in Zone 6. However, Monday's loss made the fourth in a row for the Cohasset squad, dropping it back into the cellar in the league standings and crushing their postseason hopes.

Monday's game was already lost when Brian Woods, a 2002 Scituate High graduate, lined a two-out double off the fence in left center in what was likely his final serious at bat on Scituate High's field. Coach Arnold sent in Stella, who suffers from Cerebral Palsy and is used exclusively as a pitcher, to pinch run in order to draw some added applause for Woods.

The stir increased when Stella then advanced to third base on a passed ball, leaving him a mere 90-feet from his first run of the season. This only added to the considerable emotion that finally boiled over when the last out was made.

"We all just really wanted to see Brendan score, and I know (the player who made the last out) just lost it for a second," said Arnold. "He was disappointed in himself and the situation."

Cohasset dropped to 4-15 with Monday's loss and was scheduled to close the season this past Tuesday playing Milton at Curry College.

The disheartening week began with a 5-0 loss to Zone 6 leading Braintree on Thursday.

Braintree hurler Bill Flaherty went the distance on the mound for the shutout, striking out six while allowing base hits to only Woods, Brian Signorelli and shortstop Milke Gulinello.

Host Braintree scored all the runs it would need in the bottom of the third with the help of a couple of errant throws. The first run of the game scored on a wild pitch, the second on an overthrow of second base during an attempted steal.

Braintree would tack on a few more runs against tough luck Cohasset starter Kevin Signorelli.

The team was still reeling from this loss and it showed on Adams Field in Quincy 48 hours later when the Post 118ers simply could not get out of their own way, as they were swept decisively in the twin bill, 18-3 and 11-5.

"You can say whatever bad thing you want about our play the last few days, and you'll probably be right," said Arnold following Monday's loss. "Sloppy, lackadaisical, playing out the string: it all applies."

Legion Notes

Three or four college scouts were expected to attend Tuesday's finale against Milton at Curry College, principally to watch Gulinello play.

The star shortstop, a 2002 SHS grad, possesses a nice array of baseball tools.

"I have no doubt Gooly can play college baseball," asserted coach Arnold. "He does so many things well. He's got a great glove, a good bat and is a very strong athlete."

Jack O'Leary, a junior-to-be at Scituate High, continued his torrid pace at the plate to finish the season. The left fielder/pitcher had yet another multi-hit game on Monday, going 3-for-4 at the plate. Though he doesn't keep the numbers, coach Arnold believes O'Leary's average on the season is now approaching the .500 mark.

Scituate's Eric Dmohowski, the recent B.C. High grad who will be off to St. Joseph's in Philadelphia to play ball next month, was expected to get the start on the mound in Tuesday's finale.

game, 6 to 5.

Head Coach Rob Doonan said "the A's are a gritty, scrappy team. They play as team and work together. They dig in when the going gets Tough". Strength and versatility were the key to the A's success. Led by Brendan Doonan who is solid behind the plate, on the mound and at shortstop, the A's made very few mental errors during the season. Strength in batting was an asset as well. Regular season home runs by Mike Froio and Brendan Doonan, were but a few highlights of the at plate performances.

Solid at bats by first year player Mike Monaco, and veterans Andy McKenna, Froio, Doonan, John Maher, Andrew Smith, David Toomey and Jack Murphy propelled the A's to their championship season.

A spring to remember

senior captains Jared Krupczak and Ian Kidder were among several who competed at the state and all-state meets. The girls team met similar problems as the boys, with numbers so scarce, but senior LaRaine Langford led a core of underclassmen on a team that, body for body, would match up versus any team in the state division.

Senior Heather Peraino assumed captainship of a blossoming first year varsity softball program that, while gutting out difficult losses to more established teams, maintained a high-level of motivation despite a weak regular season record. This was actually the second sport Peraino was a resurrection pioneer for, as she helped lead the push to bring girls basketball back to Cohasset High School. With feeder programs at the Little League and Middle School levels, this team is looking to improve every year, and it might not be long before they are contending for a league title.

The boys tennis team, backboned by twin tower doubles players Ross Lieb-Lappen and Scott Faber, sliced its way back into the playoffs, continuing their tournament run to three years after the program had undergone a five year drought prior to 2001.

Finishing a career for a high school team is like nothing else. It's the close to a tight-knit team that may never congregate as a full group ever again. As seniors in spring, we realize the need to perform up to our potential and make our last seasons as high school athletes, for some our last seasons as participants in organized sports, special.

It is what makes the spring season the most exciting for one to watch, follow, or most importantly, compete.

Bay State Games- Cohasset participants

The annual Bay State Games Summer Games got underway last Thursday at various venues all over the state, and will conclude this coming Sunday. Five Cohasset residents are currently competing in three different events. Those interested in following these athletes should refer to www.baystategames.org.

Rockin' the Ranch House

Duke & the Drivers reunite for summer tour

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

This weekend's shows at the Ranch House in Marshfield are being billed as The Summer's Best Party. And the headliners promise to make it one of those rare occasions when you can believe the hype —particularly if you remember the names Sam Deluxe, Cadillac Jack, Mad Mississippi Buffalo, Earthquake Morton and Rhinestone Mudflaps III.

These are five of the six original madcap characters who make up Duke & the Drivers, who in their mid 1970s heyday, achieved local legendary status as New England's ultimate bar/roadhouse party band, performing a hard-driving, explosive brand of rock 'n' roll/R&B that often drew from the deepest, rootsiest, funkiest sources. The band supplemented its musical versatility with a zany stage show that engaged in amusing, off-the-wall schtick goofing on audience members as well as themselves while paying tribute to their influences.

Following a well-received 30th anniversary Christmas show at Cambridge's House of Blues last year, the five out of six original Drivers have reunited once again for a stretch of Baystate club and festival dates through the rest of this summer, beginning this weekend at the Ranch House with Friday and Saturday shows starting at 10 p.m.

Performing with Duke & the Drivers for both shows are the world-renown Uptown Horns, best known for their work with the Rolling Stones on the 1989-90 Steel Wheels tour, and the Steamers, who are another recently reunited, semi-legendary local area band of years gone by, are on hand as the opening act.

As Rhinestone Mudflaps III, the Drivers' saxophonist, harmonica player and percussionist who is Ando Hickson by birth, explains, the opportunity to play this series of dates with the Uptown Horns fulfills a long-time ambition for the band.

"Even back in the 70s," said Hickson (Mudflaps), "when Duke & the Drivers was at its peak, we always wanted to put together a full rhythm & blues and soul revue type of band, with the full horn section and even the additional guitars, keyboards and bass to fill out the rhythm section, but somehow never had enough clout or resources at our disposal to really pull off effectively. In the Uptown Horns, we have four world-class players who add a whole new dimension to the Drivers' sound, and now that we've managed to hook up with them, we believe we finally have the version of the Drivers band that we always envisioned."

70s bar band legends Duke & the Drivers return to the local club circuit this summer with a stop at Marshfield's Ranch House for two shows, Friday and Saturday night.

This version of the Drivers is the one heard on the band's new live CD, Check Your Bucket Live — which will be for sale at the Ranch House shows and soon to be available in wide release.

This version of the Drivers is the one heard on the band's new live CD, Check Your Bucket Live — "the album that we've always wanted to make," said Mudflaps, which will be for sale at the Ranch House shows and soon to be available in wide release.

The rest of the band nicknames match up with their given names as follows: Sam Deluxe — Joe Lilly, lead vocals, guitar; Cadillac Jack (AKA Counselor Ungh) — Henry Eaton, guitar, vocals, percussion; Greg "Earthquake" Morton, bass, vocals, percussion; and Mad Mississippi Buffalo — Tom Swift, vocals, keyboards. Original drummer Bob "Brockton Bobby" Chouinard passed away in 1993 from what Mudflaps these days will only describe as "hard living." Lilly's nephew, George (G-Squared) now fills the drummer's chair for the Drivers, while his son, Joe Jr. (the Petulant Prince) is added on guitar.

Save for Mudflaps, a California native, all of the original Drivers have roots in the Boston area, including the Duxbury-raised Eaton, who moved on to careers as a Boston TV-news anchorman and criminal defense lawyer following the band's late-70s breakup. Other members later became gourmet chefs, investment bankers and other career professionals.

So who is actually the Duke? Well, that brings us to another part of the whole Drivers entertainment package. The Duke is a mystical, spiritual mentor to the Drivers who never made it to any of their gigs, usually because one of his fleet of Lear jets was grounded at one of his many palatial tropical island estates around the world. Just play along.

"With this new live record, and the ensuing series of concert dates accompanied by the Uptown Horns, we as a band feel we can finally sit down and look each other in the eye, while meditating and considering the day's lessons as our Liege, the Duke always taught us, and know that we've made the record we've always wanted to make, and become the kind of band we're proud of," Mudflaps said. "We know that the Duke is pleased."

Duke & the Drivers will perform two shows at the Ranch House on Canal Street in Marshfield Friday, July 18 and Saturday, July 19 at 10 p.m. Tickets are $12 and can be purchased in advance by calling (781) 834-9149.

The Terminator (Arnold Schwarzenegger) returns ready to cause mayhem and bury his victims.

Terminator 3: Rise of the Machines (B)

We've no "Hasta La Vista, Baby" or, from another Arnold Schwarzenegger masterpiece, "You're luggage!" But we get a new one, "You're terminated," and the classic "I'm back!" is back. On his back rests this trequel, and it rests comfortably. "Terminator 3" makes no sense, but the original and its sequel were also brain-dead. The shtick is that from the future comes a cyborg, in #1 (1984) to kill the woman who will give birth to the savior of mankind — oh crimminy, here is nonsense that in worse form is given rein to bore us to death in the snore-fest of 2003, "Matrix Rewound," or whatever it's called. In #2 (1991) he returns, to save the kid, who's been born and is to be the savior. Now in #3 he is back, a relic as far as cyborg technology goes, to rescue him again — new actor, same character name — from the predation of a state-of-the-art cyborg, T-X, who, for perfectly valid, demographically savvy reasons, takes the form of a babe in tight duds, perfectly coifed and made up, a tough cookie.

David Brudnoy

The word "savior" is never used, but that's the meaning. John Connor (Nick Stahl, who manages to keep a straight face through this hokum) is scheduled to lead the humans in their final cataclysmic battle with the machines. John's living "off the grid" as he says of himself — no credit cards, permanent address, or even that instrument of the devil, the cell phone, nothing. But T-X of course finds him and also the woman, a no-nonsense veterinarian, Kate (Claire Danes), who, though neither knows it, will be his wife and second in

Can 'Pirates' reverse the curse?

New Disney film may change the course of 50 years of flops

By Ed Symkus
ESYMKUS@CNC.COM

It's been 50 years since a pirate movie made money. But this week, Disney is betting $125 million that they can buck that trend.

After bombing last year with the animated pirate film "Treasure Planet," Walt Disney Pictures is taking another chance with the big-budgeted "Pirates of the Caribbean: The Curse of the Black Pearl," based on the popular animatronic ride at Disneyland.

The film is a load of fun, featuring Johnny Depp as an inept, but charismatic pirate, Geoffrey Rush as his former sea-mate and now vicious adversary, and a rollicking story of a band of mysterious pirates who roam the Caribbean looking for a very special treasure. Staying within traditional pirate storytelling, they capture a beautiful girl, are pursued by a dashing hero — or two — and all ends happily, if strangely. But it's been a while since any movie like this has made any money on Hollywood.

Quite a few swashbucklers have been made since the genre's heyday in the 1940s and '50s, when films such as "Captain Kidd," "Against All Flags," "The Buccaneer," a remake of "The Sea Hawk" and multiple remakes of "Treasure Island" (15 times internationally to date) packed the movie houses. Audiences were yearning for adventurous sea-bound tales of derring-do, starring suave male leads like Errol Flynn and Yul Brynner, and fiery female leads, including Brenda Marshall and Maureen O'Hara.

Throughout those two decades, there were countless sequels and spin-offs — could anyone forget

Although "Cutthroat Island" and "Hook" did nothing to help the popularity of pirate movies, "Pirates of the Caribbean" could put a little swash back in the genre's buckle.

The film is a load of fun, featuring Johnny Depp as an inept, but charismatic pirate, Geoffrey Rush as his former sea-mate and now vicious adversary, and a rollicking story of a band of mysterious pirates who roam the Caribbean looking for a very special treasure.

1952's "Abbott and Costello Meet Captain Kidd?" — but it seems that no matter how hard Hollywood later tried to latch on to the successful formula pirate films once had, further hits were rare. "Long John Silver," in 1954, was the last one to make any money.

The bad luck started with the underrated and quite entertaining "Swashbuckler" (1976), in which Robert Shaw, fresh from his triumph in "Jaws" heroically sails the seas, with James Earl Jones as his pal and Peter Boyle as the villain. The film quickly vanished, probably because no one knew how to sell something as outdated as a pirate movie. When, a few years later, some not-so-bright studio executive okayed "The Pirate Movie," (1982) a musical satire of the genre, starring Christopher Atkins and Christy McNichol, the film sank without a ripple. Then Roman Polanski threw his hat in the water with "Pirates" (1986), and had an against-type Walter Matthau head up an international cast of unknowns in a comedy about greed and drunkenness. No one went. Even the Midas touch of Steven Spielberg couldn't revive the genre. "Hook" (1991) was one of his biggest flops, with an overbearing Dustin Hoffman in the title role and an overemotional Robin Williams as Peter Pan.

But the grandest pirate flop of all time was "Cutthroat Island" (1995), with a price tag of about $90 million and a box office take of about $11 million. The bold idea of making a pirate comedy with a female lead (Geena Davis) might have worked if Michael Douglas stayed on as her costar, but he left and the less-charismatic Matthew Modine came onboard. There were numerous on-set spats between Davis and her husband, the film's director, Renny Harlin. And the film's forced humor left audiences cold. It bankrupted its distributor, and made it into the "Guinness Book of World Records" as the biggest money loser ever.

The common explanation for these kinds of trends is that genre films are cyclical. Maybe it just wasn't time for pirate films to come around again.

But "Pirates of the Caribbean" may be the right film to turn the tide.

command in the war.

Don't ask, don't tell, don't think: The only way to get through this and not collapse into paroxysms of laughter, since the plot isn't worth three seconds of your time, unless of course you're a film student somewhere and are required by your nut-case professor or of your own volition to take these stupid sci-fi inanities seriously.

You want a good sci-fi flick? Try "28 Days Later," premised (though it's British) on a standard Hollywood paranoia about the way the world works, with science making a huge booboo and generating a virus of rage that leads to mayhem of unparalleled dimensions. That fine movie is well acted, written, conceptualized, and it'll give you a chill. "Terminator 3" will give you a headache if you're sitting in a theatre equipped with a deafening sound system. It'll give you a glow as you partake of the fun and a sense of "huh?" if you don't listen to me and actually try to fret about what it's "about." Pay attention! That's what I'm here for.

It's amusing in the basest way. T-X (Kristanna Loken) gets hold of bigger and better vehicles as the movie gallumphs along, at one point maneuvering a construction crane that knocks over anything in its path. The chases, in this or that machine with four or more wheels — at least Ah-nold isn't stuck on a bike like poor Harrison Ford in the unfairly dismissed "Hollywood Homicide" — are delish. Old-style cyborg versus new-style T-X: These things can repair themselves, get squashed and come right back, tattered, bent, but not broken, and carry on.

Meanwhile, as in all such movies, the maiden in distress looks alarmed, and since John is just a male version of the maiden in distress, he too is reduced to looking alarmed. The movie is all Ah-hold and this Loken hottie, who has appeared in some TV things and independent movies that nobody saw and (press kits are so droll) "was raised on an organic fruit farm." Appropriately, since the movie's fruit-cake nutty, but yummy. Ah-hold is a hoot, and unless his body has been altered via computer, he's still the best built guy who might be a governor. Early on, he ambles naked into a saloon on ladies' night, in order to grab the duds of a guy about to shuck them, and the women's eyes widen into saucers of lust, some looking down at, may I say it?, his cyborg-worthy central zone. On such scenes a film is well hung. Don't you just adore the movies? I sure do.

derous pirates going after British ships; scenery-chewing comic acting from Depp and Rush; eye-popping (in one case that's very literal) special effects done up in old-fashioned rather than slick, contemporary style; and a litany of standard pirate movie standbys, including guns, explosions, plank-walking, rope-swinging, sword-fighting, battles at sea, abandoned islands, a parrot (and a monkey) on a shoulder, a treasure, heroic men, a strong woman.

But it also has more. It has the same thing that's going to make "Terminator 3" a huge hit: a sense of self-deprecating humor. No one in this film takes it seriously, yet everyone involved seems committed to the film. The gags come fast, but just about all of them are presented with a wink and a nod. Depp plays it swishy and wears far too much kohl under his eyes; Rush gets to spout out lines such as: "There be the chest, inside be the gold;" the parrot is the only one to say, "Shiver me timbers."

The movie is classy and offbeat, fresh and retro, true to the spirit of pirate films that have come before it and unafraid to defy convention. It seems likely to attract both young and old. It looks like a smash. The time could be right. Pirate films could be back.

"Pirates of the Caribbean: The Curse of the Black Pearl" is now playing.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

WEDNESDAY, JULY 16

Signing contracts or making long-range plans or commitments are off limits for the remainder of the week. Take advantage of relaxing planetary energies, and take extra vacation time. The moon enters Pisces at 11:14 a.m., remaining there until Friday evening. In addition, Mercury prepares to oppose Neptune, the planetary ruler of Pisces. This combination is great for creativity, fantasy or just mellowing out and enjoying life. On the other hand, it can be most difficult if you have a lot of work to do. You must carefully organize your time and pay extra attention to details, accuracy.

THURSDAY, JULY 17

Yesterday's advice applies to today as well. The moon continues to travel in Pisces, active throughout the day. There is one pitfall in today's planetary picture, however. A lunar alignment to Pluto is in effect between 5:49-8:49 p.m. Deep feelings, hidden resentments may surface. Choose your words carefully and avoid touchy subjects in this period.

FRIDAY, JULY 18

It may be difficult to get motivated to work today. The Pisces moon continues to place an emphasis on taking it easy, following the path of least resistance. This is not a time to make long-term decisions or financial commitments. The moon enters Aries at 7:20 p.m., bringing an energy boost and making the evening prime for partying.

SATURDAY, JULY 19

A lunar alignment to Saturn warns you to avoid morning hassles or the blues. The moon continues to travel in Aries, active throughout the day. A polarity of Mercury and Neptune takes center stage, however. Its influence can blur the lines between fact and fiction. Don't take anything or anyone too seriously. Let fun and games top your agenda.

SUNDAY, JULY 20

This day rates high across the board. If you have work projects to accomplish, you can get them out of the way in short time. The green light is on for new starts in your business or personal life. It is best to initiate new ideas before 2:30 p.m., when the Aries moon forms a harmonious contact to Jupiter. This day is also prime for enjoying favorite sports, hobbies, friends.

MONDAY, JULY 21

The last quarter phase of the moon occurs at 3:01 a.m., and the Aries moon becomes inactive. A Taurus moon takes over at 6:48 a.m., setting the stage for a productive day. Take on a full work agenda. You can initiate important enterprises, sign contracts, make major changes and decisions. Pull out all the stops. Influences this evening are ideal for a family dinner or get-together.

TUESDAY, JULY 22

A 90-degree alignment of the Taurus moon to Neptune can make for a slow start to this day. However, its influence passes over by midmorning, and a harmonious alignment of Mercury and Pluto takes over. Focus on projects that need to be redone, repaired or jobs that have been troublesome and full of snags. You can get to the bottom of things and find what you need to get back on track. Plan a romantic evening with the love in your life.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 23

The sun enters Leo at 2:04 a.m., remaining there until August 23. At 5:14 a.m. the Taurus moon aligns with Venus and becomes inactive until 7:42 p.m. That means that new starts are off limits today. Instead, finish projects already begun, handle routine chores and errands. Planetary action turns around completely at 7:42 p.m., when the moon enters lively Gemini. Fun and games are back in the picture this evening.

THURSDAY, JULY 2

If you have a clear plan of action and stick to it, you can be most productive today. A Gemini moon suggests you handle a variety of projects, rather than one that demands mental focus and precision. This is an excellent period for offering proposals, promoting your ideas. Slow down between 1:51-4:51 p.m., when the moon forms a challenging 90-degree alignment to Mars. Sidestep impatience, irritability.

FRIDAY, JULY 25

A lunar opposition to Pluto may spark emotional thunderstorms this morning. Don't make waves. Storm clouds move out, and sunny astrological weather returns for the remainder of the day. An excellent period for initiating new enterprises and signing contracts is in effect between 8:00 a.m.-5:38 p.m. The Gemini moon aligns with Mercury and Jupiter until 5:38 p.m., when it becomes inactive. Don't be a hermit tonight. Mercury and Jupiter conjoin at 23-degrees Leo, setting the stage for a fun evening.

Summertime splendor in the sunny border

Green thumbs up

Part 2

By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

During the warm, humid days of early summer, our sunny perennial borders are overflowing with glorious color. Each day, the palette changes as the late springtime canvas gradually fades and a new portrait emerges. Despite the challenges of designing with the fleeting blooms of perennial plants, I would never trade their diverse flower forms and foliage textures for the continuous bloom of a flower garden dominated by annual flowers. I welcome the ever-changing appearance of the garden as the weeks go by and use annual plants to bridge the momentary gaps especially during the latter half of the growing season.

Mid-July is peak bloom in my sunny gardens. Dazzling displays of daylilies paint the landscape with riotous colors. The stunning spires of rosy purple gayfeathers (Liatris), blue veronicas, and lavender catmints (Nepeta) provide pleasing contrasts. Boisterous beebalms in vivid shades red, pink, and violet entice butterflies and hummingbirds to hover at their unique whorled flower heads.

Delightful daisies, large and small, offer colorful complements, attracting throngs of butterflies that perch on their petals while sipping nectar from the multitude of tiny flowers in the central disks. Bright gold false sunflowers (Heliopsis), pink and white coneflowers (Echinacea), gloriosa daisies (Rudbeckia), lavender Stokes asters (Stokesia), golden-yellow coreopsis and snow white shasta daisies (Leucanthemum) highlighted by yellow centers offer continuous blooms for weeks to come.

Purple coneflowers (Echinacea spp.) rank high on my list of favorite composites, blooming well into the fall if their spent flowers are removed on a regular basis. Large flowerheads up to 5-inches across are held above coarse dark green foliage and are irresistible to numerous species of butterflies. These showy daisies vary somewhat from plant to plant with large central disks ranging in color from burgundy to orange and ray florets appearing in shades of pink, purple or white which may be relatively horizontal or droop. There is often significant variation among plants propagated from seed.

Echinacea cultivars which tend to be most widely distributed in commerce include 'Magnus', 'Bravado' and 'Bright Star' with purplish-pink flowers and 'White Swan' with white petals and orange disks. Several newer introductions offer richer color, horizontal petals, or a compact habit and there is even a unique double-flowering variety featured on the cover of the Wayside Gardens catalog called 'Razzmatazz'. Echinacea 'Ruby Star' and 'Ruby Giant' both provide dramatic, deep pink flowers and horizontal petals. Ideal for the middle of the border are two recent dwarf introductions known as 'Kim's Knee-high', a compact pink coneflower, and 'Kim's Mophead', its white counterpart. These reach a height of approximately 15 to 18 inches, about half as tall as their cousins.

Grow purple coneflowers in soils enriched with ample humus, thereby offering a moisture-retentive but well-drained environment. Tolerant of partially shaded locations, they flourish in full sun. As their flowering season comes to a close during the cooler months, seed heads can be left to provide winter interest and encourage chickadees, goldfinches and tufted titmice to pluck the seeds through the winter. Seeds will scatter in the process and for those who may not be conscientious weeders, offspring will appear in subsequent seasons creating colorful patches of these showy, long-blooming beauties.

The family of tickseeds (Coreopsis spp.) is comprised of a number of attractive, long-blooming perennials, many of which lure butterflies. Coreopsis grandiflora cultivars form basal clumps with wiry stems and dozens of daisy-like single or double flowers of golden yellow that are wonderful as cut flowers. Look for Coreopsis 'Early Sunrise', 'Flying Saucers' or 'Baby Sun' which features maroon highlights around the central disk. Many of these cultivars are short-lived and the original plant may disappear after a season or two but their long season of bloom makes them valuable additions to the border. Each seedhead is packed with dozens of flat, round, brown seeds (hence the common name of tickseed) which will pop up in future years to provide new plants. Deadhead regularly to prolong blooming.

The thread-leafed tickseeds (C. verticillata spp.) are delightful, delicate, long-lived perennials which gradually spread to form bushy, airy clumps of deep green foliage topped by charming small, daisy-like flowers from late June to frost. Coreopsis 'Moonbeam' is particularly appealing with its pale, lemon-yellow blooms. Other members of this group may spread more than some gardeners would like, but are easily pulled when they encroach on other perennials. One of the most promising new perennials on the market last season was Coreopsis 'Limerock Ruby', developed in nearby Rhode Island. Dozens of 1fi-inch, ruby red, daisy-like flowers bloomed all summer long above the 20-inch foliage. Unfortunately, this charming plant did not survive the severe winter and it appears it may not be hardy but I am growing it again this season for its unique color and long season of bloom. All tickseeds perform best in full sun in well-drained, average to fertile soils. A light shearing during August will remove spent flowers, promote denser foliage and encourage a new flourish of blossoms.

Many local nurseries still have an excellent supply of colorful perennials to brighten the summertime borders. To view a spectacular display of field-grown daylilies and potted perennials, visit Tranquil Lake Nursery on Sat., July 19, for its annual Open House. A full day of activities is planned including informative lectures on perennials, flower arranging, and herbs; perennials and herbs will be available from a variety of vendors.

HEARING AGAIN

When you first begin using your new hearing instrument, there will be a period of adjustment during which commitment and a positive attitude play big roles. As you once again hear sounds that you have not heard in some time, your brain will actually have to relearn how to hear these sounds, particularly human speech. During this time, you may prefer a low, comfortable volume setting as you adapt to the new sound quality provided by your instrument. Even your own voice may sound unfamiliar at first. It's a good idea to practice conversing with others. Once you feel comfortable with your new instrument in familiar surroundings, practice wearing it in a wider variety of sound environments.

Life with a hearing aid takes some getting used to, until the wearer reaches the point where it becomes just another part of daily routine, like brushing and flossing. And a hearing aid that doesn't fit properly or deliver the quality of sound the wearer has a right to expect is probably going to end up in the back of the night table drawer. When it comes to better hearing, from evaluation to fitting to follow-up care, you can count on FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER being by your side. We're located at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. We also have an office in Abington. 781-337-1144.

P.S. While adjusting to your new hearing instrument, pay attention to the visual cues that conversation partners provide.

Town budget deficit soars

Charter School tuition bill adds to the problem

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The way the Department of Revenue is billing towns for students attending charter schools has put Cohasset in a financial bind.

Until this year, the DOR has paid charter schools on a quarterly basis, billing towns for their share only during the fourth quarter. But, when the town received its state aid projections this month, tuition had been added as an up-front cost, putting a strain on an already crunched budget.

While the town had received warning of the change in billing last November, such a large amount of money to be paid up front has put an added stress on Town Manager Mark Haddad, who also has a large reduction in local aid to contend with.

To help offset the anticipated shortfall in state aid, the town passed a $350,000 Prop. 2-1/2 override at the ballot box this spring. At that time, the town was banking on a reduction in local aid of $307,000 for FY2004. But, on June 30, when the state budget came in, the numbers reflected an reduction of $99,000.

State projections now show cuts in local aid of more than $340,000 over the FY 2003 amounts for education, and roughly $98,420 in general government. Among the list of charges was a $132,000 "sending tuition" fee for the charter schools which had not been

Nothnagle goes for the gold...and wins

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Walking into Jay Nothnagle's apartment, it's easy to see he is a talented athlete. Trophies adorn every corner of his living room, and medals are displayed proudly in glass cases on the wall, commemorating his accomplishments to date.

Over two decades ago, while attending the Joseph Osgood Elementary School in Cohasset, Jay began training for what would be the first of many competitions in the Special Olympics. At the young age of eight, his parents could never have imagined he would one day be winning the gold medal at the world level for more than one event.

From June 20-29, Jay competed in the 2003 Special Olympics World Summer Games held in and around Dublin, Ireland. His sport of choice this time was sailing, but he has excelled in nine other sports over the years at the state and world levels. He has competed in speed skating, golf, softball, basketball, track and field, alpine skiing, bowling, aquatics, and powerlifting.

Jay had never been to Ireland before, but said he thinks it's "pretty nice." On the flight over, chartered specifically for the US team through funding provided by the Knights of Columbus, the athletes had a rare and exciting experience when they were invited into the cockpit to see how the pilot flies the plane.

Upon their arrival, Jay's father Jeff said he couldn't believe how welcome the country made them feel. Throughout the entire two weeks they were there, he said the support was phenomenal.

"The whole country was so nice," Jeff said, noting that the "operating phrase" as they were walking down the street was,

Greenbush foes, fans want messages to stick on governor

Seek Romney's eye at Hingham Hedlund event

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Train critics wore stickers showing a locomotive in a circle with a red line through it — while Greenbush backers wore bright green stickers saying Greenbush YES!

In an effort to impress Governor Mitt Romney on his trip to Hingham last week, those on both sides of the Greenbush tracks conducted a subtle "sticker war" inside the Cobblestone Room at the South Shore Country Club.

But the function room was so jammed with state Sen. Robert Hedlund's supporters — who wanted to get a glimpse of the governor — the message behind the pro- and anti-train stickers sported by many may have gone unnoticed by a hurried Romney.

Train critics wore stickers showing a locomotive in a circle with a red line through it — while Greenbush backers wore bright green stickers saying Greenbush YES!

But Romney couldn't miss members of GOT (Greenbush on Track), a new group backed by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, which held pro-train banners and signs saying "Finish the job!" at the Hingham country club entrance just a stone's throw from the tracks. GOT pickets, which numbered about 40 at one point, received as many positive honks from motorists as they did thumbs down as they waited for the governor's entourage to pull in at about 6:30 p.m.

"Here we are in the hotbed and one-half the people are giving us thumbs up," said an incredulous Bob Jackman. "I'm from Marshfield and everyone in Marshfield is in favor of Greenbush."

Gas leak reported

Construction workers hit a gas main yesterday on Oak Street, causing the surrounding houses to be evacuated. According to Sgt. John Conte of the Cohasset Police Department, a call came in at 1:25 p.m. reporting the two-inch main had been hit, sending gas everywhere.

The fire department evacuated homes in the surrounding area. Workers from Keyspan Energy were called to fix the pipe.

Conte said yesterday the workers will "repair the pipe and be on their way." Police said no one was injured in the incident.

Upcoming meetings

The following meetings were posted at Town Hall this week:

Conservation Commission, July 24, 7:30 p.m.,

Health Board, July 24, 7:30 p.m.

Selectmen, July 29, 7:30 p.m.

Sewer Commission, Aug. 18, 6 p.m.

Zoning Board of Appeals, Aug. 18 (Avalon), 7:30 p.m.

All meetings are at Town Hall unless indicated otherwise.

Brush chipping

Due to the condition of the town's chipping machine the following items will not be accepted on Saturday, July 26, at Brush Day:

Stumps, firewood, vines, building wood, fences or any wood with nails. Only 2 -inch to 3-inch diameter brush and branches can be chipped.

Mill River Railway assessed at $300K

Peter Roy of Margin approached the Community Preservation Committee last winter about the potential of the town using community preservation funds to buy the Mill River Marine Railway site at the harbor for $750,000, or the assessed value, whichever is higher.

But an independent assessor has determined the value to be only $300,000, CPC Chairman Stuart Ivimey said last week. Ivimey planned to discuss the issue with Roy's attorney before bringing it back to the committee.

Roy, who purchased the property several years ago and hoped to save the historic Eastwick building, faced myriad environmental regulations for the waterfront property. To make the project viable, Roy planned to construct two condominiums at the site but a new town bylaw passed at last year's Town Meeting made the project more difficult because it eliminated use variances that could allow residential units in a waterfront business district.

Tearing down and removing the dilapidated structures on the parcel would cost an additional $500,000, of which Roy would pledge $250,000, according to Ivimey.

Roy also owns Atlantica, the Cohasset Harbor Inn and the Olde Salt House.

Roy envisioned a town park at the site with parking and a dock with about 10 slips for 20-foot boats. The lobster pound would be carved out of the parcel, and would be privately owned, with the stipulation that its exterior is spruced up.

Classmates sought from early 1950s

Classmates of Cohasset High School, years of 1950, 1951, 1952 and 1953 are being sought.

The Reunion Committee is trying to locate the following classmates' mailing addresses and/or e-mail addresses so it can send out reunion update information. Also if any classmates have moved recently they might want to leave your new address. Call 781-383-9539 and leave your name, street address, town/city/zip and e-mail address. Also, the committee is looking for photos. Classmates who have not yet received an invitation should send along their information.

Mailing information on the following classmates are needed:

Vernice Bates, William Burkenshaw, Maureen Burns, James Brown, Walter Dow, Bernard Ferreira, Rose Emanuello Gould, John Emanuello , Thomas Guerra, George Hamilton, Charles Jason, Benjamin Livine, Rocco Sorrentino, Geoffrey Stevens. Persis Taylor, Paula Toomey, Allen Trueblood, Barbara Turner, Carol Rhodes, Jacqui Rhodes, and Forrest Robinson.

Lunch orders

Healthier food choices sought for local schools

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The Board of Health is asking Chartwells Educational Dining Services, the company that provides food service to Cohasset schools, to provide healthier options for students.

"The Board of Health is concerned about the obesity epidemic currently sweeping the country," the board stated in a letter to Robert Levy, manager of lunch program. "The board also feels the schools are sending the wrong message to students by telling them to eat healthy and then providing foods and snacks that are far from healthy."

"The board also feels the schools are sending the wrong message to students by telling them to each healthy and then providing foods and snacks that are far from healthy."
— Dr. Joseph Godzik, health agent

The health board has asked the food program to do the following by the first day of school:

- provide a "junk" free lunch day at least once a week with no burgers, fries, pizza and pasta.
- put only snacks low in fat and carbohydrates in vending machines.
- replace the ice cream with Popsicles or other frozen snacks that are low in fat and carbohydrates.
- provide only water and 100 percent juice drinks in the vending machines and in the food line.

Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said the directive applies to the three schools but with particular emphasis on the middle-high school where students are offered a lot more options.

In a telephone interview, Godzik said the Board of Health has the authority to write a regulation stating what could or could not be served because the type of food served is a health issue.

"But the Board of Health would rather do it in a cooperative manner – rather than forcing it down someone's throat," he said.

Chartwells District Manager Jerry Jones said Chartwells — which has provided food service to Cohasset schools for 15 years — has always cooperated with the Board of Health and did not expect this would be any different. But he asked to reserve further comment until he had a chance to discuss the issue with the Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Edward Malvey.

"My inclination is we will do what the Board of Health has asked us to do," he said. "But as per our contract, we report to the superintendent and need to discuss this with him."

The health board started a town-wide effort about a year ago focusing on the problem of obesity and trying to provide more opportunities for people to exercise in town. Chairman Steve Bobo through his weekly "Health Notes" column in the Mariner has talked about the walking club, the need for sidewalks and rails to trails program, among other issues targeted toward a healthier lifestyle.

Godzik said the health board expects Chartwells' cooperation in providing healthier lunch and snack options for schoolchildren. The board is also sending out educational materials to parents.

Malvey could not be reached for comment by press time.

Red Lion roars about smoking ban

Gerd Ordelheide, owner of the Red Lion Inn, will have to go to Town Meeting if he wants to change Cohasset's smoking regulations, the Board of Health said.

In a July 10 letter to the Board of Health Ordelheide stated he would like to "reopen the discussion and at the minimum allow smoking on the porches."

"Following a request of the town, I installed a very expensive air-filtration system just three years ago," he said. At that time, Cohasset allowed variances to its smoking ban in public places.

But Town Meeting voters this past spring approved a new version of the town's smoking bylaw, making lighting up illegal in all public places and workplaces. The ban also applies in restaurant patio areas and within 20 feet of any entrance of a workplace. Three Cohasset restaurants — Koko Island, Atlantica and the Red Lion Inn — are allowed to keep their smoking variances until they expire in 2005. The town will no longer issue variances.

In responding to Ordelheide's letter, the Board of Health said the issue is not open for discussion in light of the town's new bylaw.

After 50 years on the South Shore, to describe the Cohasset Consignment Shop as an "institution" would be a gross understatement.

So would almost anything said about Andi Merrill, who's been at the helm of the popular "second-hand" store for more than two of the shop's five decades.

But the second part of the Consignment Shop equation is about to become history. Merrill, who is resigning as shop manager, leaves on Saturday.

The Social Service League, which owns the shop, and Merrill both want to part ways on a "high note" so to speak. The two have a difference of opinion on the league's involvement with the shop. Those differences could not be resolved to each other's satisfaction.

Merrill, an attractive woman with a throaty voice that exudes a confidence in what she's doing, has legions of "fans" from the volunteers to consignors to customers to people she's helped over the years.

As word spread, some sent letters to the editor stating their dissatisfaction with her departure, while others stopped by her office at the rear of the shop to wish her well.

"I've been here since 1975 when I started as a volunteer," Merrill recalls. "In 1982, (the late) Jean Cotton retired and knew I had a background in retail and asked me to run the shop."

At the time, Merrill had "retired" from a career as a fashion buyer for stores, such as Worths of Newbury Street, C. Crawford Hollidge in Boston and Grover Cronin of Waltham and running her own shop in Dedham Plaza, and was working in real estate. She soon stopped selling real estate and dove back into retailing full time.

Over the years she's also enjoyed designing the shop, which has moved several times.

"I think I helped create a consignment shop with the best reputation on the South Shore," says Merrill who moved to Scituate from Cohasset about 10 years ago.

She's particularly proud of her relationship with customers, consignors and volunteers.

"It's taken a long time to build up that rapport," she says. "I've also gained the friendship of all the loyal volunteers."

For Merrill, who is known for her thoughtful hand-written notes for all occasions including illness, the shop was a true "labor of love." She prides herself on being fair, and customers and consignors learned quickly to trust her judgment

Merrill, with the help of volunteers, has been known to visit a home to help a new widower deal with his late wife's things. "That was not unusual," she says.

She said over the years the shop has become a "family" and a provided a pleasant social environment where people felt safe.

The shop — where items such as bric-a-brac and clothing are sold on consignment with a percentage going to the owner — provides money for League programs, such as a scholarship, domestic violence prevention and the services of a social worker.

League president Amy Cutler said the organization wishes her well.

"The Board of Directors of the Social Service League of Cohasset thanks Andi for the years of care, energy and creativity that she's put into the management of the shop," Cutler said. "As a result of her leadership, the shop's foundations are stronger than ever.

"We applaud her accomplishments and wish her all the best with her future plans."

Those who will miss Merrill may not have to wait for long. She and shop treasurer Colleen Roth, who is also leaving, have some plans of their own.

"We don't plan to retire and will get back in retailing," Merrill says. "We're not going to sit on the veranda and drink mint juleps."

Greenbush fate may come down to choice not money

By Jeanne M. Rideout
JRIDEOUT@CNC.COM

The state has no money and the MBTA has no money for building projects, Gov. Mitt Romney said.

The key rail trunk line between Braintree and South Station is at near capacity.

The MBTA has more projects in the pipeline that can squeeze through.

The six-month moratorium on Greenbush construction, slated to end Aug. 11, may be extended due to outstanding permit and mitigation issues, such as the unresolved Weymouth Landing design.

It all comes down to time, money, and space — and choice.

Some are concerned the choice may be between constructing the Greenbush line running from Braintree to Scituate and redeveloping the former South Weymouth Naval Air Station.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, a staunch Greenbush opponent and member of the House and Senate joint transportation committee, believes it is the capacity issue that will derail Greenbush.

"If Greenbush dies, that is what will kill it. You can't service the naval air station and Greenbush. The money issue can be addressed, the capacity issue can't," Hedlund said.

The Old Colony Rail line is made up of three branches connecting areas south of Boston with downtown Boston, the Middleboro, Plymouth, and Greenbush lines. The Plymouth branch has a stop in South Weymouth bordering the naval air station. Redevelopment of the naval air base will require additional trains to meet the increased transportation needs, according to Hedlund.

Yet others believe air base redevelopment can coexist with the restoration of the Greenbush line by measures such as adding double decker trains and creating a layover facility at the base and running trains only between Plymouth and South Weymouth. Trains would then run from South Weymouth to Boston. The idea of a layover has been a discussion dating back two years when the MBTA made a visit to the air station, according to base officials.

David S. Hall, vice president of the commercial property group of air base master developer Lennar Partners, said he sees no connection between base redevelopment and Greenbush.

"We need Greenbush," Hall said. "We are committed to finding the best multi-modal transportation for the area."

However, when asked if the rail line had the capacity to handle both base redevelopment and Greenbush, Hall had no definite answer.

"We don't know the technical answer to that. It would be a concern," Hall said.

"This is up to the governor and the MBTA," said Bill Ryan, a former Weymouth selectman who is Lennar's administrator of public outreach and government affairs. "Greenbush and air base redevelopment are separate issues. The merits of a transportation center at the base will be discussed with the community and has its own set of merits. Greenbush, whether it is a go or not, also has its own set of merits."

State Rep. Frank Hynes, a Greenbush supporter and also a member of the joint transportation committee who represents Scituate and Marshfield, believes that when Romney makes his final list of priorities, Greenbush will be at the top.

There is already $500 million in the MBTA's capital budget available for the project. The MBTA believes it can cover debt service and operating costs through 2008, as long as the rate increase now before the Legislature goes through, Hynes said.

"The MBTA has already spent $189 million on the project already and we are close to 75 percent design. We have contracts signed. At the end of the day, Greenbush will make the grade and there will be a green light for Greenbush."

However, should the project were to exceed $500 million, then Greenbush may not be able to advance due to the tight economic times, Hynes said.

Project costs now stand at $470 million. This includes $282 for the construction of the line and

"I'm very much bullish on Greenbush, the governor's recent statements notwithstanding," Hynes said.

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce has launched a pro-Greenbush effort dubbed GOT, Greenbush On Track.

Weymouth Mayor David Madden continues to pull for the construction of the Greenbush line.

"I don't know if we can afford not to," Madden said. "What do we do? We can't say we won't do anything. We need to improve transportation on the South Shore. The governor has stated he is going to do an assessment of all the MBTA projects. I'm confident Greenbush will meet any criteria they establish."

The newest controversy on Greenbush erupted when Romney was quoted in the media as saying the state could not afford to go ahead with rail line expansion projects, including Greenbush and a proposed New Bedford-Fall River commuter line, for years ahead. The comments were made at a meeting in Fall River. Hynes said he felt the intention of the governor's remarks was there was not enough money for both the Greenbush and New Bedford lines, and he was confident the Greenbush project had more compelling reasons to go forward.

The Old Colony Line was abandoned in 1959. In 1997, service was restored on the Plymouth and Middleboro branches. The Greenbush line was the last branch attempted since the project was the most complicated of the three, T officials have said.

Greenbush foes, fans want messages to stick on governor

noted the late afternoon hour to hold the rally was a disadvantage. "Most commuters are stuck in Boston," he said.

Emily Robinson of Scituate said she's been "waiting forever for the train."

"I get lost driving to Boston," she said. "I want to go to museums and shows."

But inside the country club, Greenbush opponent Dottie Leach of Scituate said those wearing anti-train stickers hoped to give Romney the message that Greenbush money would be better spent elsewhere.

"The people don't want it," she said.

Alexander Macmillan, who coordinates Greenbush issues for the town and is a longtime opponent, said, he "would certainly not shed any tears if Romney decides to cancel the train."

At this point, Romney's remarks made earlier last Wednesday at an event in Fall River about the lack of money for Greenbush that made headlines the following day had yet not made their way to either the pro- or anti-Greenbush camps. [Romney is reviewing the financial feasibility of Greenbush, which must compete with other MBTA projects for MBTA capital dollars. The MBTA derives its revenues from the fair box, assessments on towns, and 20 percent of state sales tax. Out of all of that, debt service in one of its many expenses.]

The sultry weather outside the country club combined with guests, who paid $25 and up to attend the Hedlund fundraiser and were packed in like sardines — created sauna-like conditions in the hall. Once Romney entered the crowded function room, it took him upwards of 15 minutes just to negotiate his way through the people to get to the podium because so many were clamoring to shake his hand.

Plymouth County District Attorney Tim Cruz said it was a thrill for a "kid from West Bridgewater to introduce the governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

Romney then began his remarks with a joke about a goat and a railroad tie, which, as it turned out, had nothing to do with Greenbush, but nevertheless held the crowd in a nervous silence just in case the punch line did.

Romney put a positive spin on recent weeks on Beacon Hill where 52 of his vetoes were overturned just that prior Monday alone. He received boisterous applause when he said the administration balanced the budget without raising taxes – an issue that nearly all those in the Republican-dominated room could agree on. He praised Hedlund, R-Weymouth, for his hard work and stressed how important it was to elect more Republicans to the Democrat-dominated Legislature. Romney stayed for only a few minutes dashing off to a theater date with his wife, Anne.

Hedlund told his supporters Romney "puts people before politicians and policy before politics."

"Sadly the majority party that controls the legislature puts patronage before reform," said Hedlund, as he went through a litany of examples. He said with all the vetoes, the budget is now out of balance with many accounts under funded – a situation that will force the governor to step in and take emergency measures later in the year.

In a telephone interview this week, Hedlund said the fundraiser, which attracted 400 people, was "significantly more successful than any he's had in terms of dollars raised." He declined to give the amount.

He wasn't surprised by the pro-train pickets at the country club gate or the "battle of the lapel stickers inside."

"People are vociferous on Greenbush," Hedlund said. "When any governor has visited this area in the past eight years or so, citizens have used the opportunity to express themselves on this issue."

Sea Chantey Concert at Lifesaving Museum

Jerry Bryant is welcomed back for the Hull Lifesaving Museum's third annual Summer Sea Chantey Concert at 7 p.m., Thursday, July 31 at the museum, 1117 Nantasket Ave. Bryant is a national authority on music of the sea who will play the guitar, banjo, concertina, and other acoustic instruments. His repertoire includes hundreds of traditional and contemporary folk songs, with particular interest in the music of sailors. Jerry enjoys giving audiences a glimpse of our maritime heritage through the songs he presents.

There will be a special children's afternoon concert at 2 p.m. Open to all children. Admission to the children's concert is free.

The General Audience Summer Sea Chantey Concert will be at 7 p.m. on the Museum Lawn. Bring a blanket and a picnic supper and enjoy a musical family evening to be remembered. A $5 donation is suggested.

All galleries, exhibits, and the museum store will be open for the evening. For more information please contact Victoria Stevens at 781-925-5433.

OBITUARY

Robert V. Laney

Robert Vanderlin Laney, 86, died June 21, 2003, of complications from a stroke in Palm City, Fla.

Mr. Laney lived in Duxbury, and Palm City, Fla.

Born to Leon and Ethel Laney in 1916, he grew up in Fort Worth, Texas and graduated in 1939 from the U.S. Naval Academy. He received a Master's degree in Naval Architecture and Marine Engineering from MIT in 1944.

In 1948 Mr. Laney became an early member of the U.S. Navy's Nuclear Power Program headed by Rear Admiral Hyman George Rickover, which led to the development of the USS Nautilus, the world's first nuclear powered submarine. In 1954 he was assigned by the Navy to represent the Atomic Energy Commission during construction of a reactor prototype for the production of electricity. After retiring from the Navy in 1959 with the rank of Captain, Mr. Laney became the assistant manager of the Bethlehem Steel shipyard in Quincy. In this position he supervised construction of the first two nuclear powered naval surface ships - the USS Long Beach and the USS Bainbridge. When the shipyard was sold to General Dynamics in 1962, he became the General Manage.

From 1970 to 1979 he was Director of Operations for Argonne National Laboratory, Chicago, Ill., overseeing the development of the Breeder Reactor Program. He received an MBA from the University of Chicago during this period. Following that, he became a consultant to the nuclear power industry.

In addition to his work career, Mr. Laney was a talented and well received watercolor painter, an avid tennis player and a voracious reader of history and current events.

Family was a very important part of Mr. Laney's life. He leaves his devoted wife Dorothy (Bayliss) of 61 years, his five children, Christina Rifkin, Robert B., Thomas W., Peter L., Beth Hope Laney, and his brother Thomas J. Laney of Austin, Texas. He was a loving "Ol'Da" to Robert, Hope, Joel, Rachel, Jessica, Andrew, Laura, Benjamin, Daniel, Stephen, Hope, Chloe, Schuyler, Samuel, Emory, Olivia and six great-grandchildren.

A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m., Aug. 15 at St. John the Evangelist Church, 410 Washington St., Duxbury.

Contributions may be made to the charity of your choice.

TRINITY GRADUATE

Morgan Sandell, son of James and Nancy Sandell, graduated from Trinity College in Hartford, Conn. with a bachelor of arts degree. Morgan majored in art history and was co-captain on the men's soccer team. Super news, Morgan.

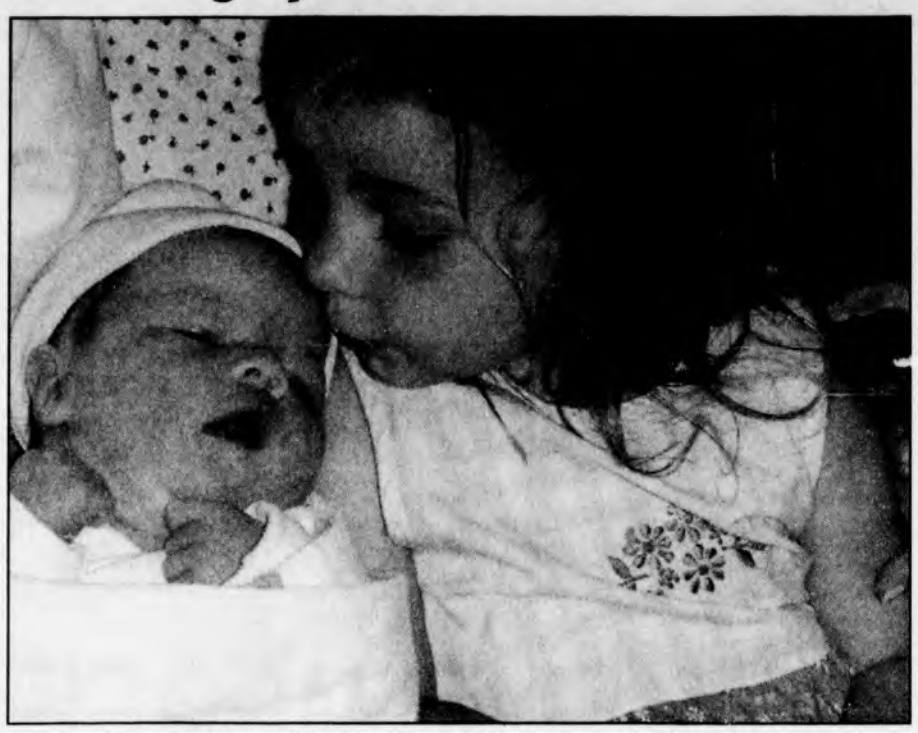
COMMENDED LIST

Zoe Murray has been named to the commended list for the second semester at Tabor Academy. Zoe is the daughter of Richard Murray and Deborah Meehan. Zoe had to have an overall average of 80 or above to achieve this honor. Keep up the great work next year Zoe.

MARY WALSH KRAFT FUND

The Mary Walsh Kraft Fund is still open and will be until Sept. 1, 2003. Mary, a CHS graduate is fighting the battle of her life with her husband Dean (also a CHS graduate) by her side. Mary has two young children and so many family and friends who care for her so much and prayers are being said by all. Here is a message that is being sent out to all who contributed to a fundraiser held last week in Mary's honor. "WOW! All of you should be so very proud of yourselves. Each one of you has made a difference with your contributions both private and public. It has been absolutely moving and uplifting to follow the open hearts from our town. Lots of love and sincere thanks to all that contributed to the Mary Kraft Fund. Sincerely, Mary's Friends."

Anyone who would like to donate funds can do so by sending donations to The Mary Walsh Kraft Fund, c/o Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, 48 South Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.



Caroline Marie Patterson, with her big sister, Kaitlyn. Caroline arrived June 30.

LAW IN LONDON

Jason McCaffery, 619 Jerusalem Road, a graduate student majoring in law at Syracuse University's College of Law, participated in the "Law in London" (England) program this summer. Syracuse University offers 30 academic programs in 12 different countries each summer for undergraduate and graduate students. What a wonderful experience to have, Jason.

DEAN'S LIST

Ethan M. Begley (class of '04), son of Mr. and Mrs. Kevin J. Begley of 455 Beechwood St. and Jessica E. Stevens ('03), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Stevens of 86 Beach St. have been named to the dean's list for the spring semester at Assumption College in Worcester.

Jared Ford and Katherine Ronan have been named to the dean's list for the spring semester at Roger Williams University in Bristol, R.I.

DAY LILY TIME

Our observant man around town reminds us that this is "Day Lily" time and the very expendable orange blooms are gracing many yards and gardens around town. At least two notable examples are along North Main Street, one being in front of #67 and the other beside #271. And there are other big patches, one being on Jerusalem Road just before the junction with Atlantic Avenue. You'll have to hurry to enjoy them because, after all, each bloom lasts only one day!

THOREAU RETURNS TO HULL

In July 1851, famous author and naturalist, Henry David Thoreau visited Hull on his way to Plymouth Harbor. He wrote of his experience in his journal and in his book, "Cape Cod."

On Saturday, July 26, join Richard Smith of the Concord Museum and local Hull historians to retrace some of Thoreau's footsteps on an informative and memorable living history walk. Meet Mr. Thoreau at Pemberton Pier at noon for a walk of a 2.5-mile loop around historic Hull Village with stops at Fort Revere Park, the Hull Cemetery, Stony Beach and the Hull Public Library.

Along the way, Mr. Thoreau will offer stories of his journey, a variety of readings from his literary works and an insight to the personality that helped shape the Transcendental Movement in this country.

This program is sponsored by the Fort Revere Park and Preservation Society, the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation, the Hull Cultural Council and the Friends of the Hull Public Library.

The program is free and everyone is welcome. For more information and directions, call the Fort Revere Park at 617-727-4468.

HARVARD GRADS

Taylor S. Devin, Justin D. Golden and Benjamin T. Littauer have graduated from Harvard College.

Taylor, who attended the Noble and Greenough School, is the son of Robert P. Devin and Sheila Sullivan. At Harvard, Taylor concentrated in government and graduated with a bachelor's degree.

Justin, who attended Cohasset High School, is the son of Amy and Steven Golden, M.D. Justin concentrated in biology and graduated cum laude with a bachelor's degree.

Ben, who also attended Cohasset High School, is the son of Thomas W. and Theresa A. Littauer. He concentrated philosophy and graduated cum laude with a bachelor's degree. Congratulations to all these fine students.

That is all for this week. Even though it is summer, please send in all your news about vacations, former Cohasset residents who may be visiting or who you may go see and all of those Happy Birthdays and Anniversaries that are happening. All news should get to me no later than Mondays at noon.

Sets take center stage

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

This story is third in a series, outlining the process from start to finish, of producing children's theater. The Children's Drama Workshop, founded by the Deveney sisters, Beth, Grace and Sarah, is in its 15th year.

Tyler Rosen works on the beanstalk, which is part of the set of the Children's Drama Workshop upcoming original production, "Jack Beanstalk."

One of the first things you notice when the curtain goes up on a theater production is the set. It can transport you to another world in an instant, which is what set designer Tyler Rosen hopes his design does for this year's Children's Drama Workshop production of "Jack Beanstalk."

During the 15 years the Deveney sisters have been doing summer productions, eldest sister Sarah has always filled the role of set designer, but her wedding on the Fourth of July had Beth and Grace looking elsewhere for set inspiration. Luckily, Rosen was up for the task.

The sisters met Rosen through a mutual friend last March and instantly believed he was the man for the job. For the past six years, he has been working on sets in New York City. He has served as "prop master" on various music videos, including one by rap star Jay-Z, and has also dressed the sets of "lots of feature films," but this is one of his first stage experiences.

At the beginning of the summer, Rosen met with all three Deveney sisters to come up with a rough plan for what the set would entail. Beth said she was surprised and excited to see that Sarah and Rosen had very similar ideas for the set, which is going to help carry things forward smoothly.

"Even though I'm the designer, it's really their vision," Rosen said, adding that Sarah provided many ideas for the giant beanstalk as well as other aspects of the set.

"He's very enthusiastic and excited about what he's doing, which is giving the staff good energy," Beth said. "It's worked out really well."

"He's very knowledgeable and it's interesting working with a new person," Grace said.

While working with theater sets is new to Rosen, he said he's been enjoying every minute of it.

"It's nice to be able to leave the city for a month," he said. "It's way more laid back."

He also said that working with children is very gratifying because they "get so pumped up when they see the set."

But working with children also has some challenges. Rosen has had to try making scenery and props out of lightweight materials so the children can move them easily when they need to. He has used lots of cardboard on this set, including boxes and carpet rolls.

"We have to be crafty and creative," he said.

Also, the play calls for two "worlds" because it begins in the town where Jack lives, and transitions to a world in the clouds at the top of a magic, giant beanstalk he said he "hopes will grow."

"Beth has written an ambitious play," he said.

But the sisters are completely confident in Rosen's ability to construct the perfect set for their production.

"I never have a vision for the set. It's so great to hand it over to someone else," Beth said.

As the stage manager, Grace is always trying to make sure certain props reflect the personality of the character who is using them. She said Rosen has been really great about trying to learn the characters and help design different pieces of the set accordingly. He has even redesigned props almost entirely, just to make the scene believable for the character.

Overall, Rosen said he has had a very positive experience in designing the set and has enjoyed the challenges it has presented. He is very excited for its completion and can't wait for the kids to see it.

"I think the kids are going to be totally stoked," he said.

Performances for "Jack Beanstalk" will be held Aug. 5 at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. and Aug. 6 at 1 p.m. and 7 p.m. at the new air conditioned Deer Hill Auditorium. Tickets are $10. To reserve tickets in advance, please call Cohasset Town Hall at (781) 383-4109.

Taking the sting out

According to the Department of Public Health, we are entering prime time for West Nile Virus. The highest risk for being exposed to the virus runs from now through September.

While there is no human vaccine for the virus, the DPH offers ways to protect yourself to keep mosquitoes from biting you and recommendations to limit mosquitoes from breeding in your backyard or neighborhood.

West Nile virus has become a growing concern here on the South Shore over the past three years. While the risk to residents in considered minimal, the DPH has taken an aggressive approach to making sure the public is informed about the disease. WNV can cause illness varying from a mild fever to more serious disease like encephalitis or meningitis. WNV grows in birds and is spread from bird to bird by infected mosquitoes. If mosquitoes infected with the virus bite horses or humans, the animal or person can become sick. Most WNV infections do not cause any symptoms. Mild WNV infections can cause fever, headache and body aches, often with a skin rash and swollen lymph glands. In a small percentage of people infected by the virus, the disease can be serious, even fatal. More severe infections can cause headache, high fever, neck stiffness, stupor, disorientation, coma, tremors, convulsions, paralysis and, sometimes, death.

The following tips are provided by the Department of Public Health to help residents protect themselves from the source — mosquitoes:

- Avoid outdoor activities between dusk and dawn, if possible, as this is the time of greatest mosquito activity.
- If you must be outdoors when mosquitoes are active, wear a long-sleeved shirt and long pants. Use a mosquito repellent that contains DEET (the chemical N-N-diethyl-meta-toluamide) and follow the directions on the label. DEET can be poisonous if overused. Never use DEET on infants. Avoid using repellents with DEET concentrations above 10-15% for children and with concentrations above 30-35% for adults. Higher concentrations of DEET may provide protection for a longer period of time, but do not provide a higher level of protection. If you are concerned about exposures to chemicals, use the lowest concentration of DEET which provides protection for the length of time you will be exposed to mosquitoes, and wash your skin when you return indoors.
- Cream, lotion or stick formulas are best for use on skin. Avoid products with high amounts of alcohol because these may be absorbed through the skin.
- Take special care to cover up the arms and legs of children playing outdoors. When you bring a baby outdoors, cover the baby's carriage or playpen with mosquito netting.
- Fix any holes in your screens and make sure they are tightly attached to all your doors and windows.

To reduce the number of mosquitoes around your home and neighborhood, the Department of Public Health offers the following suggestions:

- Get rid of any standing water that is available for mosquito breeding. Mosquitoes will begin to breed in any puddle or standing water that lasts for more than four days.
- Dispose of or regularly empty any metal cans, plastic containers, ceramic pots, and other water holding containers (including trash cans) on your property.
- Pay special attention to discarded tires that may have collected on your property. Stagnant water in tires is a common place for mosquitoes to breed.
- Drill holes in the bottom of recycling containers that are left outdoors, so that water can drain out.
- Clean clogged roof gutters; remove leaves and debris that may prevent drainage of rainwater.
- Turn over plastic wading pools and wheelbarrows when not in use.
- Do not allow water to stagnate in birdbaths; aerate ornamental ponds or stock them with fish.
- Keep swimming pools clean and properly chlorinated; remove standing water from pool covers.
- Use landscaping to eliminate standing water that collects on your property.

For more information on West Nile Virus, log on to the Department of Public Health's Web site at www.state.ma.us/dph

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sailing Club

TO THE EDITOR:

Founded in 1960, the Cohasset Sailing Club is a non-profit organization, providing first-class instruction in the sport of sailing to children and adults alike. Over the past 40 years, thousands of Cohasset children and adults have participated in the many programs offered by CSC.

The club is most appreciative of the recent grant contributed by the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc. Their continued generosity will enrich the Sailing Club's many educational programs and provide the "gift" of sailing to the children of Cohasset.

Thanks again to the South Shore Playhouse Associates and our very best wishes to the Music Circus for a very successful season.

Consignment Shop

TO THE EDITOR:

I have been a volunteer at the Cohasset Consignment Shop for 40 years. I have seen the shop grow from a small one-room operation located at the old railroad station into a beautiful successful boutique.

Over the years the shop has been able to contribute generously to the operation of the Cohasset Social Service League. The financial success of the Cohasset Consignment Shop is entirely due to Andi Merrill, Colleen Roth, and the volunteers.

Andi Merrill's expertise in retail management, hard work, and dedicated interest in the shop and the volunteers has made the shop what it is today. It has been a labor of love. It is difficult for me to understand that while the Social Service League is trying to redefine its purpose for existence, why they would interfere with the successful management of the shop that has existed for 50 years. Andi and Colleen's resignation hurts!

League's micro management

TO THE EDITOR

The most preposterous development in our 20 years in Cohasset happened this week when the Social Service League allowed the termination of the management team of Andrea Merrill and Colleen Roth at the Cohasset Consignment Shop. Talk about killing the goose that lays the golden eggs! Andi and Colleen and the 133 volunteers have a beautiful, productive shop and a smoothly running organization, evolved over five decades without micro-management by any league. We volunteers are stunned by the "our way or no way " attitude of the current league.

Bump-out vote

BOARD OF SELECTMEN

With the controversy regarding those ridiculous "bump-outs" growing by the day, why don't you, as the governing body for the town, exercise some democracy and put the whole thing to town-wide vote! That would be the only fair way to resolve this issue.

Edwin Lincoln
17 Sohier St.

Mr. Lincoln provided The Mariner with a copy of his letter.

Merrill, Roth will be missed

TO THE EDITOR:

For 50 years, the Cohasset Consignment Shop has been in business as a non-profit organization, staffed by volunteers, with all profits going to fund the programs of the Social Service League of Cohasset. From a modest beginning, the shop has grown into a widely acclaimed operation, winning top honors in its class in the Mariner's annual readers' "Best Of" polls. Recently the president and board of directors of the Social Service League, in a misguided and short-sighted effort to fix something that is not broken, have taken steps that have led to the resignations of Andrea Merrill, the manager of the Consignment Shop, and Colleen Roth, the treasurer of the shop.

Andi has been the manager of the business for more than 20 years and had no desire to retire. She has been the mainstay of the shop and was almost single-handedly responsible for transforming it into the congenial, highly-successful, professional operation it is today. I am dismayed at the actions of the board of directors, and appalled that the president of the League has publicly announced that all efforts at mediation were rebuffed. On the contrary, no sincere attempts to resolve the situation were made, and the resignations were inevitable.

Now the Consignment Shop customers, consignors, and volunteers have lost a dedicated manager and treasurer and they are angry!

POLITICAL NOTES

Republican meeting, cookout are planned

All are invited to the Cohasset Republican Town Committee meeting at 7:30 p.m. on July 29 at the Lightkeeper's Cottage. This is a good opportunity to come and meet fellow Republicans and discuss events on the state and local level.

Mark your calendar for Sunday, Aug. 17, for the annual Cohasset Republican Cookout which will be at the seaside home of Julie Guild from 4:30-7:30 p.m.. Special guest this year will be Mickey Edwards, the former Congressman from Oklahoma, who is currently a professor at the Kennedy School of Government and the Harvard University Law School. For reservations and further information call Heather Palmer at 781-383-3339.

Access to extremity MRI

State Sen. Robert L. Hedlund, R-Weymouth, and State Rep. Mark J. Carron, D-Southbridge, have filed legislation and presented testimony on their plan to eliminate restrictions on what types of facilities may purchase and operate certain types of Magnetic Resonance Imagers (MRIs) in Massachusetts. If passed, this change in the law will allow access to a diagnostic tool that is available in 45 other states and has become standard practice throughout the health-care industry for a large number of injuries, yet it is prohibited in Massachusetts.

"The current regulations were implemented when MRI technology was cutting edge and extremely expensive," Hedlund said. "Due to increasing demand and improved technology, imager costs have come down significantly and it is now practical for treating physicians to offer in-house MRI services."

The legislation is endorsed by the Massachusetts Orthopedic Association and is supported by small clinic facilities, as it will enable them to purchase and operate the new, smaller MRI imagers that cost around $450,000 and are used primarily for extremities — knees, ankles, shoulders, etc.

HEALTH NOTES

Caring about the master plan process

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In May, we looked at possible build-out scenarios for the Town and their effect on the health of its citizens. At recent meetings of the Growth and Development Committee, many of the concerns of the town are being addressed. This is a brief report on the progress observed.

We have spoken of the Growth and Development Committee before and the good work that group is doing reviewing the bylaws of other towns, selecting for consideration those which seem to fit the needs of Cohasset. Numerous public meetings of this committee have been held to discuss various issues such as house size, open space, zoning, wastewater treatment, and many other issues in our changing town. But as Rick Swanborg, the chairman has said, this is a work in progress and the committee feels that it is close to having document which will answer many of the Town's concerns. The Cohasset master plan is nearing completion.

A plan is just a piece of paper and without broad understanding and review, it will wither for lack of interest.

Most Town boards have seen and commented on parts of the plan which apply to them, and descriptions of regulations and warrant articles have been published for discussion. Implementation of the parts of this plan will cover several years, eventually resulting in a coherent set of bylaws, regulations and ways of doing business which hopefully will reflect the citizens desires to enable the Town achieve the goal of preserving its character.

Regulations are elastic. A continuous stream of interpretations stretches their intent. Changing ideas alter their meaning. It's nearly impossible to alter regulations as fast as necessary to preserve their intent. It would be desirable to have a system that's as flexible as it is incorruptible. A plan is just a piece of paper and without broad understanding and review, it will wither for lack of interest. Fortunately, Cohasset's answer to this problem is a large cadre of dedicated persons for which the preservation of Cohasset's values is a mission. They almost never agree. Frequently, they're ignorant of important facts. Nevertheless, they are our salvation as a town. Growth and development's master plan containing information provided by consultants and investigations of other towns, is producing regulations and methods which promise a series of gradual changes, all discussed and, if necessary, approved by the Town to preserve Cohasset's unique character. For these people, the master plan is a roadmap of sorts which will hopefully provide solutions to the town's concerns. Learn about what this group is doing and give them your input. Change is best accomplished slowly, and in the daylight.

"Sandscapes" — A show of contemporary landscape photographs by Cynthia Vallino will be on display through Aug. 23 at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The show includes photographs of the sand "spit" area off of Third Cliff in Scituate, as well as other coastal areas on the South Shore. The show also includes images from the White Sands National Monument in Alamogordo, New Mexico, an area renowned for its expansive white sand dunes.

According to Vallino, "Many of the photographs in this show are abstract images, and quite different from typical seaside landscapes. They're really a study of the wide variation in textures, colors and patterns found in coastal areas. Sand is the perfect medium for seeing the results of dynamic changes along the coast — the landscape is constantly changing."

Vallino's photographs have been selected for numerous juried exhibitions in Southern New England, and her work has received awards and honorable mention in several shows. In 2002, she was selected as a gallery artist at the South Shore Art Center. She has also served as co-chair of the juried photography show at the North River Art Association's Festival of Arts in Marshfield Hills.

The disposing of disposable income

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I don't care how Alan Greenspan, George (43) Bush and Rush Lumbaugh try to spin it. I say we're in the midst of a depression and I can prove it.

Didn't Jack Kennedy's boxer shorts sell for only $5,000 at auction the other day?

It seems like only yesterday that Ty Cobb's false teeth went to a collector for $7,475 and Bill Veeck's wooden leg was knocked down for $15,000 at auction.

If the measure of prosperity is the amount of disposable income in the hands of the little people then the little people are disposing less of it on collecting memorabilia and more on such frivolous things as food, shelter and clothing.

At the same auction where JFK's shorts drew the $5,000 bid, several of his wife Jackie's nightgowns went for between $450 and $850 and one of her bathing suits cost a lucky bidder $750.

It wasn't that long ago that the beaded dress into which Marilyn Monroe was sewn in May, 1962, when she moaned "Happy Birthday, Mr. President" to Jack Kennedy at his Madison Square Garden birthday party was sold for $1,267,500.

I have been fascinated by the manner in which folks dispose of their disposable income ever since I caught the actor Charlie Sheen paying $92,000 for the baseball that went between Bill Buckner's legs in the sixth game of the 1986 World Series.

I sat dumfounded as the Honus Wagner baseball card, the only one of its kind, that Piedmont Cigarettes put out in 1910 went from $451,000 in 1991 to $640,500 in 1996 to $1.1 million only three years ago, a better than 100 per cent profit in less than 10 years.

I all but wept at the injustice of it all when the basketball Wilt Chamberlain used to score his 100th point in a game was sold for $551,841, then was marked down to only $67,795 after research showed that it wasn't the historic ball but one used later in the game.

I went right along when collectibles moved from the sports to the news pages.

The blue velvet dress worn by Princess Diana to a 1985 White House dinner where she danced with John Travolta was sold for a the-record $222,500. Elvis Presley's sixth grade report card went for $20,000. Jackie O's fake pearl necklace took in $211,500.

My resolve was shaken a bit when I learned that bidding on a wad of used chewing gum, masticated in the very mouth of Arizona Diamondback's shortstop Luis Gonzalez, had reached $10,000 on E-Bay before cooler heads prevailed and it was withdrawn.

Three bone chips from the pitching elbow of Seattle Mariner relief pitcher Jeff Nelson had reached $23,600 before it too was withdrawn by E-Bay as a violation of the auction firm's policy against selling body parts.

This after a promo that read: "These are the real deal. Now is your chance to own not only a piece of the game but a piece of the player."

In a way I'm rather glad that Nelson's bones and JFK's shorts have cooled my interest in memorabilia collecting.

Now if someone will put Monica's blue dress on the block . . .

Some questions — some answers, anatomical and amazing

A BIRDERS EYE VIEW

JOANNE C. NORTON

Have you ever wondered why birds can stand on electrical wires without getting electrocuted? Electricity follows the path of least resistance. It is easier for electricity to continue moving along a wire than to detour through the bird's body. This situation changes dramatically if the bird touches a pole or transformer box and the wire at the same time. Then the path of least resistance changes to be through the bird's body to the ground. Once the electricity goes through the bird's body, the bird is doomed. This is more apt to happen when large birds such as hawks flap their wings while standing too close to the transformer, thus inadvertently connecting with the ground. Small birds can easily perch along the wire without touching something which is grounded.

Have you ever wondered why birds don't fall off a branch when they go to sleep? Birds look as if they are walking on feet, but in actual fact they are walking on their toes. When they land on a branch, their legs flex, or bend. As this happens, flexor tendons automatically tighten, causing the toes to close around the branch. They stay tightened until the bird extends its legs, at which point the toes open. This mechanism allows the bird to relax and sleep without fear of falling off the branch.

Have you ever wondered how birds find the seeds or acorns they have hidden? Some birds, especially jays, chickadees, titmice and nuthatches, hide seeds, acorns and nuts to be retrieved at a later date. This is known as caching. Birds that cache have a larger hippocampus in the brain than birds that do not cache. Not only that, but this caching area of the brain actually increases in size when a bird is in the process of caching. When this portion of the brain was removed in a chickadee, the chickadee could still cache seeds, but could no longer find them after they had been hidden.

Have you ever wondered why some birds start singing earlier in the morning than others? Birds sing to attract mates and to defend territory, but singing also alerts predators. Therefore birds do not want to sing until they can see well enough to spot any predators. Once it is light enough to find food, they would rather concentrate on eating than singing. Bigger eyes should provide better eyesight. So goes the theory. A recent study by some British researchers shows this theory to be true. They recorded light levels, then noted when 57 different bird species began singing in the morning, and measured the diameter of each bird's exposed eye surface. When they compared birds of the same size, the ones with bigger eyes sang earlier. They also found that small birds sing earlier than large birds. Perhaps this is because small birds cannot store as much food overnight and therefore need to find food sooner in the day.

Have you ever wondered how hawks can find prey from great heights? Birds have very large eyes, often weighing more than their brain. Humans have binocular vision, but birds have both monocular and binocular vision. Rods and cones, or receptors, are found in something called a fovea in the retina. Humans have one fovea in each eye, but some birds have two, one used in looking forward and one used in looking sideways. Because of their greater concentrations of rods and cones, birds have greater visual acuity than humans. In fact, some raptors are able to spot prey from as much as a mile away. Hawks and other raptors also have excellent "accommodation", which means that they can rapidly change focus and judge distances by changing the curvature of the eye lens as they fly swiftly or change direction abruptly.

Have you ever wondered how owls can find their prey in the dark? The eyes of owls are the largest of any bird. Owl eyes are located in the front of the head, creating a large area of binocular vision, but not very much peripheral vision. Instead the owl can rotate its head 270-1/4 (not 360-1/4 as some people think). Owl eyes also have very large concentrations of rods to increase light-gathering capabilities. When owls hunt in the dark, as most do, they rely on their ears more than their eyes. Most owls have asymmetrical ears. In other words, the ear opening on one side of its head will be higher than the ear opening on the other side. This allows the owl to triangulate on its prey. An owl's ears are not the feather tufts seen on the top of some owl heads. The ears are found behind a facial disk of feathers shaped like a satellite dish. This disk helps funnel sound to the ears for increased sound volume. Owl flight feathers are serrated on the leading edge allowing it to fly silently. Put all this together and the poor mouse does not have much chance!

Red-tailed hawk hunting.

Have you ever wondered how woodpeckers withstand the force to their brains when they are hammering away at a tree? They use their strong chisel-shaped bills to create holes in tree trunks. According to David Juhasz in Creation magazine, each time the bill connects with the tree, it is with a force 1000 times the force of gravity, and the rate of the hammering is almost twice as fast as a submachine gun. To keep from damaging its head and brain, the woodpecker has extra bone to reinforce the cranium. It also has special sponge-like material between the beak and the skull surrounding the brain to act as a shock absorber. Its neck muscles are strong and are specially designed to keep the neck from twisting, another mechanism to help withstand the shock.

These are just a few of the interesting questions that can be asked about bird structure and behavior.

included on the state cherry sheet before.

At the end of the day, this leaves the town with a deficit of roughly $322,000.

While the town has always paid for students who attend the charter school, the way the bill has been paid allowed for more flexibility. "Free cash," which is funds brought in by the town in excess of what the budget estimated, was used to pay the tuition charges. However, at the beginning of the fiscal year, those funds are not available.

Haddad added because the town just paid the tuition a few months ago and is now expected to pay again, the town is essentially being charged twice in a four-month period, which is "like taking a swing at you and then hitting you when you're down."

The amount of money the town needs to come up with may seem small in comparison to what goes on at the state level, but is of great significance to a small town like Cohasset.

"It boggles my mind that people in Boston are doing this," Haddad said. "People in state government don't understand what it takes to run a municipality."

Haddad said he knew the town would have to pay the tuition fees for the charter schools eventually, and even agrees that "what they're doing makes sense, but not this year." When you cut so much funding in a year, it's hard for a town to be able to make such a huge payment so soon into the new fiscal year.

Haddad said he is aiming to find ways to tackle the $322,000 deficit by the end of July or beginning of August before the new fiscal year gets too far underway.

Although only 14 students are now slated to attend the South Shore Charter School, the town is being charged charter school tuition for 17 children. Rebecca Holmes of the Department of Education's Charter School office, said 17 reflects the school's initial estimate, given by the pre-enrollment report in April. When the actual numbers come in after the start of school, the town's payment will be changed accordingly, she said.

While the town will be eventually reimbursed for the students who don't attend, Haddad said getting a reimbursement later in the year doesn't help the town come up with the money now.

Haddad also believes the current system of making the towns pay tuition for charter schools is "inherently unfair." At a tuition rate of roughly $7,800 for each child, the town must pay more than $109,000 for the 14 that will attend – a figure that makes a dent in the budget during these tight fiscal times. But because the small number of students is spread out over the grades — if the students stayed in Cohasset schools there would be minimal impact on the school's current budget, he said.

About the charter school

The South Shore Charter School, which is housed in three buildings located on A Street, Samoset Avenue and Nantasket Avenue in Hull, was created to offer students in grades K-12 an alternative to attending town public schools.

According to the state Department of Education, charter schools were formed as a result of the 1993 Massachusetts Education Reform Act. Their purpose is to hold schools accountable for student achievement, offer parents more choices, and develop innovative school models. Teachers in charter schools must either be certified or have passed the Massachusetts educator test.

Charter schools are public and have no eligibility requirements. However, students must apply for a position in their class. Students entering grades K-7 must submit an application which includes a letter explaining their reason for applying and what the parents will do to help the education of their child, along with a one-page enrollment form. For students entering grades 8-12, the same information must be completed as well as a résumé and letter written by the student explaining why he or she is interested in attending the school.

Every February, a public enrollment lottery is held and students are given tours of the school in which they are interested. Index cards containing the names, towns, grade, and whether the child has a sibling at the particular charter school, are publicly drawn, starting with kindergarten. Siblings are given preference and drawn first.

Students from the local region are then given preference. Communities in the South Shore Charter School region include Abington, Boston, Braintree, Brockton, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hanson, Hingham, Kingston, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth, Plympton, Quincy, Randolph, Rockland, Scituate, Weymouth, and Whitman.

When a student's name is drawn, he or she is provided with an intent-to-attend form, which is completed before the April pre-enrollment deadline. Those numbers are then sent to the towns as an estimate for the tuition that will have to be paid.

Initial estimates from pre-enrollment showed 17 children for the town of Cohasset would attend, but more recent figures from the SSCS show there will be 14 Cohasset residents in attendance this fall.

Information was complied from both the DOE and SSCS web sites.

Preservation money for new playground not a slam dunk

Project asks for $60K from CPF

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Plans to start building a new playground behind the Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum off Sohier Street may have to wait while the Community Preservation Committee considers whether it will recommend funding for the project.

Members of Project Playground, a committee of Our World, came before the CPC this week, and asked for $60,000 to help build a play structure, behind the museum in the area where the former Osgood Play Park stood. They are asking for $60,000 to help cover the costs and feel the project falls under the spending guidelines of the Community Preservation Act, because it is a recreational facility. [The old playground was razed in October 2001 for safety reasons].

The playground is estimated to cost $125,000, and $35,000 has been raised to date. The playground committee has three fundraising events planned over the next few months which should bring in at least $12,000, members said.

But CPC member Tom Callahan said even if money were used from the Community Preservation Fund, he was concerned about the group's ability to raise the rest of the money.

"You're asking for 50 percent of the project funding, and you haven't even completed fund raising," he said.

Callahan said he has a problem, when private groups ask for money, then try to complete fundraising and don't make the amount they expected. Groups in turn have come back to "treat us like we're a piggy-bank," when funding doesn't work out, he said.

But playground committee members see a real need for a park such as this, and believe it would be a great cause for the CPC to support.

"With everything we have in this town, this is the one thing that is missing," said committee member Suzanne Trnka.

She said many families have to go to neighboring towns to use their play structures because Cohasset doesn't have the facilities. With the South Shore Community Center playground geared toward children from ages two to five, this new playground would have something for everyone. Picnic benches, chess and checker tables as well as playground equipment would help "create a nice place for families to gather," Trnka said.

The town already has plans to fix the basketball courts which are next to the playground.

July 14-18

Senator Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth)

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham)

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for over 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975. THE HOUSE AND SENATE: BHRC records local representatives' votes on seven roll calls and local senators' votes on four roll calls from the week of July 14-18. Many of the roll call votes are on legislative action surrounding Gov. Romney's overrides of items in the $22.1 billion fiscal 2004 state budget.

BREAST CANCER PREVENTION (H 4004)
House 142-15, Senate 39-1, override Gov. Romney's $35,678 veto reduction (from $3,029,488 to $2,993,810) in funding for an early breast cancer detection program, mammographies for the uninsured and a breast cancer detection public awareness program. Override supporters said every dollar counts when it comes to a program that can save the lives of countless women. Override opponents said the program can survive this minor cut and noted that some small cuts like this one have to be made in order to balance the budget and prevent a tax hike or cuts in other programs. (A "Yea" vote is for the $35,678. A "Nay" vote is against the $35,678).

PROSTATE CANCER PREVENTION (H 4004)
House 153-4, Senate 40-0, override Gov. Romney's veto of the entire $1 million for a prostate cancer screening, education and treatment program. Override supporters said one out of every five men will get prostate cancer and argued the $1 million will help save lives. Override opponents said the entire state budget is $200 million out of balance and argued that cuts in good programs are necessary during troubled economic times. (A "Yea" vote is for the $1 million. A "Nay" vote is against the $1 million).

SMOKING PREVENTION AND CESSATION (H 4004)
House 135-22, Senate 35-5, override Gov. Romney's $835,000 veto reduction (from $2.535 million to $1.7 million) for smoking prevention and cessation programs. Override supporters said the additional money would reduce smoking and save countless lives. They noted these programs have lead to an overall 35 percent decrease in smoking including a 50 percent decrease among pregnant women and 40 percent among eighth graders. Override opponents said the program can easily survive this minor cut. They argued that the anti-smoking lobby has created a large bureaucracy that wastes some of these funds on ineffective, expensive television ads and novelty items. (A "Yea" vote is for the $835,000. A "Nay" vote is against the $835,000).

DEAF AND HARD OF HEARING (H 4004)
House 137-20, Senate 38-2, override Gov. Romney's $128,235 veto reduction (from $4,929,536 to $4,801,301) in funding for the operation of and services provided by the Massachusetts Commission for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing. Override supporters said this important government agency is the chief advocate for the state's 560,000 deaf and hard of hearing Massachusetts residents. They noted the cut would hurt the commission's job of coordinating programs and regulations to provide full and equal opportunity for these residents. Override opponents said the commission can operate well with this small reduction. They argued that small cuts must be made to many good programs in order to balance the budget and prevent tax hikes or cuts in other programs. (A "Yea" vote is for the $128,235. A "Nay" vote is against the $128,235).

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT PLAN (H 3950)
House 143-10, gave near final approval to and sent to the Senate for action an economic development plan funded by $110 million from the state's Health Care Security Trust Fund. The trust fund includes money the state received from its settlement with tobacco companies. Provisions include providing $55 million for the Emerging Technology Fund, $25 million for the Massachusetts Technology Park Corporation; $15 million for creation of the John Adams Institute for Innovation, Technology and Collaboration; and $8 million for the Brownfields Redevelopment Fund. The package also makes permanent the three percent investment tax credit. Supporters said the bill would stimulate the economy and create jobs through a multi-faceted, innovation-friendly plan designed to make one-time investments in emerging technologies through loans and grants to private sector companies. They said the package would make the state friendlier to business and be a real shot in the arm for the state's economy. Opponents said the package helps only businesses and does not include guarantees that jobs will be created. They argued that it drains money from the Health Care Security Trust Fund that was supposed to fund health and anti-tobacco programs. Some argued that the bill is anti-environment and includes a provision giving polluters like W.R. Grace and General Electric permanent liability release from future lawsuits if they quickly clean up their sites. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against the bill).

MUST PROVIDE HEALTH INSURANCE TO EMPLOYEES (H 3950)
House 48-104, rejected an amendment providing that grants or loans under the proposed economic development plan only go to companies that agree to provide health insurance to their employees. Amendment supporters said the economic development plan is unfairly and unwisely funded from the Health Care Trust Fund that is supposed to fund health care programs. They argued that it makes sense to at least require that any companies that receive grants or loans be responsible and caring companies that provide health insurance to their employees. Amendment opponents said the amendment is a well intentioned but misguided one. They argued it would be very difficult for many of these start-up companies to offer health insurance to all their employees. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment requiring the companies to provide health insurance. A "Nay" vote is against the amendment).

PERMANENT THREE PERCENT INVESTMENT TAX CREDIT (H 3950)
House 139-13, approved an amendment making permanent the current temporary three percent investment tax credit. Amendment supporters said this credit is great for the economy and creates jobs by helping to attract new companies to the state and encouraging existing ones to remain here by spurring investment in new buildings, manufacturing and research and development. They noted that the tax revenue loss would be offset by a growth in property, income and corporate excise taxes. Amendment opponents said the extension would cost millions in revenue that the state cannot afford to lose and argued these millions could be better used to fund important state programs. They argued studies have shown this tax credit has no positive effect on employment and may in fact cause unemployment by encouraging automation. (A "Yea" vote is for making permanent the three percent investment tax credit. A "Nay" vote is against making it permanent).

Callahan said he recalled when the museum signed its lease, part of the condition was, it would build a playground. But in a telephone interview Town Manager Mark Haddad said conditions of the lease do include the installation of a playground, as well as completion of landscaping, but said there are no limitations or guidelines for how projects might be funded.

"There's nothing in this lease that says they can't ask," Haddad said.

The CPC is also concerned spending guidelines under the Community Preservation Act don't cover building a playground.

Guidelines state funds can be used for the acquisition, preservation and rehabilitation of land for recreational use. The Little League fields, in which the CPC has invested roughly $150,000, did qualify for funding, but the playground area is not such a clear-cut case, the CPC said.

Under the Community Preservation Act, 10 percent of the monies accumulated in a town's Community Preservation Fund must go toward preserving open space, another 10 percent toward historic preservation, and 10 percent toward community housing. The remaining 70 percent can be spent for any of the above and recreation.

The town adopted the Community Preservation Act in 2001. The Cohasset Community Preservation Fund obtains its money from a 1.5 percent surcharge on real estate taxes and some level of state match, which is expected to be 100 percent again this year. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds Office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.). Allocations are recommended by the Community Preservation Committee and then voted on by Town Meeting. Any money in the fund that is not appropriated can be banked for future years. Borrowing is also allowed with payments for interest and principal coming out of the fund.

All CPF expenditures in Cohasset must be approved by Town Meeting.

The town expects to raise $215,000 from the 1-1/2 percent real estate surcharge this year; and anticipates receiving a 100 percent state match ($215,000) by Oct. 15, CPC Chairman Stuart Ivimey said.

"You're asking for 50 percent of the project funding, and you haven't even completed fund raising."

— Tom Callahan, Community Preservation Committee

However, Ivimey also questioned whether public dollars should be spent on the playground.

He said he would take the "politically incorrect" stance by saying, "the town spends an exorbitant amount of money entertaining the children in town."

"My personal opinion is — no offense to anyone — what you're doing is great, but, this committee's money could be better spent," he said.

Callahan said the playground committee needs to break down to include minute detail, so the CPC can determine it some of the playground, such as the "wood carpet" might qualify for funding. The group was also advised to complete more fund-raising.

The CPC took the issue under advisement.

The Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, housed in the 1929 wing of the old Osgood School, is devoted to creating opportunities for children throughout the South Shore to gain global awareness through play spaces, rotating exhibits, and programming. It is slated to open in the fall of 2004.

"are you having a good time?"

He said there were more volunteers opening their homes to host families than were needed, and volunteers were actually turned away. Considering there are roughly 7,000 athletes in the competition, he said that speaks volumes.

Jay's brother and sister were also shown great hospitality. When checking into their hotel, the man behind the desk asked them if they were traveling on business or pleasure. When they told him they were there to see Jay compete in the Olympics, the man said he would like to have them as the hotel's personal guests.

At the opening ceremonies, the athletes covered the entire field — comparable in size to Gillette Stadium. Participants from 166 countries including Africa and Iraq, wore their country's uniforms, and some were even dressed in native garb.

"It was just incredible," Jay's mother Taffy said.

Mohammed Ali led the US delegation into the arena, and the athletes were projected onto two huge video screens for the fans to see. Nelson Mandela gave the Keynote Address.

Jay's competitions were held at the Royal St. George Yacht Club in the town of Dun Laoghaire, which is a suburb of Dublin. He participated in 19 races this year. Some of the sports at the Special Olympics, including Jay's division of sailing, are Unified sports, which means the athlete participates with a partner. Jeff is Jay's partner for sailing and said for his competition, the athlete is supposed to sail half the time, with the partner responsible for the start.

"Well, Jay skippered 100 percent of the time," he said.

One of Jay's 19 races was the celebrity race. For that, Jay's partner was the Olympic gold medal winner in sailing from Ireland, who had participated in the games held in Korea. There were 17 boats which were supposed to have celebrity skippers, but once again, Jay decided he'd like to sail, and his celebrity crew took third place. He was presented with a Waterford Crystal trophy, which is proudly displayed at his parent's house.

Taffy said throughout the competitions, Jay was sailing "all day every day." Jeff joked that Jay "was seen to be planning the race with his eyes closed on the bus."

After all the work and training, Jeff said the experience is one they will never forget. Everything about the trip was positive, with even Mother Nature showing support through beautiful weather.

"We had the best two weeks they've ever had in Ireland," Jeff said.

"From beginning to end it was one unbelievable high," he said. "There's nothing that is two weeks long that you can even compare it to."

The Special Olympics are conducted in, winter, spring, summer, August, and fall. Both Jeff and Taffy have been very involved with the Special Olympics, and Jeff currently serves on the Board of Directors. Jay has participated in the Special Olympics through the Scituate chapter.

In order to compete at the world level, an athlete must first win his or her sport at the state level, then be chosen in a lottery to receive a spot on the US team. Of the 16 people competing from Massachusetts, four were sailors.

Athletes are only allowed to compete once in a particular sport at the world level. In 1995, Jay competed in the World Games power lifting competition, held in New Haven, Conn. He was able to bench 185 pounds and dead lift 290, and came home with the gold.

"I don't come close," Jeff said.

While preparing for competition, Jay met Arnold Schwarzenegger, who had come to show support for the athletes. The Special Olympics were founded by Eunice Kennedy Shriver in 1968, and her family, including Schwarzenegger's wife Maria Shriver, is still very involved in showing support for the games.

It was after his powerlifting win that Jay decided to begin training for sailing, so he could participate in the World Games again. There are 26 sports an athlete can compete in, of which Taffy said, "He wants to do them all. That's his goal."

As of right now, Jay is in training for the August Games, where he will participate in golf and softball, but he said the next sport he would like to try is equestrian.

Among Jay's medals for his personal accomplishments is another gold medal honoring the work of his family.

For their work and dedication to the games, as well as his, the Nothnagles were nominated by the families in Scituate, and won a place in the Special Olympics Hall of Fame.

"It's all because of him. He made us do it," Jeff said with a smile.

Brian Woods (seen her connecting for a base hit) is one of just four players Post 118 loses to age limit next year, but he hopes to be back to help coach the team.

Post 118's glass more than half full

Bulk of talent to returns to Cohasset-Scituate Legion team in '04

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Scott Arnold is clearly a glass is half full kind of guy.

The veteran coach of the Cohasset Post 118 Legion team saw his team's season come to a close with a 3-2 loss to Milton last Tuesday, wrapping things up with a 4-16 record. And there was coach Arnold with nothing but positives to throw around.

"The kids fought right to the end for every out and put it all on the line in that final game, which is all you can ask," gushed the 10th year head coach. "That speaks well for the character of the team. I'm looking forward to getting these guys back next year.

"It was a fun season. I really enjoyed this group of kids, and I'm looking forward to seeing what they can do next year."

Nine of the 13 players Arnold ended the season with last week are eligible to return next year, including college bound players Eric Dmohowski and Brian Signorelli. Dmohowski, a B.C. High graduate who is off to St. Joseph's to play ball, was a key pitcher and outfielder. Signorelli, a Thayer grad who will try to make the Vanderbilt University team as a walk-on, was the team's number one catcher. Both were among Post 118's better hitters.

Arnold definitely expects one of the two back, and hopes he gets both.

"I think the kids are happy to come back and play here after they come back from a year of college," said Arnold. "We play good baseball, but we try to have fun too. It's a good environment."

The roster this year bares out the coach's assertion. The four players the team is losing to age limitation—Chris Carr, Alex Knight, Brian Woods and Mike Gulinello—were all 2002 high school graduates. Carr (now at Duke University) from B.C. High, the latter three from Scituate High.

Woods, who will be a sophomore at Quincy College, and Gulinello, this year's sensational starting shortstop who has a couple of college baseball teams interested in his services, both plan to return next summer to help Arnold coach the team.

"Those two guys were our leaders, and they'll definitely be missed," said Arnold of Gulinello and Woods. "They were never named captains. I usually don't name captains. They just took up the responsibility. I believe that natural

Coach Ford's basketball camp draws record numbers

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

There has been some nervous talk over the last two years about the dwindling numbers for the Cohasset High basketball program. However, with the help of a thriving basketball summer school held by veteran CHS boys coach Ron Ford, thoughts such as this can be put to rest.

"I've always run it as part of a feeder program," noted the 13th year coach and CHS Athletic Director. "I think the numbers actually, at the high school level, are growing."

The CHS program lost five seniors to graduation. On next year's team, only two seniors and one junior will transition to next year from the 2002-03 varsity squad. But the underclass years are increasing in number, and this year's 8th grade class actually had 45 athletes come out for basketball.

Ford noted that such "peaks and valleys" are inevitable at a small school such as Cohasset. Yet that just reinforces how important his outside programs are. Possibly the most popular, The South Shore Basketball School, a one-week clinic for basketball players ages 8-13, ended last week in the biggest turnout Ford has had since he started the camp in 1992.

"I enjoy running it. It definitely helps build the program," said Ford, who ran this camp every year from 92-01, but had to miss 2002 due to school renovations. "It's basically to get a chance to meet the younger kids, develop them. But the main focus of the camp is to have fun."

Booters take Silver

Cohasset boys soccer team shines at Bay State Games

The Cohasset Boys came out on top this past weekend at the Bay State Games Under-18 Soccer 7-on-7 tourney at Ft. Devens, winning four out of five games and coming home with a Silver Medal.

The 7-on-7 format has six players and a goalkeeper playing a shortened total game of 25 minutes, with no half time on a smaller than usual field. The goals are standard size and with no off-side rule, so the play is fast and constant with lots of shots on goal. There were 16 teams from all over the state competing this year.

The games began on Saturday with Cohasset dominating their Group winning all three games: 4-2, 4-0 and 4-2.

Talent was spread throughout the field with a squad of nine players. Controlling the defense was Conor Buick, Craig Laguelle and JT Oronte. The offensive and midfield play was led by David Santiago, Chris Clark, Andrew Wise, Aidan Buick and Matt O'Connell. Jesse Brewer had an outstanding goalkeeping performance.

On Sunday, the most challenging game was the semi-final when Cohasset played Westernhook United, a team from the Great Barrington region. Cohasset was down 2-0 with nine minutes remaining when their first goal was scored by Chris Clark. Two minutes later, Aidan Buick rifled the ball in the net, making the game 2-2. With two minutes remaining, from a corner kick, Clark headed in a goal giving Cohasset the lead, 3-2, placing them in the FINAL.

Jesse Brewer made some spectacular lightening fast saves and Cohasset's McKenna and Snowdale named Honorable Mentions

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

Several of the young men you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

Cohasset High had a disappointing season on the diamond in terms of record (7-13), but recent graduates Chris McKenna and Mike Snowdale, the team's lone league all-star, certainly did all they could to keep the team competitive.

In the end, however, we limited ourselves to a team of 16, and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top baseball players in Marinerland for this honor.

Nick DeVito - Senior (Capt.) Pitcher/Shortstop- Hingham

No question here...One of the most dominating high school players in the state, DeVito capped his career as the Patriot League's leading hitter and pitcher...The Eastern Mass. All-star and three-time PL All-star finished the season with a .582 average, 26 RBI, 10 doubles, and 5 home-runs...On the mound, DeVito was virtually unhittable, boasting a perfect 5-0 record and 0.95 ERA...His presence on the mound, at the plate, and in the field at shortstop helped lead the Harbormen (17-4) to a PL title (10-2) and quarterfinals of the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney...DeVito spends his summers playing for the Hingham Legion team and Hingham Phillies Cranberry League team...Also a basketball All-Scholastic last winter...Was drafted last month by the Cincinnati Reds, but has elected to play for UConn. on a full scholarship. Hingham coach Dan McHugh: "What can you say about Nick? You don't replace Nick and we won't even try. He is a once in a lifetime player."

Greg Genovese - Senior
Third baseman - Hingham

Greg Genovese

Those who chose to pitch around DeVito still had to deal with cleanup hitter Genovese and he made opposing team's pay, driving in 22 runs this season…The senior finished with a .422 average, with two home-runs, four doubles, and 20 singles, helping the Harbormen (17-4) capture the Patriot League title (10-2) and the top seed in the Div. 2 South Sectional…A grandslam was one of the four hits he racked up in a crucial match-up with Hanover, driving in six in the process…An All-Scholastic forward on Hingham's hockey team, he helped the squad reach the semifinals of the Super 8 tourney for the second-straight season…Genovese plans to attend Pomfret prep-school and continue his hockey and baseball careers.

Mike McNulty - Senior
Pitcher - Hingham

Mike McNulty

The No. 2 starter for the Harbormen, McNulty played a big role in Hingham's success this season… The Patriot League All-star went 9-2 for Hingham this season, helping the team capture the PL title (10-2) and snag the top seed in the Div. 2 South Sectional…There, McNulty went 1-1, taking the heartbreaking 5-4 quarterfinal loss to Hopkinton despite striking out five batters…McNulty tossed a no-hitter this season against a talented Marshfield squad, clinching Hingham's victory in the championship game of the Hull Tourney by a 6-0 score…Also a talented defenseman on the HHS hockey team, McNulty helped lead the Harbormen to their second-straight appearance in the semifinals of the elite Super Eight tourney last winter…McNulty will attend Pomfret prep-school where he will continue his hockey career.

Rob Schuler - Senior (Capt.)
Centerfield - Hanover

Rob Schuler

A four-year starter in the Indians' outfield, Schuler helped Hanover (16-6) win 13 of its last 16 games, including a 4-3 victory over rival Hingham, to capture a second place finish in the Patriot League (8-4)…From his leadoff spot, Schuler hit .464 for the year, scoring 27 runs and stealing 23 bases…The senior also racked up 10 RBI…Was key in the team's victory at the East Bridgewater tourney and trip to the quarterfinals of the Div. 2 South Sectional…Was also a two-time Mariner All-Scholastic in soccer and basketball…A three-time PL All-star, Schuler plans to attend Bates College, where he will continue his baseball career.

Andy Hillier - Junior Pitcher - Hanover

It was a breakout year for this promising talent, as Hillier went perfect for the Indians at 8-0…His 1.63 ERA was among the best in the competitive Patriot League, in which his Hanover team finished second overall at 8-4…Hillier struck out 59 batters this season, 10 of those K's coming in his no-hit performance against Milton…The junior also one-hit East Bridgewater in a 7-0 victory and was a key in the team's championship win a the EB tourney…Recorded the team's only win the Div. 2 South Sectional, holding off Apponequet, 2-1, to reach the quarterfinals…Spent this summer playing Legion ball and also helped lead the South's Bay State Summer Games team to silver medal earlier this month…Also a golf and basketball player at HHS, Hillier will return to the captain the baseball squad next season.

CJ Hillyer - Junior
Pitcher/First base - Abington

CJ Hillyer

Though a mid-season injury halted his stint on the mound, Hillyer continued to play first base for the South Shore League runners-up (8-4)…The three-year starter got Abington off to a hot start, going 8-0 and allowing just one in 19 innings before the injury…Hillyer pitched a pair of no-hitters against Holbrook….His 12-strikeout performance in a 7-4 victory over East Bridgewater helped Abington reach the finals of the EB tourney…Also an offensive threat, Hillyer hit .335 with 18 RBI and a pair of triples, helping the Green Wave (12-8) earn a berth in the Div. 3 South Sectional…Was voted by his Abington teammates as their MVP…A three-year SSL All-star, Hillyer hopes for a healthy return to his pitching post next season. Abington coach Steve Perakslis: "Losing C.J.'s start on the mound was a real setback. He is one of the top pitchers to come through the league in the last few years. Any team would have felt that loss."

Paul Chartier - Senior
Pitcher - Abington

With Abington's ace out for the spring, the fate of the team rested on the shoulders of Chartier and he answered his call to arms…Despite a nagging ACL injury sustained during the football season, this South Shore League All-star went 5-2 for the Green Wave, helping Abington capture second in the SSL standings (8-4)…One of his biggest wins came against SSL foe Harwich, outlasting the eventual Sectional finalists, 4-3, in a regular-season victory…Also a defensive back on the AHS football team, Chartier helped lead the Green Wave to an SSL title and Div. 5 Super Bowl crown last fall…Chartier plans to attend college. Abington coach Steve Perakslis: "Paul had a tremendous year for us. He was still sore coming off his injury from last football season, so he did not play the field for us. Paul was more valuable to our success this year than anyone realizes. He transferred his raw ability this year and became a pitcher."

Chris McDonough - Senior
Pitcher - Weymouth

Was the key to his Wildcats team's surprising run in the Div. 1 South Sectional tourney, pitching his 10-10, 25th seeded squad to a 3-2 stunner over top-seeded Norwood to reach the semifinals…The dominating lefthander finished the year with an 8-2 record and 1.17 ERA, and was tops in the Bay State Carey (0.45, 7-1)…The BSC and Eastern Mass. All-star's incredible 126 strikeouts this season were a result of his recording double-digit K's in all 10 of his starts, leading to 245 for his career…Teammates voted McDonough the MVP of the squad this season…He also played football at WHS and spends his summer playing on the Weymouth Legion squad…McDonough plans to attend Wheaton College, where he will continue his baseball career.

Tim Bonham - Junior Pitcher - Marshfield

Tim Bonham

This talented hurler was nearly perfect this season, going 6-1 with an almost untouchable 0.86 ERA…His most notable pitching performance came in a 1-0 victory over Old Colony League rival and eventual Div. 1 South Sectional champion Bridgewater-Raynham…Helped fuel his team's late-season run, in which the Rams 11 of its last 14 games to finish 14-6 overall, 10-4 in the OCL, good for second…Also a talented goalie on the MHS hockey squad, Bonham made our All-Scholastic team last winter after posting a 2.45 goals against average and three shutouts…Played for the Southeast team in the Bay State Summer Games and made 12 saves in net, leading the team to a gold medal…Bonham spends his summers playing Legion baseball with the Duxbury squad…He will be one of the top returnees on both squads next season.

Joe Belmosto - Senior (Capt.)
Catcher - Marshfield

Joe Belmosto

A two-time Mariner All-Scholastic, Belmosto capped his high school career as the Old Colony League's leading hitter at .464 and led the OCL in RBI with 21…One of the OCL's better defensive catchers, Belmosto threw out 9-of-13 attempted base-stealers…At the plate, Belmosto racked up six doubles and scored 17 runs for Marshfield (14-5)…Went a perfect 5-for-5 with a handful of RBI and two stolen bases in a 16-2 regular-season victory over North Quincy, resulting in a second-place finish in the OCL (10-4) and berth in the Div. 1 South Sectional tourney, where his Rams were stunned by Cinderella Weymouth squad in the prelims…A three-year starter, he was also a talented wrestler at MHS…Belmosto spends his summers playing for the Duxbury Legion squad and fueled a third-game victory over Hingham to reach the second round of the playoffs, smacking a pair of two-run doubles…Belmosto plans to continue his baseball career at the Massachusetts College of Liberal Arts.

Derek Landry - Senior (Capt.)
Pitcher - Rockland

This three-year starter rebounded from a slow start to fuel his team's late comeback, in which Rockland went 8-6 in their last 14 games…Landry, after an 0-3 start, was on the hill to win seven of the Bulldogs' eight victories this season, falling just short of a tourney berth (8-11)…Landry's efforts didn't go unnoticed by the league as he was named a Patriot League All-star…Ended his RHS campaign with a 7-4 record and a 3.46 ERA…Struck out 73 batters this season…Played third base when not on the mound for Rockland…Also a wrestler at RHS, Landry plans to attend Bridgewater State College and continue his baseball career. Rockland coach Rick Fredericks: "Derek is just the ultimate competitor. To watch him battle in some of those games when de did not have his best stuff was very impressive. I think the rest of the team fed off of that."

Bob Osgood - Senior Outfield - Braintree

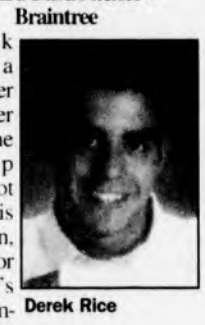
Bob Osgood

Speedster helped make Braintree's offense go this season, stealing a team best 12 bases and hitting .314 out of the second spot in the batting order…first team Bay State Conference All-star…has played for the Braintree Post 86 Legion baseball team the last three years…three year member of the BHS varsity team…hit .474 during the Wamps march to the Div. 1 state championship game in 2002…previously played JV basketball for the school as well before deciding to settle exclusively on baseball…National Honors Society member…graduated with a 3.4 GPA and ranked top 40 in his class of 350…will play Club baseball at UNH, which lost it's Div. 1 baseball program as a result of Title 9…leaning toward a major in Business.

Derek Rice - Senior
Third Base/Pitcher - Braintree



Derek Rice

Derek Rice was a key pitcher and hitter for the Wamp squad not only this past season, but also for last year's state champion finalist team…hit a team best .402 as a senior while batting out of the lead off spot…had six doubles and 11 stolen bases… first team Bay State Conference All-star…has played for the Braintree Post 86 Legion baseball team the last three years…t hree year member of the BHS varsity team, a starting pitcher for the last two…season's most memorable game was a one-hit, 14-strikeout shutout against BSC rival Dedham that also saw him go 4-for-4 at the plate…was ranked in the top 10 percent of his graduating class…Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic…also played soccer and gymnastics for BHS before deciding to concentrate solely on baseball…Honor Roll student who posted a GPA of 3.8 as a senior…will play baseball at Rollins College, a lauded Div. 2 program in Florida…plans to major in Political Science with an eye toward a career in law

Catcher/Pitcher - Norwell

Matt Greenberg

A sensational defensive catcher who also found his swing in his first full year of high school baseball…batted a team best .396 for the Clippers…also led team in doubles, RBIs and on base percentage (over .500)…hit well against several of the South Shore League's top pitchers, including MLB draftee Cody Crowell…earned starting catcher job as a freshman, but then missed all but the first two games due to Colitis…South Shore League all-star…Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic Honorable Mention…has previously played AAU baseball for the South Shore Seadogs and Atlantic Coast Badgers…presently playing for the Hanover Legion baseball team…a starting forward for the NHS hockey team the last two years, but plans to skip this season in order to concentrate more fully on baseball…a good student…Norwell coach Tom Jacobs: "Matt is a very good hitter, but defense is where he really stands out. He might be the best I've ever seen at this level at blocking balls in the dirt, and he threw the ball extremely well too. I didn't keep statistics on it, but I'd be willing bet the number of stolen bases on him was one of the lowest in the area."

Scott Carroll - Junior
Shortstop - Scituate

Scott Carroll

The junior emerged this season as not only a top notch defensive shortstop, but also a big bat for a team that desperately needed an offensive infusion after the heavy toll taken by graduation 2002…Carroll wound up leading the Sailors in batting (.483) and gave recent Cincinatti Reds draft pick Nick DeVito (Hingham) a run for the Patriot League batting title for much of the season…his average nearly hit .600 eight games into the season…Patriot League all-star…has played fall baseball in the Hit Dog League the last few years…also played varsity basketball for Scituate High this past winter…plays drum in a few bands…National Honors Society member…winner of Bausch and Lomb Science Award…looking at Holy Cross, Providence, Bates and Bowdoin…would like to play college baseball, but only for a Div. 2 or 3 program…Scituate coach Kevin Greer: "Scott really had it going for a while there at the bat just about as well as anyone I've coached. He's a good hitter. He also staked his claim on that shortstop position that was up in the air early in the season. He solidified that spot and made two of the most outstanding defensive plays I've ever seen at that spot."

Joe Duggan - Senior
Pitcher/First Base - Scituate

Joe Duggan

Joe was a leader who helped keep a young Sailors team together in what was an extremely frustrating season (seven one-run losses)…was the Sailors top pitcher and finished second in the team batting race with a .333 average… was the starting second baseman on last year's Div. 2 sectional finalist team…Joe's graduation signals the end of an era in Scituate High sports, as he is the last of five Duggan brothers to star for and captain both the school's hockey and baseball teams…also a two-time Mariner All-Scholastic goalie who helped direct the Sailors to a 17-4-1 season this past winter…will attend Mass. Maritime, where he will play baseball and major in law enforcement…would like to continue playing hockey, possibly at the Club level…eyeing a career as an environmental police officer…Scituate coach Kevin Greer: "Joe, just like all of his brothers, was a great kid to coach and a great leader. He worked extremely hard to become the player he is. We had a lot of tough luck losses this season, but Joe really helped us hold things together both in the field and off it."

Honorable Mention:

John Haggerty - Sr. - Second base - Hingham
Mark Winter - Jr. - Closer - Hingham
John Zuccaro - Sr. - Pitcher - Hanover

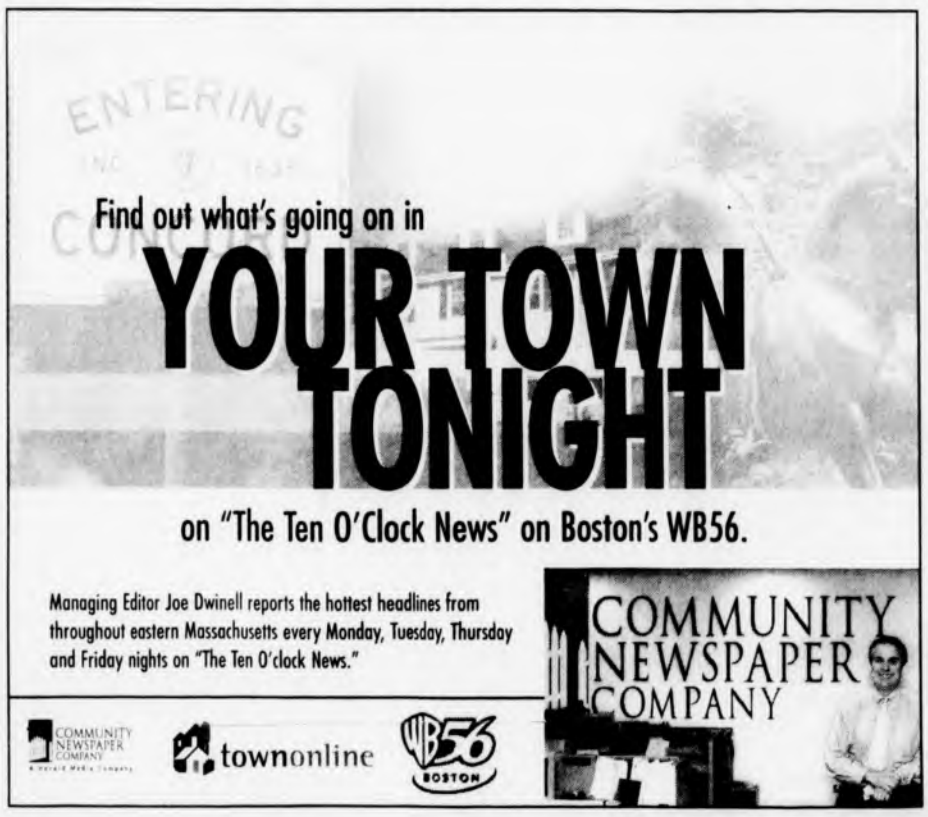
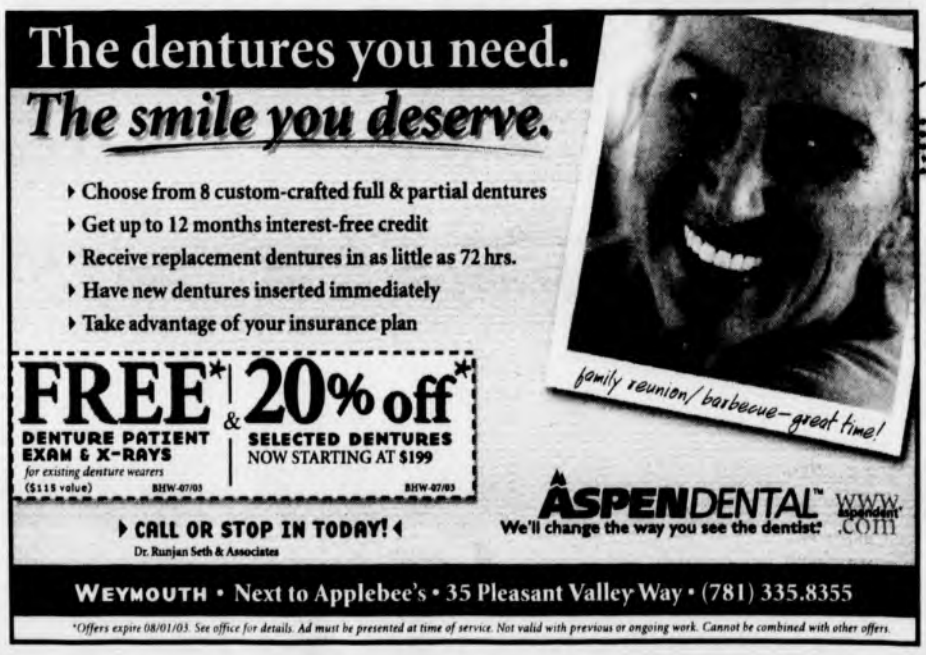
Recent CHS graduates Chris McKenna (above) and Mike Snowdale (below) did all they could to keep the team competitive, earning Honorable Mention acknowledgements for their efforts.





Cohasset swimmers stunned

Eel River team escapes with win in rain shortened meet

The weather has played havoc with this year's swim program. The Eel River event, on July 11, was rained out at the half way point and last Friday's meet against Scituate's Knights of Columbus was brought to an early conclusion when thunder and lightening sent the teams running for cover.

So where are we up to in the season so far? The first two meets went well with wins for Cohasset against Scituate's Sharks and Duxbury Yacht Club. And then it came to Eel River. The third meet of the season, this scaled down event has generally produced a comfortable win for Cohasset. But this year, and perhaps we can blame the miserable weather, Cohasset's turnout was down and, from the offing, it was clear that they would struggle to keep up with their enthusiastic competitors.

The eight and under boys got the meet off to a good start in the medley relays with first and third place finishes (1st: Brown; McCarthy; MacCarthy; Swain; 3rd: Green; Rice; Berube; Lund) and although the girls struggled in their event, their third place finish claimed a useful four points (3rd: Zimmerman; Chase; Berube; McGowan). The ten and under boys produced a strong performance claiming first and third places (1st: Salerno; Buckley; Shipp; Carpenter; 3rd: Horrigan; Kennedy; McCormack; Pratt) and the girls pushed Cohasset just ahead with a win in their race (1st: Murphy; Seraikas; Musto; Karski; 2nd: Haber; Healy; Berube; Axelson). But the real problems started at the twelve and under level. Not lack of skill or stamina, just lack of swimmers. With no one available at in this age group, Eel River swam unopposed to take eight significant points and tie the score. The twelve and under girls pulled back a little with second, fifth and sixth place finishes (2nd: Libby; Asnault; Buckley; Gaumer; 5th: McElhinny; Sullivan; Baumgarten; Meikleham; 6th: McBride; Salerno; Regan; Dunn) and the seventeen and unders' rounded the event off with a second place for the boys and a second and fifth place for the girls (boys: 2nd: Gammon; MacCarthy; Muir; Kuppens; girls: 2nd: Englander; Anderson; Sacks; Anderson), but by the end of the medley relays Eel River was twelve points ahead of Cohasset.

The ten and under boys and girls gave the score a boost in the 50 yard freestyle finishing first in both events (boys: 1st: Buckley, T.; 4th: Horrigan, B.; girls: 1st: Karski, E.; 3rd: Berube, M.; 4th: Haber, A.) and allowing Cohasset to reduce Eel River's lead by four points.

In the freestyles races, Conor Ofsthun put in a brave performance as the sole representative of the twelve and under boys, finishing in second place, and the girls finished third, fourth and sixth (3rd: Baumgarten, E.; 4th: Buckley, A.; 6th: McElhinny,C.). At the fourteen and under level the boys managed a "DQ" and a fourth place finish (4th: MacCarthy, E.) and the girls were also out by "DQ". With no one swimming at the boys seventeen and under level and a second place finish (Anderson, M.), the individual medleys finished with Cohasset behind by 34 points.

Spirits were improved again with the usual plucky performance from the eight and under boys in the 25 yard freestyles (1st: Swain, G.; 2nd: MacCarthy, R.; 4th: McCarthy, M.). The girls fought hard but were held to third, fifth and sixth places (3rd: Buckley, M.; 5th: Axelson, M.; 6th: Zimmerman, E.). At the ten and under level both the boys and girls claimed a win (boys: 1st: Salerno, J.; 3rd: Carpenter, C.; 5th: Kennedy, V.; girls: 1st: Murphy, O.; 4th: Seraikas, A.) and by the end of the 25 yard event Cohasset had taken seven points off Eel River's lead. At the 50 yard level Conor Ofsthun added another win for Cohasset and the twelve and under girls hit the right note with second, third and fourth place finishes (2nd: Meikleham, A.; 3rd: McBride, F.; 4th tie: Sullivan, O.). The fourteen and under boys and girls also put in a great performance and with wins in both the seventeen and under races, Cohasset had now accumulated 108 points to Eel River's 133 (boys, 14 and under: 1st: Musto, C.; 2nd: Shipp, A.; 3rd: Gammon, B.; girls, 14 and under: 2nd: Richardson, L.; 4th: Campbell, A.; 6th: Guinee, A.; boys, 17 and under: 1st: Roach, K.; girls, 17 and under: 1st: Anderson, C.; 2nd: Ogrodnik, M.).

The sky had been dark and dreary throughout the morning, but, going into the butterfly event it was clear that a storm was building. The races kept going, children shivered on the starting blocks, but there was a real hope that we could escape the rain and get this one finished.

The eight and under boys threw themselves into the butterfly event and thanks to another great performance by Geoff Swain, they took first place (1st (tie): Swain, G.; 3rd: MacCarthy, R.; 4th: Berube, G.). The girls just missed the win, but took second, third and sixth places (2nd: Malerti, H.; 3rd: Axelson, M.; 6th: Berube, B.), and at the ten and under level both the boys and girls won their races (boys: 1st: Shipp, M.; 2nd: McCormack, P.; 3rd: Kennedy, V.; girls: 1st: Musto, E.; 2nd: Karski, E.; 3rd: Berube, M.). Cohasset had now closed Eel River's lead to nine points, and the twelve and under races were up next.

The boys race was another "no swim" for Cohasset, but the girls fielded three strong swimmers, finishing second, fourth and sixth (2nd: Libby, S.; 4th: Baumgarten, E.; 6th: McElhinny, C.). The score was now 155 for Eel River and 138 for Cohasset.

And then the thunder came. Everyone stopped to listen. What had previously just been far off rumblings was now right over head and the meet had to be abandoned. We had made it to event 32, exactly half way through the meet, and although we hadn't finished all heats of that event, and although there would be much discussion about the final decision, it had to be accepted. The meet was over, and Eel River had beaten Cohasset by seventeen points.

This was not a pleasant outing. It was cold and grey and the conclusion was disappointing on many levels. It was a brave performance from those who turned up, especially those tiny eight and unders whose teeth chattered as they lined up to compete. But it was a messy meet with an unsatisfactory ending and it breaks Cohasset's undefeated record for this season.

But enough of despondency! The team will swim again this week. First, against Scituate's Knights of Columbus on Wednesday, completing a meet that was also abandoned in a thunder storm and, again, on Friday, against the powerful Mask squad. We look forward to a strong showing at both meets and let's hope the weather holds.

the defense enabled Cohasset to stay competitive in the game and keep the lead. In the final game, Cohasset lost to a very talented team comprised of club players.

The Cohasset Boys' are looking to secure the divisional title this year with nine returning seniors, a new coach in Rob Leary, the former Rockland High head coach, and a strong desire to win. Captains this year are Conor Buick, David Santiago and Chris Clark.

Captain's practices will be beginning the end of July and will be posted on the cohasset-soccer.com web site.

As part of the camp, all athletes competed in a "mini-Olympics" during the course of the week, a variety of basketball-related contests including knockout, dribble knockout, and elbow shooting.

The contest winners in their respective age groups were Conor O'Brien, 8, Michael Waters, 9, Robert Jones, 10, and best overall for the 8-11 age group was John Maher, 11. The top overall girl performer was Katie French, 9, while the contest winner at the upper age group was Evan Deutsch, who scored the highest in the combination of all the events. These winners were awarded basketballs as prizes, donated by the camp's sponsor, GoodSport.

"The talent of these kids was remarkable," said Jared Krupczak, co-captain of this past year's team. "I honestly believe that they could be state champs some day."

Krupczak, along with teammates (co-captain) Ian Kidder, Sean Connolley, and DJ Silvial, as well as coach Tim Owens, helped Ford run smoothly through camp. The players and coaches led the players through a vast array of technical workouts and drills, most of which are actually used in practices at the high school level.

"[Kidder and Krupczak] came through as campers in 92," remembered Ford. "Having those two guys come full circle, that's great. It's gratifying to see kids give back to a program."

At the end of the week, Ford gave every camper a description of all the workouts and techniques they had done during the week. The objective, naturally, is to encourage the athletes to practice on their own, and better their games over the summer and fall to prepare for the winter season.

"That's the whole point," said Ford. "Like I always say, 'the most important day of camp is the day after.'"

In a further attempt to promote development and appreciation for the game at the younger ages, Ford holds an open gym on Monday and Thursday nights, where anyone can come and play in some scrimmages.

In addition, the Clark Chatterton Fund and the Cohasset Basketball Boosters club have combined their efforts to give new basketball facilities to the outdoor playground at the Deer Hill School.

So while the numbers may be scarce for next year, the efforts of Ford and many others in this town ensure that Cohasset basketball will consistently be able to put a competitive team on the floor.

Congratulations 2003 Girls Major League Softball Champions

Hail to the Phillies, champions of the Cohasset Softball Major League. Coached by Matt Salerno, Chris Haggerty and Jay Monaco, the Phillies completed their regular season with 12 wins and two losses, while battling three other teams in the very competitive league.

Prior to the season, the coaches felt strongly that they would have a good sound team, judging from the list of athletes from the previous year. Last season, this group of returning sixth-graders made it all the way to the championship round and always felt that they could have been and should have been the champions in 2002. The core of that team knew right then and there that they would not be denied when they returned the following year. These girls would share the leadership of the team. The coaches knew they could count on strong pitching from Alyssa Mullin and Carly Salerno, who pitched the previous year as fifth graders. To handle the pitchers were the two veteran catchers who always kept the team's collective head in the game: Lesen Haracz and Kristin Monaco. Sure-handed Maggie McGoldrick, fleet-footed Jo-Jo Brophy, versatile Jenny Cahill and power-house Margaret Goodwin rounded out the returning nucleus of a very fundamentally sound softball team.

Filling in the gaps was a group of dynamite fifth-grade girls who complimented and supported their older teammates. Carli Haggerty, Maddy Altholtz, Paige Collins, Grace Curry, Rebecca Dickenson, Izzy Franklin, Sarah Libby and Johanna Regan practiced hard, listened to the coaches, played their position, but most importantly, they all learned the TEAM CHEERS!! All of them... loudly. ("I see a HOLE out there, so hit the BALL out there... ")

Because the Phillies finished first in the league, they needed to play the Astros in the first round. However, this was tougher than the team thought. The Phillies were victorious in the first game, but the Astros and the Phillies battled through a defensive struggle with the 'Stros outscoring the Phils. In the decisive game three, the Phillies took a commanding lead, but needed some courage and determination to hold off the feisty Astros to win the game and move into the Championship round.

Their next opponent were the Blue Jays, who also had played three tough games against the Devil Rays, winning a close game three contest. But the Phillies prevailed and even Mother Nature's rain couldn't prevent the Phillies from eventually accomplishing their goal that they set at the beginning of the season, to become the 2003 Girls Major League Softball Champions of Cohasset.

Last challenge as a team... running hand-in-hand into the cold waters at Sandy Beach after the championship game. Next challenge...riding the Cohasset Fire Truck in the Little League Parade before next season starts.

leaders aren't named; they emerge to lead, and that's just what Mike and Brian did."

The other seven players who toiled to the end for the Post 118ers all have at least two years of eligibility remaining, and most played key roles for the team this year.

- Jack O'Leary, a Scituate High junior-to be, wound up the team's leading hitter, finishing with a batting average in the mid-.400s. He also provided solid outfield play, and worked on the mound in relief a few times.

- Mike Barba, a Scituate High sophomore-to-be, took over at second base when Knight went down with a season-ending injury early on, and improved at an amazing rate, according to Arnold. "Mike matured about three years as a player in about three weeks," lauded the coach.

- Greg Malley, a Thayer Academy junior-to-be, won a spot in the starting pitching rotation and earned two of the team's pitching wins. He also played some solid outfield toward the end of the season.

- Ben Murphy, a Xaverian junior-to be and a catcher by trade, became an every day corner outfielder when a couple of veterans left for extended AAU ball play, acquitting himself quite well, according to Arnold.

- Tim Pilczak, a Cohasset High junior-to-be, was the team's jack-of all-trades, playing every position but shortstop and pitcher this season.

- Kevin Signorelli (the younger brother of Kevin), a Thayer Academy junior-to-be, played every inning of every game for Post 118 at either third base or on the mound.

- Brandon Stella was an occasional reliever and full-time source of inspiration for the team. The Scituate High junior-to-be suffers from Cerebral Palsy and has limited use of his right arm. He saw limited action but, according to Arnold. "was the first player to the field and the last one to leave it. No one worked harder, and he earned his spot on this team."

"We might not be as good next year as the 2002 team," concluded Arnold, referring to the team that made it to the second round of the state playoffs before falling to eventual state champion Sandwich, "but I guarantee we'll be better next year than we were this year, and I'd be willing to bet we're even better than that the year after that.

"This is how it seems to work for us. It goes in cycles. Right now, we've got a real good cast of younger players who should come into their own together. It's exciting to look at that potential spread out over the next few years."

Shallop's maiden voyage to make Cohasset stop

Two years ago, the shallop was commissioned by The Pilgrim John Howland Society to be built at Plimoth Plantation.

On Monday, July 28, the replica of the original Pilgrim shallop is schedule to arrive in Cohasset on the first leg of her maiden voyage to the trading post of Old Fort Western on the Kennebec River in Maine. The vessel, which is named the "Elizabeth Tilley" (after Pilgrim John Howland's wife) is the culmination of a two-year project by members of Plimoth Plantation's Marine Artisans Department led by department manager, Peter Arenstam with help from volunteers and interns.

A shallop is defined as a "small open boat fitted with oars or sails, or both, and used primarily in shallow water." In the 17th century, this type of boat was generally taken aboard larger vessels, such as the Mayflower during long voyages. It could be taken apart, stored below decks and then reassembled when needed for coast exploration.

The original shallop traded corn for beaver pelts to be sent back to England. Two years ago, the shallop was commissioned by The Pilgrim John Howland Society to be built at Plimoth Plantation. The boat is built of oak by artisans using 17th-century tools as it would have been built 380 years ago. The "Elizabeth Tilley" is 38 feet long with a beam of 10 feet, four inches, and a depth admidships of four feet, six inches, based on measurements from 17th-century shipbuilding texts. The Howland shallop will have a crew of 12 and is scheduled to arrive in Augusta, Maine in 11 days.

When the shallop leaves Plymouth, it will make an approximately 200-mile journey up the coast of Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine then up the Kennebec River. It will make several stops, including Cohasset on July 28; Rockport, July 29; Isle o' Shoals, N.H., July 30; Kennebunkport, Maine, July 31; Portland, Maine, Aug. 2; Fort Popham, Maine (Phippsburg Town Landing) on Aug. 4; Bath, Maine (Maine Maritime Museum), Aug. 5; and Richmond and Swan Island on Aug. 6 before reaching its destination of Old Fort Western in Augusta, Maine on Aug. 7. There will be costumed interpreters from the John Howland Society on board at the public viewings of the vessel in both Kennebunkport and Portland, Maine, in addition to private receptions at these stops.

Schedules are subject to change based on weather and tides. Please call Plimoth Plantation with any questions or for more information at 509-746-1622.

Entertainment big draw for annual charity event

By Mark Skala
MSKALA@CNC.COM

The Mount Blue annual summer charity gala has become a don't-miss South Shore event thanks in large part to the outstanding entertainment. And this year is no exception

Music, food, good company and entertainment are the perfect ingredients for the annual gala with this year's celebration set for Monday, July 28, at the restaurant. Proceeds benefit Habitat for Humanity organization. Co-owner Jayne Bowe couldn't be more excited about this year's entertainment lineup featuring the Norwell restaurant's most popular attractions — the Joe Leary Band and the

A liberal dose of country

Mary Chapin Carpenter makes tour stop at Music Circus

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

From the beginning, Mary Chapin Carpenter was never your typical country music performer.

New Jersey-born and Yale-educated with a degree in English Literature, these two bio facts alone set Carpenter apart from pretty much everything that's ever been seen or heard in country music nation, Nashville or otherwise.

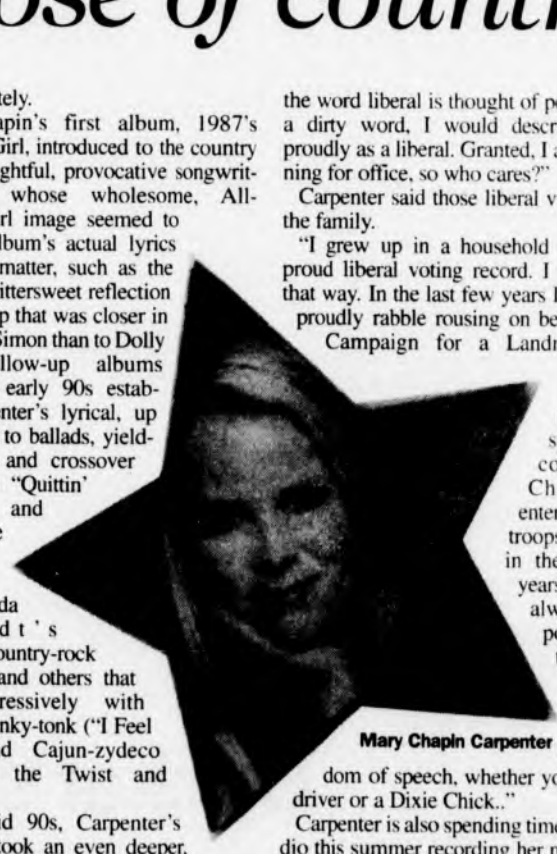
But Mary Chapin first gained national fame as part of country's wave of literate, reflective women singer/songwriters arising in the mid 1980s, among others such as Nanci Griffith and Roseanne Cash. And even within that realm, she's often proven to be more than meets the eye.

On tour nationally this summer for the first time after a few years' hiatus, Mary Chapin Carpenter makes a local stop in concert at the South Shore Music Circus this Saturday, July 26 at 8 p.m. Opening for Carpenter at the Music Circus is another similarly lyrical, folk-influenced country singer/songwriter Eliza Gilkyson.

"I have always supported the troops and our right to exercise our freedom of speech, whether you're a taxi driver or a Dixie Chick."
Mary Chapin Carpenter

"For the last few years I have been concentrating on writing songs for the next record, getting married (no, that didn't take two years but I did take time off to enjoy married life) and basically just taking time to have something of a more home-based life, rather than spending most of my time on the road," said Carpenter about where she's been lately.

Mary Chapin's first album, 1987's Hometown Girl, introduced to the country scene a thoughtful, provocative songwriting talent whose wholesome, All-American-Girl image seemed to betray the album's actual lyrics and subject matter, such as the title tune, a bittersweet reflection of growing up that was closer in tone to Paul Simon than to Dolly Parton. Follow-up albums through the early 90s established Carpenter's lyrical, up tempo songs to ballads, yielding country and crossover hits such as "Quittin' Time" and "Passionate Kisses" that recalled Linda Ronstadt's California country-rock of the 70s, and others that flirted impressively with styles like honky-tonk ("I Feel Lucky") and Cajun-zydeco ("Down at the Twist and Shout").



Mary Chapin Carpenter

By the mid 90s, Carpenter's songwriting took an even deeper, contemplative turn, while she began mixing country more freely with folk and even world music influences. The singer's latest disc, 2001's symbolically-themed Time*Sex*Love, delved further into experimentation, mixing elements such as mandola, clavinger bass, electric sitar and subtle synth orchestrations into an overall style that was nearly unrecognizable perhaps as country music but no less pleasing to Carpenter's many fans.

In between more than 12 million in album sales, five Grammies and several Top Female Vocalist country music awards over her career, Carpenter has found generous amounts of her time to donate to various charity and activist work, typically for causes of literacy, the environment and social change.

"I add my name to those organizations or causes that I believe in, that I hope will make a difference, large or small, in our lives," she said. "In this day and age where the word liberal is thought of politically as a dirty word, I would describe myself proudly as a liberal. Granted, I am not running for office, so who cares?"

Carpenter said those liberal views ran in the family.

"I grew up in a household that had a proud liberal voting record. I was raised that way. In the last few years I have been proudly rabble rousing on behalf of the Campaign for a Landmine Free World, among others. I spent three consecutive Christmases entertaining the troops overseas in the last few years. I have always supported the troops and our right to exercise our freedom of speech, whether you're a taxi driver or a Dixie Chick.."

Carpenter is also spending time in the studio this summer recording her next album, expected for release this fall. At this point, she tells her fans expect almost anything from the new disc.

"I won't really know until we get in there and start messing around. I have much affection for the new songs, which is so important a feeling to have at the beginning, as opposed to having a doubting or questioning feeling. I may drop one or two, but it will be with regret and apology to those songs, as they have been bridges artistically to get me to the writing of the ones that came after them. Anyway, I do know that it will be a lot of fun to make this record as I will be getting together with some old friends and making music with some new friends as well. How can we go wrong with that?

Mary Chapin Carpenter plays the South Shore Music Circus Saturday, July 26. For tickets and information call the SSMC at (781) 383-9850

Joe Cocker

Cocker's still rockin'

Legendary performer takes Music Circus stage Aug. 1

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Like the classic bottle of fine wine, raspy voiced rocker Joe Cocker seems to improve with age. The 59-year-old got his first taste of fame in his native England in 1963 when he shared a bill with other young rock artists known then — and now — as The Rolling Stones. In those early days, Cocker earned a living as a gas fitter while moonlighting as singer "Vance Arnold" with a group called The Avengers which often performed covers by Cocker's idol, Ray Charles. By 1964, Cocker was 20 years old and the time came to leave his civil service job and start to perform under his own name — something he'll do again next week when he comes to the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset.

Throughout the rest of the 1960s, Cocker saw his career through several fits and starts before coming into his own at the end of the decade with memorable appearances on The Ed Sullivan Show and

Quick summer pasta

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

One of the many benefits of summer is a quick pasta dish based on fresh garden vegetables. One ideal combination is angel hair pasta and peas since they are both quick-cooking, and delicate. The problem with this recipe is mostly one of timing, producing both perfectly cooked pasta and peas and also managing to use a light hand in the flavor department, ignoring such common additions as pancetta, cream, cheese, or a tomato sauce. I wanted something fast, light and fresh-tasting.

Angel hair pasta is a mostly forgotten shape in most American home kitchens, but it has a unique texture and since each thin strand becomes coated with sauce, it is also quite flavorful. The problem is that it readily clumps together and the solution, one I have used with other types of pasta, is to reserve some of the cooking water (a half-cup in this case) to moisten the pasta once cooked and to thin the sauce. Now I had the perfect texture. In addition, I used 6 tablespoons of high-quality olive oil (DaVinci is my preferred supermarket olive oil and Columela is my favorite expensive brand).

Garlic was going to be key to this recipe and I quickly settled on pressed garlic (using a garlic press) rather than smashed cloves or diced garlic. I wanted very fine crushed pieces to evenly distribute throughout the sauce. I settled on three large cloves, which equals about 4 teaspoons. To prevent the garlic from clumping together, I tossed it with the olive oil before cooking.

For the peas, I found that I needed 1 1/4 pounds of garden peas to yield the 1 1/2 cups shelled peas I wanted for the dish. The peas cook in about three minutes and I found it easiest to throw them in with the pasta. Since the angel hair cooks in four minutes I just dumped them in once the pasta had boiled for one minute. That solved the problem of using two separate pots and also resolved the issue of timing.

As for cheese, true Italians might not use any at all in this sort of dish, but a healthy dose of good-quality grated Parmesan sprinkled on each serving did add a lot of flavor. Any sort of melting cheese simply turned the angel hair into something out of the musical "Hairspray." Better to keep it simple. Other ingredients include a tablespoon of lemon juice to brighten the flavor. I tried wine and vermouth and both added an unwelcome element of heat. As for some chopped herbs I tried parsley, basil, mint, and thyme. I preferred parsley or basil — 2 tablespoons of chopped parsley or 1/4 cup thinly sliced basil leaves. A nice addition was a couple of cups of cherry or grape tomatoes halved and tossed in at the last minute. Also, I liked the addition of a couple of cups of sliced white mushrooms. I sautéed them in a small amount of oil, and though it takes a few extra minutes, the added flavor is worth the effort.

ANGEL HAIR PASTA WITH FRESH PEAS

Angel hair and peas don't actually combine well; one is a long thread and one is a tiny orb. The pasta becomes coated with the sauce and the peas end up in a pool at the bottom of the pan. Once the pasta is doled out, the peas can be spooned over the top of each portion. A small inconvenience for a quick, flavorful summer dish.

1 pound angel hair pasta

1 1/2 cups shelled peas from about 1 1/4 pounds pods

6 tablespoons best-quality olive oil

1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon pressed or minced garlic from about 4 large cloves

1 tablespoon lemon juice

1/2 teaspoon salt

2 tablespoons chopped flat leaf parsley or 1/4 cup thinly sliced fresh basil leaves

Freshly ground black pepper

Freshly grated Parmesan cheese

1. Bring 4 quarts of water to a rolling boil in a large pot. Add pasta and 1 tablespoon salt and cook according to al dente package instructions, about 4 minutes. Once the pasta has cooked for 1 minute, throw in the peas. Drain pasta and peas, reserving 1/2 cup pasta cooking water.

2. Meanwhile, stir together 3 tablespoons of olive oil and the pressed garlic. Heat a large heavy-duty skillet over medium heat. Add the garlic/olive oil mixture and cook until very fragrant and the garlic has turned from translucent to white with a slight touch of blond. Turn off burner. Add the lemon juice, salt, parsley or basil, remaining olive oil, pasta, peas and about half of the reserved pasta water. Toss to coat the pasta adding the remaining pasta cooking water a little at a time if necessary to adequately moisten the angel hair. Transfer to warm platter or individual bowls and serve immediately with freshly ground black pepper to taste. Sprinkle individual servings with freshly grated Parmesan cheese.

Serves 4.

MUSHROOM VARIATION

Place one tablespoon each of olive oil and butter in the skillet over medium-high heat. Once the butter has stopped foaming, add 2 cups sliced white mushrooms and a generous pinch of salt. Sauté, stirring occasionally, until most of the liquid released from the mushrooms has evaporated. Transfer the mushrooms to a small bowl, cover to keep warm, and begin the above recipe. Add the mushrooms back to the skillet in step 2 along with the pasta and peas.

CHERRY TOMATO VARIATION

Add 2 cups halved cherry or grape tomatoes to the skillet along with the pasta and peas in step 2.

Music on menu at Mount Blue benefit

Swinging Steaks.

"They both have such big followings here and know how to get the crowd going," said Bowe. "I'm thrilled they both will be performing. The Swinging Steaks are like the all-time favorite band at Mount Blue."

In pulling together this event each year Bowe said finding the right entertainment is a key component, in addition to having a deserving charity. She said there are so many choices in musical entertainment, but decided these two bands stood out. The two bands were also incredibly willing to help out, she said.

"I wanted something local, something fun," she said. "And they both deserve to be seen by an appreciative audience."

The Joe Leary Band, featuring Scituate's own Joe Leary, performed at last year's event and earned rave reviews from partygoers. The band's mix of songs, from old Beatles tunes to its own music, had the crowd in a festive mood under the white tent on the grounds of the restaurant co-owned by Aerosmith legends Steven Tyler and Joe Perry. The band heated up an already steamy summer night with its blend of rock and traditional music.

As Bowe acknowledged, people are able to get in the spirit of the evening because the band has such a great time.

"Joe and his group just love to perform and that comes across very easily," she said. "People pour in the door to hear them."

Leary said he couldn't be happier playing the annual gala. He says the cause is important and he also respects the relationship with the folks at Mount Blue.

"The people at Mount Blue are great, they treat their musicians better than any other place and the cause makes a huge difference," he said. "We are just happy to be associated with it."

The band has been together about three years, but most band members have 25 years or more each performing. Leary loves the setup at the event and called the crowd "electric." He described the event as "first-class all the way."

His band will be performing a number of original songs as well as "staple" rock tunes. In describing his band's sound, Leary said, "it's rock and roll, no matter how you slice. We may have some country in there, but it's all rock."

The band is currently working on a CD, titled "Fade to Blue" which is due out in September. It will feature original material from the band.

As for the Swinging Steaks, get ready to get down with some more rock and country alternative music. CREEM magazine called Swinging Steaks "the best country-rock out of Boston since Harvard student Gram Parsons put together his International Submarine Band." Swinging Steaks is a five-man band out of Boston, fueled by dual singers/songwriters Jamie Walker and Tim Giovanniello.

The band has produced seven album's so far, including "Southside of the Sky" and its latest "Sunday Best". The Steaks have appeared with John Fogerty, the Black Crowes, The Band and Hank Williams, Jr., to name a few. On Sunday, July 6, the band opened for Leonard Skynnard at a show in New Hampshire.

Swinging Steaks can be seen regularly at Mount Blue, with an upcoming performance on Thursday, Aug. 8.

"They're just fabulous," gushes Bowe. "Their country/rock sound has a wide appeal. And they are so willing to support this cause."

The entertainment doesn't end with the music, either. Guests at the annual bash will be treated to another silent auction as well as a live auction. More than 100 items had been donated as of late last week, with all proceeds assisting Habitat for Humanity's effort to build a home in Norwell. Karen Kane of Norwell has been orchestrating the auction and Bowe promises some interesting items up for bid.

Items for the silent auction include restaurant gift certificates, original art, spa sessions and much more. "There's everything you can think of up for grabs," added Bowe. The live auction will again this year include several donated and signed items from Aerosmith. The band donated a drum head with signatures from all the members, a signed copy of the band's new book "Walk This Way", as well as Mount Blue T-shirts signed by Joe Perry and Steven Tyler. Bowe says the two have been very supportive of the cause.

"They're excited about the cause," she said. "Steven is completely behind the cause and they have been very involved in the decision."

While she couldn't say for sure, guests might be able to spot the legendary band members at the event, something they have attended numerous times in the past. As in past years, Bowe expects the gala to sell out, attracting more than 600 people. That's good news for the Habitat group.

"This will mark our largest fundraising effort," said Colleen Cimini, public relations chairman for the Habitat project in Norwell. "The Mount Blue annual party is always a great success and this one is sure to be as well."

Tickets at $50 per person are still available and can be purchased in advance at Mount Blue in Norwell Center or by mailing a check for the number of reservations you want, sent to Mount Blue, P.O.Box 916, Norwell, 02061. Include your reservation number, address and name with the mailed check.

Heavenly hydrangeas shrubs provide long-lasting summer blooms

Green thumbs up

By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

As a nearly perfect summer weekend came to a close, I took a quick stroll through the garden to admire the beauty of the early evening landscape.

Throughout the gardens and the adjoining meadow, tiny beacons of light flickered high and low as fireflies flashed their familiar signals rekindling fond memories of my childhood. In those carefree summer days gone by, we would spend hours running barefoot across the lawn capturing the little glow worms and gently place them in grass-lined jars, piercing holes in the metal lids to ensure their survival. All through the night I could barely sleep, as I lay mesmerized by the mysterious blinking of these little treasures on my bedside table. The following morning, I would release the luminescent jewels, which were much less appealing during the daylight hours, and recapture the magic when the veil of darkness returned.

Dusk transforms the vivid hues and distinct forms of the colorful July perennial border into a muted watercolor of blended tones and hazy, blurred silhouettes. The evening landscape possesses a unique and captivating serenity that enables even the most critical gardener to temporarily view the landscape as a whole. For a fleeting moment, weeds and imperfections are forgotten as the lawn, gardens and surrounding woodlands become a unified panorama.

Only the palest colors can be discerned as darkness falls, with white flowers, foliage and structures having the greatest impact. For those who are often obligated to view their gardens only as twilight descends, plants that feature pastel flowers or variegated foliage may offer the greatest enjoyment. The trunks of white birch trees, the stunning variegated leaves of red-and yellow-twigged dogwoods, the large, pristine heads of white phlox "David", and clusters of "Becky" shasta daisies glow in the fading light of the July landscape.

Perhaps the most dramatic and impressive evening blooms are provided by Hydrangea arborescens "Annabelle", an improved cultivar of a native shrub and a hardy, reliable bloomer. Massive, symmetrical clusters of sparkling white flowers, slightly tinted green, appear in July and persist well into late summer. The enormous blossoms, which may be up to a foot across, are held erect above the large leaves on stems 3 to 4 feet in height. To promote sturdy stems laden with giant blooms, cut the shrub essentially to the ground in early spring. Snowball hydrangeas, as they are commonly called, bloom on new wood and this severe pruning, in conjunction with fertilizer and plentiful moisture, will encourage larger leaves and flowerheads. Grow "Annabelle" in a rich, moist, well-drained soil in sun or partial shade and be sure to irrigate during periods of drought.

The "PeeGee'" Hydrangea, so-named as an abbreviation for the botanical name H. paniculata "grandiflora", boasts attractive pyramidal clusters that provide lasting color from midsummer through autumn. Arching branches produce coarse foliage and present a rounded form that may reach 15 feet or more at maturity. The mostly sterile florets open creamy white and gradually fade to mauve pink as the season progresses. At the end of the growing season, the flower clusters turn soft beige offering excellent winter interest. Once the flowers have fully opened, they may be cut and dried for long-lasting indoor decorations.

Often pruned to a single trunk creating a small, handsome, ornamental tree, this hydrangea grows well in sun or partial shade. As one of the hardiest and longest-lived members of the family, this heavy feeding shrub is best provided with rich, organic soil when planted and it welcomes an annual application of fertilizer and mulch. Selective pruning need only be done in early March to thin or rejuvenate an overgrown specimen but plants do bloom on new wood so even a hard pruning will not compromise the abundant summer blooms and will promote larger leaves and flowers.

Another cultivar of the panicle hydrangea, H. paniculata "Tardiva" blooms even later in the season as a 6- to 8-foot shrub. White pyramidal flowerheads are a mix of sterile ray florets and starry fertile flowers and appear in late August and early September. This compact cultivar has also become available in tree-form in recent years and demonstrates especially deep green, lustrous foliage.

My personal favorite member of the Hydrangea family is the oakleaf hydrangea (H. quercifolia), which displays 10-inch conical blossoms in late July with a mixture of fertile and sterile flowers. An advocate for plants that offer multiple seasons of interest, I love this somewhat coarse but appealing shrub which exhibits distinctive, large lobed leaves that are fuzzy as they emerge in the spring and change to a rich lustrous bronze in autumn. New stem growth is a soft, peachy tan and reminds me of velvety antlers. Older suckering twigs are cinnamon in color and exfoliate to provide marvelous textural interest during the winter months. Reaching a height of 6 feet and a width of up to 10 feet across, this handsome shrub is ideal for the woodland edge as it thrives in semishade but will flourish in brighter settings given moisture-retentive, well-drained soil. Selected cultivars, including "Snow Queen" and "Alice", have showy, predominantly sterile flowers and "Snowflake" presents double white flowers.

These deciduous, hardy members of the Hydrangea family offer reliable summer blooms that positively glow in the evening landscape. Add one or more varieties to your garden and enjoy their luxuriant blooms as you chase fireflies at twilight across a soft velvety lawn.

before a half-million people at Woodstock. In 1970, Joe sold $3 million worth of records in America alone. His first three albums went platinum and Playboy voted him number one vocalist in their annual jazz and rock poll. At the height of his fame, Cocker toured non-stop until he was almost literally and figuratively worn out. He continued making albums and songs like "Guilty," "The Moons A Harsh Mistress" and "You Are So Beautiful." Songs that have become Cocker classics, all dating from the darkest days, back in the mid 1970s.

As the 1980s dawned, Cocker was invited by The Crusaders to join them on a song they had written exclusively for him — "I'm So Glad I'm Standing Here Today." The lyrics said it best and Joe received a hero's welcome when he performed the song at the Grammy Awards in February of 1982. His duet with Jennifer Warnes on "Up Where We Belong", the theme from the feature film "An Officer And A Gentleman," brought an appearance at the 1983 Academy Awards and a hit worldwide, including his first to go to number one on the American charts.

Since then, Cocker has sung theme songs for movies "9 1/2 Weeks," "Harry and The Hendersons," "Bull Durham," and "An Innocent Man." In 1991, he recorded "Sorry Seems To Be The Hardest Word" on the Elton John/Bernie Taupin tribute album, "Two Rooms," which has sold over three million copies to date.

His old songs continue to find new listeners while also remaining popular with earlier generations. His concert performances are often legendary. Unlike many aging stars who tend to slow their pace and lyrically go on about losing a step or dying, Joe's songs are chock full of optimism, fun and good memories. New mixes of great old tunes like "Summer in The City" are now imbued with a contemporary funky Reggae edge.

(Joe Cocker appears in concert at the South Shore Music Circus, Sohier Street, Cohasset, on Friday, Aug. 1. For tickets and information, call 617/931-2787 or visit www. southshoremusic-circus.org).

PROTECTING YOUR EARS AT WORK
Workers have a number of options for protecting their hearing. Expandable foam plugs are made from a formable material designed to expand and conform to the shape of the ear canal. Pre-molded, reusable plugs, on the other hand, are made from silicone, plastic or rubber and are manufactured as "one-size-fits-all" or are available in different sizes. Sometimes, a different size is needed for each ear. Canal caps, which often resemble earplugs, have tips made of a formable or pre-molded material on a flexible metal or plastic band. The main advantage of canal caps is that their bands allow them to be conveniently left hanging around the neck during quiet moments. Finally, earmuffs completely cover the ears.
Pilots, tool operators, factory workers, even rock musicians wear ear protectors while working, and it would be a good idea to take a lesson from them. Do you spend a good deal of your time in a noisy environment? Have you been experiencing hearing difficulties regularly? There really isn't a good reason to wait for the problem to go away because it won't. Call us instead at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, 781-337-1144. And arrange for a free, painless, comprehensive hearing test at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth.
P.S. Those with heavy beards or who wear eyeglasses may find that their facial hair or the temples of their glasses break the seal of earmuffs' cushions, in which case earplugs may be the best option.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

WEDNESDAY, JULY 23

The sun enters Leo at 2:04 a.m., remaining there until August 23. At 5:14 a.m. the Taurus moon aligns with Venus and becomes inactive until 7:42 p.m. That means that new starts are off limits today. Instead, finish projects already begun, handle routine chores and errands. Planetary action turns around completely at 7:42 p.m., when the moon enters lively Gemini. Fun and games are back in the picture this evening.

THURSDAY, JULY 24

If you have a clear plan of action and stick to it, you can be most productive today. A Gemini moon suggests you handle a variety of projects, rather than one that demands mental focus and precision. This is an excellent period for offering proposals, promoting your ideas. Slow down between 1:51-4:51 p.m., when the moon forms a challenging 90-degree alignment to Mars. Sidestep impatience, irritability.

FRIDAY, JULY 25

A lunar opposition to Pluto may spark emotional thunderstorms this morning. Don't make waves. Storm clouds move out, and sunny astrological weather returns for the remainder of the day. An excellent period for initiating new enterprises and signing contracts is in effect between 8:00 a.m.-5:38 p.m. The Gemini moon aligns with Mercury and Jupiter until 5:38 p.m., when it becomes inactive. Don't be a hermit tonight. Mercury and Jupiter conjoin at 23-degrees Leo, setting the stage for a fun evening.

SATURDAY, JULY 26

The moon enters the sign Cancer at 7:23 a.m., bringing a focus on home, family matters this weekend. Give extra attention to children, pets. Be more nurturing and sensitive to the needs of loved ones. Tackle projects you have been putting off, especially jobs that need to be done in and around your home. A lunar alignment to Saturn makes for a quiet evening. Follow through on promises you have made to others.

SUNDAY, JULY 27

Yesterday's advice applies to today as well. The moon continues active travel in the sign Cancer. Influences are prime for a family picnic. It's also a good day for puttering around the house and taking care of odds and ends of things. If you have been experiencing problems with another, now is the time to clear the air. Let go of past hurts, resentments; forgive, forget and start anew.

MONDAY, JULY 28

Be sure to start this day in a good mood. The dark side of a new moon is in full force and effect. In addition, the moon travels in emotional Cancer. Others may be grouchy, irritable. Don't rock the boat. Channel your energy constructively. Make up a list of things to do and stick to it. The Cancer moon aligns with Venus at 3:25 p.m. and becomes inactive. At 4:17 p.m. the final windup to the new moon begins, when the moon enters Leo. Plan a quiet evening. Prayer and meditation will help you to find peace of mind.

TUESDAY, JULY 29

The new moon culminates at 2:53 a.m., when the sun and moon conjoin at 6-degrees of Leo. The planet Venus enters Leo at 12:25 a.m., remaining there until August 22. However, the planet Mars takes center stage. Mars, standing at 10-degrees of the sign Pisces, begins retrograde travel at 3:37 a.m. Mars will turn direct on September 27. Mars represents action, energy, motivation, desire. This is a period to slow down, back up, reconsider, think things through.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 30

The Leo moon aligns with Jupiter, generating an upbeat mood this morning. Projects should come together easily. Mercury moves into Virgo at 10:06 a.m., remaining there until October 6. Mercury will travel in retrograde motion when it reaches 26-degrees of Virgo on August 28. It is best to initiate new activities between 10:06-11:46 a.m., when the Leo moon becomes inactive. At 10:27 p.m. a Virgo moon takes over.

THURSDAY, JULY 31

Gear up for a hectic day. Expect the unexpected. Avoid making rigid plans or placing yourself in high stress situations. Don't act on impulse or make important decisions. The moon travels in Virgo, and forms a challenging 180-degree alignment to Mars at 4:13 p.m. In addition, Mercury, the planetary ruler of Virgo, opposes Uranus. A good way to let off steam is to spend extra time working out with exercise routines. Eat light foods and avoid stimulants.

USS SALEM Concert Series is proud to present
Hot Tamale Brass Band
Dixieland Jazz and Patriotic Tunes
Sunday, July 27, 2003 • 2-4pm
Led by colorful Micky Bones, formerly of New Orleans, the Hot Tamale Brass Band keeps alive the marching band tradition which celebrates all aspects of life. The Hot Tamales have led Barnum and Bailey elephants to lunch at Faneuil Hall, played for Bobby Orr's Ice Skating Party on Boston's Public Garden, and marched in Boston First Night Parade. In traditional New Orleans dress, they enliven all occasions and their music evokes a good time and percussion. The Hot Tamales bring hot music wherever they go!

Board curbs bump outs

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Selectmen have decided the controversy has gone on long enough and the bump-outs saga is over. In a 3-1 vote Tuesday, the bump-outs met their fate, and will no longer be a feature of the village plans.

Ralph Dormitzer, along with members of the Committee on Town History, didn't even take their seats before standing side by side, petitions in hand, ready to make bump-outs another chapter in the town's history.

"What is it going to take from the citizens that will convince you we don't want the bump-outs?" said Wig Pierson. "We don't want the bump-outs."

While Dormitzer said the petitions displayed a "very large cross section" of residents in town, selectmen said names on the first petition, which were researched by the town clerk, showed a good deal to be those of children or young teens.

"I am appalled that more than one-third aren't registered voters," said Selectman Tom Callahan.

However, Dormitzer said the current signatures were not

The Howland shallop, which is named after Pilgrim John Howland's wife Elizabeth Tilley, arrives in Cohasset Harbor after sailing up from Plymouth on Monday. The shallop continued on its 200-mile voyage up the coast Tuesday and will arrive in Augusta, Maine on Aug. 11.

Among a sea of crisp white boats.. the antiquated "Elizabeth Tilley" made a grand entrance as she glided into Cohasset Harbor on the first stop of her maiden voyage Monday.

On her way up the coast to the trading post of Old Fort Western on the Kennebec River in Maine, Cohasset is one of only a few lucky towns to receive her as a guest.

The vessel is the culmination of a two-year project by members of Plimoth Plantation's Marine Artisans Department.

Crew dressed in period clothing said they "rowed and were towed" throughout their journey up from Plymouth because they didn't have adequate wind to carry their sails. Barbara Dillon, who was asked to coordinate the Cohasset leg of the

Renaissance group continues to care about downtown area

With plans for revitalizing the village taking center stage and talk of a town beautification committee – many may not be aware of a group in town that has quietly gone about caring for the village "look" for more than a decade.

The Village Renaissance Committee, whose roots date back to 1990, not only keeps many of the window boxes full of flowers for many downtown merchants and businesses, but it is also responsible for improvements to the James Brook Walkway that runs from the parking lot to South Main Street, the town pump in front of Cohasset Hardware and the pocket park next to

Accident cause is under investigation

George Roukounakis, owner of the Citgo Station in the village, thought the sound of screeching brakes he heard Tuesday afternoon was due to teenagers showing off behind the wheel until he heard a crash and saw a car inside the front door of Tedeschi's.

Roukounakis, who reached the scene first along with a passerby, said the driver of the gray Mercedes 450SL convertible was crying and bleeding from cuts on her face and knees and was badly shaken up.

Cohasset police are investigating the series of events that led Shirley Marten, 71, of 78 Nichols Road to completely back out of one of the angled parking spaces in front of the popular convenience store on South Main Street so fast the car left skid marks, only then drive right back in like a bullet and through the plate glass front door.

journey, said it's hard to imagine the way the men did the voyage many years ago, not knowing what the weather would be.

Crew members were invited to spend the night at volunteers' homes in town in order to get adequate rest for the next day's voyage. Dillon said she hosted two crew members who, "Went to bed fairly early. It was quite a trip!"

The captain and a few other crew members slept on board under the deck.

The vessel, which is named after Pilgrim John Howland's wife is the culmination of a two-year project by members of Plimoth Plantation's Marine Artisans Department led by department manager, Peter Arenstam with help from volunteers and interns.

A shallop is defined as a "small open boat fitted with oars or sails, or both, and used primarily in shallow water." In the 17th century, this type of boat was generally taken aboard larger vessels, such as the Mayflower during long voyages. It could be taken apart, stored below decks and then reassembled when needed for coast exploration.

The original shallop traded corn for beaver pelts to be sent back to England. Two years ago, the shallop was commissioned by The Pilgrim John Howland Society to be built at Plimoth Plantation. The boat is built of oak by artisans using 17th-century tools as it would have been built 380 years ago. The "Elizabeth Tilley" is 38 feet long with a beam of 10 feet, four inches, and a depth admidships of four feet, six inches, based on measurements from 17th-century shipbuilding texts. The Howland shallop has a crew of 12 and is scheduled to arrive in Augusta, Maine on Aug. 11.

Tax bills due, OK to pay online

The Town of Cohasset has issued Fiscal Year 2004's first-quarter tax bills, due this Friday, Aug. 1. Anyone who has not received their tax bill should contact the Board of Assessors at 781-383-4114 to confirm their correct mailing address or the Treasurer-Collector at 781-383-4102 for a copy of the tax bill.

The Town of Cohasset now offers residents the option of paying their real estate tax bills via the Internet. The eBill system takes the town's billing data and posts it on the Metropolitan Communications (MCC) Web site, which allows residents to view and pay their real estate tax bills. At 25-cents-per-transaction, the new payment option costs residents less than a postage stamp.

Residents can arrange for bill payments to be automatically withdrawn from their checking or savings account, and eBill will be accepting credit card payments shortly.

Currently, residents are able to pay their real estate tax bills with eBill. Next month, residents will also be able to pay motor vehicle excise taxes and water/sewer bills using the eBill system.

To find out more information, or to make a payment, please visit the eBill web site at www.mcc.net.

Keep well clinics

The Cohasset Board of Health monthly keep well clinics for August with Judy Fitzsimmons, R.N., P.H.N. and Jan Bennett, R.N. are Thursday Aug. 14 at 11 a.m. during the Senior Center luncheon and Thursday Aug. 28 from 1–3 p.m. Harborview senior housing off Elm Street (behind the police department).

Save the date for the Cohasset Health Fair on Tuesday, Sept. 9 from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. at Second Congregational Church (next to Cohasset Town Hall).

Keep well clinics are for all town residents regardless of age!

Flag depository at American Legion

The American Legion, George H. Mealy Post 118 in Cohasset has a way for the public to be able to bring them their tattered and worn flags so they may be properly and ceremoniously destroyed. The Flag Depository, located in front of the legion post at 98 Summer St., has the look and shape of an American flag. This solid metal Flag Depository protects the flags until they are removed for storage and kept until the time of the desecration ceremony. The Herb Chambers Automobile Dealerships made this service possible through a donation to the post. Everyone is invited to bring his or her retired flags to the depository.

Police stunned by training incident in less-lethal munitions

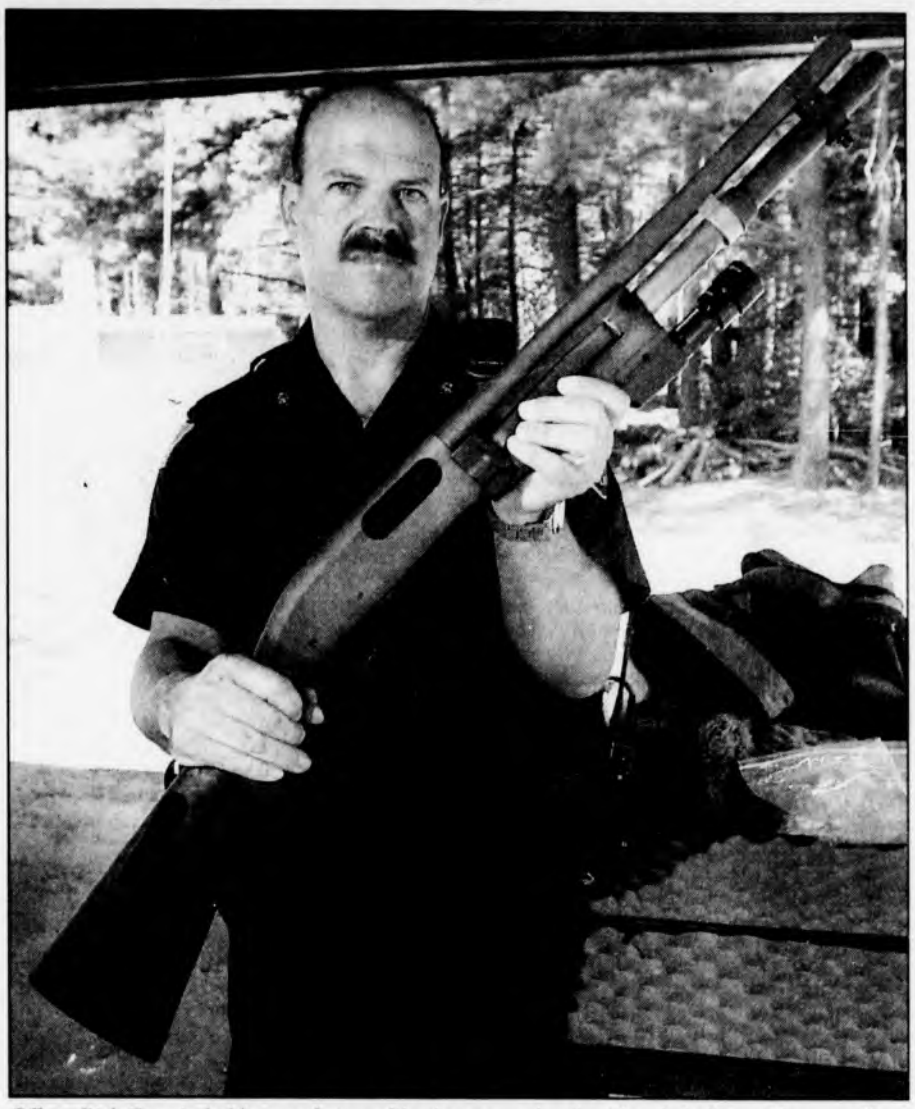
By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset police aren't laughing about a training incident in the use of "less lethal" weaponry which left two officers with 9-inch diameter, severe bruises on their buttocks and out of work for several days.

"Less lethal" weapons provide officers with another tool in handling a dangerous suspect, who might be wielding a knife, for example. In this case, officers could disarm a perpetrator by using a 12-gauge shotgun to fire a small beanbag loaded with lead shot or liquid-filled "hydro-impact round" stunning him.

Three officers — who would serve as instructors on the weaponry for the rest of the department — attended a training session last week with the blessing of the police chief. But what they didn't expect was to be asked to test the impact of the projectiles themselves.

Two Cohasset officers were in the first group of about 10 who were told to line up to see how it feels to be shot, according to Officer Rick Grassie, who also attended the workshop. Grassie and others at the training session, who were in the second group, declined to participate in the demonstration after they saw a Boston cop's injury. The Boston police officer's pants were torn on impact, exposing a bleeding wound. When Grassie saw the Cohasset officers' bruises, which were the size of a Frisbee, he told them to report the incident to the chief.



Officer Rick Grassie holds up a shotgun, like the one used to fire "less lethal" munitions at officers during a training workshop.

This photo shows an empty shotgun shell and the contents of the "bean bag" munitions. The bag does not break on impact but was torn open and emptied to show the lead shot it contained.

Police Chief Robert Jackson sent the officers to South Shore Hospital where they were treated and released and received tetanus shots. The officers, whom the chief declined to identify, were out of work for several days while the wounds healed, costing the town about $1,200 in overtime. The course cost $750 for each participant.

The incident has caused the department some embarrassment when Craig D. Carone, president of New Millennium Products, Inc., which conducted the session, was quoted in a published report comparing the impact with being hit by a paintball. Callers subsequently have made jokes and police have been the subject of taunts in town describing them as "wimps."

In a telephone interview, Carone said the rounds that hit the officers were filled with liquid, like paint balls, but have more impact.

That proved to be the case in a demonstration at the Scituate Rod & Gun Club, a shooting range off Route 3A this week, in which Grassie showed the difference between the impact of a paintball fired from a paintball gun and the type of weapon used at the training seminar. The "non-lethal" rounds went right through the target which had a backing equivalent to drywall used in construction, while the paint balls did not.

Grassie said the officers stood on the three-yard line at the range on Moon Island, were shot from about 12 feet away, although Carone disputes the distance saying the officers were shot from 21 feet away. The officers were shot with a "hydro-round" that travels at 625 feet per second with 61 pounds of energy. Depending on the gun, paintballs travel at 200-400 feet per second, he said. The officers were not provided protective suits as shown on the video in the company CD.

Carone, who explained that less-lethal munitions can kill, said the officers were wearing BDUs (which are made of heavy duty material) and the shots were aimed at their buttocks. Rubberized suits would not have given the officers the opportunity "to feel like what it is to be a subject on the street," he said.

Carone said about 75 percent of those who take the company's classes around the country "opt to take the hit." He explained the officers attended a full day of class on the first day in which they studied case law, statistics, operating procedures and the affect of bean-bag rounds; they were also shown pictures, videos and graphs of what happens to those shot with the less-lethal munitions.

Grassie said the initial group of officers took part in the demonstration because they inherently trusted the trainer. "We relied on his training and relied on his knowledge," he said. Grassie said it wasn't a case of "not being able to take it.

"Neither officer came crying," he said, but it was department policy to report the incident.

"Needless to say we'll never enroll in that company's classes again," Grassie said.

Maritime Museum open for summer

The Cohasset Historical Society's Maritime Museum at 4 Elm St., Cohasset Village is open for its summer season. Currently the museum is open weekdays from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., excluding Mondays. The Maritime Museum is an 18th-century ship chandlery, originally located on Border Street at Cohasset Harbor.

Since 1960, the Maritime Museum, the historical name for which is "Bates Ship Chandlery," has featured exhibits portraying Cohasset's long maritime history. Exhibits include ship models, 19th-century fishing gear, navigation instruments, charts, illustrations, shipwright's tools, relics from shipwrecks. Other exhibits show the history of lifesaving and of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse. On the second floor, there is a general collection of historical artifacts from early Cohasset, including cordwainer's tools, housewright's tools, old school chairs and desks, a "village apothecary" and a selection of artifacts from Tower Bros. Store and chandlery, once also located on Tower's Wharf at the harbor. Come in to see the society's historian or other volunteers, afternoons at the Cohasset Maritime Museum.

For more information, call 781-383-1434; and the Cohasset Historical Society's mailing address is P.O. Box 627, Cohasset 02025.

Snow fence distance becomes an issue

Dune protection is goal of group

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The fledgling dunes along Atlantic Avenue across from Sandy Beach may soon be protected by snow fencing if details about how close the fencing can be placed to the roadway are worked out.

Town Manager Mark Haddad told selectmen Police Chief Robert Jackson was concerned about public safety and said the fencing would need to be five feet from the street to allow for adequate plowing in the winter.

Jim Shipsky, a member of the Cohasset Environmental Support Group behind the project, said that would defeat the purpose of the fencing, because there would still be room for people to pull their cars up onto the side of the road and damage the dunes. The project has the OK from the Conservation Commission.

Selectman Merle Brown suggested the fencing be placed at the 2-1/2-foot mark, parallel with the telephone poles which are stationary and do not interfere with plowing.

Haddad said he would find a time where he and the police chief could meet with Shipsky to finalize the particulars. Haddad also said he would like DPW Supt. Carl Sestito to be involved with the decision, but will have to wait until he returns from vacation.

Members of the environmental group said the fragile dunes have been destroyed by people walking and driving over them. The two-foot high wooden slats of snow fencing would serve as a physical reminder to help keep people off the dunes, allowing Mother Nature the opportunity to take over and repair the dune grass that has been damaged on its own, Shipsky said. Over time, it is expected that the dunes would bury the fence so it would be completely out of sight.

Tedeschi's accident attracts several Boston TV channels

Reservoir Road, was standing just five feet from the front door of Tedeschi's when the accident occurred about 4:15 p.m. and witnessed the entire incident. He thinks there was something wrong with the car because the engine sounded revved up.

"She got in the car and must have kept her foot on the brake all the time going in reverse because the car was going so fast," he said, explaining when she put the car into drive it shot forward from whence it came and into the front of the store.

Less than half an hour after the accident, TV crews from Boston stations descended on the scene when word of that an older driver was involved in the mishap. An 86-year-old man from California recently made headlines across the country when he apparently pressed the gas pedal instead of the brake, killing 10 people at a farmer's market and injuring many others. The incident has heightened debate about whether the elderly need to pass a driving test.

However, it is not clear if Marten's age was a factor. Police have cited her with operating negligently. No airbags deployed because the Mercedes is a 1976 model, police said. No one was seriously injured in Tuesday's accident. Marten and 15-year-old, Katy Jenkins of Spring Street, who was looking at the gum near the check out at Tedeschi's and was cut by broken glass, were both transported to hospital. Marten, who had lacerations on her knees, was treated and released, police said. Katy's injuries were apparently minor; she could be seen on TV giving interviews that evening.

" She got in the car and must have kept her foot on the brake all the time going in reverse because the car was going so fast."

— Matthew Ogrodnik, eye witness

Marten's Mercedes crushed a small bicycle frightening many witnesses that a child may have been trapped under the car, including Roukounakis, who saw the bike and immediately started looking under the car for a youngster.

"I looked under the car to make sure no kid was under there," he said.

However, the bike's owner, Dana Ducharme, 14, of 62 Spring St. whose cousin was the girl hurt inside the store, emerged from Tedeschi's and said he and his girlfriend were looking at the soda at the back of Tedeschi's when they heard the crash.

Fifth-grader Robert Jones, 10, was driving by with his mother Jacky Kurtz, when the incident occurred. He said the driver "backed up really fast."

Kurtz said the woman "pulled out of there with speed and then headed right for the front door of the building." Kurtz drove immediately to the police station on Elm Street, but police were already responding to the incident.

Richard Hall, store manager, said he was waiting on a customer at the time of the accident. There were about 15 people in the store at the time, he said.

"I heard the crash and looked to my left. The girl (Katy Jenkins) was screaming mostly out of shock," he said.

John Gurney, director of store services for the Tedeschi chain, who was on site Wednesday morning along with Building Inspector Bob Egan, said the damage was mostly cosmetic and the store opened for business at 7 a.m.

"The structural integrity is in tact," he said.

"It's not as pretty as it used to be," Gurney said about the plywood in place of one of the front windows. "But we hope we can bring that back." He expected repairs to be completed by Monday. Tedeschi's shares the building with its landlord, Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, which is next door.

Gurney said company wide, Tedeschi's experiences "one or two" accidents a year in which drivers hit the front of stores. It's usually due to the driver pressing down on the gas instead of the brake pedal, he said. When Tedeschi's redesigns parking lots, the company adds Jersey-type barriers or horseshoe-shaped metal bollards to prevent accidents, he said.

Investigating Officer Brian Curran pointed out the village is full of children and the accident could have been much worse. "It could have been really bad," he said.

This was not the first time a car drove into a village storefront.

In October 1994, a driver pressed the gas pedal instead of the brake and drove into the front window at Cohasset News nearly hitting a man at the photocopier.

A Cohasset woman, 71, accidentally drove her Mercedes into the front door of Tedeschi's on Tuesday afternoon.

An older observer said Tuesday, people have been driving into storefronts in the village for years, and said two occurred years ago at Dependable Cleaners.

History committee lobbies to ditch the bump outs

advertised and with "a little bit of outreach, I would expect we could double or triple the numbers."

Lou Harvey, who was there to show support for Dormitzer, said selectmen were right in saying the petitions should include as many of the town's voters as possible and acknowledges that "signatures collected in this way are not fully reliable." However, he also urged selectmen to take the issue seriously and said, "it's not so much the fact that the bump-outs are a good idea or a bad idea, but the fact that they are a big deal and we ought to treat them like they're a big deal."

Noting that selectmen are in favor of the plans because they see pedestrian safety as an issue that can be addressed through bump-outs, Pierson said, "Name the date, year and time of the last pedestrian accident in town. No one has any idea because it's a figment of people's imagination," he said.

"We were very lucky tonight," said Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris, in reference to the car accident at Tedeschi's that happened hours before.

Selectman Fred Koed said that it would make sense for a decision to be made because residents could either force them to decide, or selectmen "could use their better judgement and do it now."

Town Manager Mark Haddad said because the Waterfield Group was directed to go ahead with village plans, there would be a cost to the town if told it needed to redirect, which selectmen said they were fully aware of.

However, in the end, any plans made could be subject to change, depending on whether the Greenbush line moves forward. Currently, the project is on hold, pending a decision by the governor, and could be postponed indefinitely, which would greatly impact what needs to be done to the village because the MBTA planned to fix up the town parking lot..

"The whole package is going to have to be looked at," said McMorris.

Callahan couldn't be swayed in his decision and said, "I have yet to hear one articulate reason against them. All we've had is a shouting match."

"Why don't you listen to the people who voted you in for once," said Peter Pratt from the second row.

Koed said he thought the board should take the petitions into consideration and take out the bump-outs. He also said the board should vote on each individual bump-out proposed in the future.

The topic of much discussion, bump-outs are part of the plans designed by the Waterfield Group for the town's $1.8 million Village Revitalization Project. Officials say bump outs at crosswalks would enhance safety because they allow pedestrians to walk out beyond the length of the adjacent parked cars to check for oncoming traffic before venturing across the street.

After attending a village walk around with members of the Waterfield Group, selectmen had a better idea of what the group's plans entailed. Painted markings on the streets showed the bump-outs, and traffic tests were conducted to make sure they would work.

After the walk around, Haddad asked DPW workers to place traffic delineators on the street markings to give residents a better feel for how bump-outs would affect the village. With the addition of the very visible markers came a petition, written by Dormitzer, opposing their existence. The petition was signed by more than 300 Cohasset residents. Copies of the petitions were stationed at various downtown shops including Cohasset Hardware, French Memories, and Tedeschi's.

The petitions were first brought before selectmen two weeks ago, which resulted in the decision to possibly include the bump-outs as an item at town meeting. But many residents didn't think that was good enough.

Coming back for round two, Dormitzer had more than doubled the number of signatures collected, with a new total of 771. The figure included previous signatures, and the total must have been the magic number to make the selectmen reconsider.

In a 3-1 vote, with Callahan opposed, selectmen decided to remove the bump-outs from the plan and that any future bump-outs drawn by the Waterfield Group would need to be voted on an individual basis. They also decided to postpone any definite plans until they receive a decision from the governor about plans for the train.

The proposed bump-out in front of Dependable Cleaners may could still be a part of the plans because it would provide handicapped access to the sidewalk.

The traffic delineators marking the proposed bump-outs will be removed and the island at the top of Depot Court will be put back, restoring the village to its pre-bump-out state.

Renaissance group continues to care about downtown area

Tedeschi's.

In 1990, Jackie Dormitzer, along with Elizabeth Christoffel, volunteered to coordinate the committee as a way for merchants and townspeople to work together to beautify and invigorate the village. Philip H. Smith, who used to own Designer's Creations on Ripley Road, and is currently an independent interior designer, conceived the idea and declared 1990 as the year of the village's renaissance.

Seeing tattered awnings, peeling paint, dirty sidewalks, and empty storefronts Dormitzer and Christoffel remembered better years for the village.

One of the biggest projects the committee has had to date, is the replication of the old town pump, which was installed in the spring of 1991. The committee took Noel Ripley's creative idea and brought it before selectmen in the fall of 1990 and after much help from the community, the project was completed in the spring of 1991.

At the suggestion of merchants in the area, the committee also orchestrated changes to the James Brook Walkway that runs between the gas station and Cards and Shards.

"It used to be a neglected walkway," said Dormitzer, adding that it now serves as a nice-looking and safe pathway from the town parking lot to the village.

With the help of the highway department, old asphalt was torn up and new pavement was put down, as well as the addition of a new stockade fence and wooden posts. Bamboo grass that used to invade the path was torn up, and flowers and hedges were planted. The finishing touches of wooden signs and street lamps made way for a ribbon cutting ceremony in 1993.

Under the direction of committee member Ann Whelan, the group was also responsible for the transformation of the pocket park between Tedeschi's and French Memories.

"That was great fun," Whelan said.

Working with students from the high school who volunteered their time and painted murals on the walls, the park was transformed. The park now serves as an attractive walkway between Elm and South Main streets.

As the Village Revitalization Project and its proposed bump-outs move forward, Dormitzer isn't so sure all the proposed changes are good for the village. (Bump-outs are expanded portions of the sidewalk, which would allow pedestrians better visibility at crosswalks by allowing them to stay on the curb and see past parked cars. The selectmen believe the current crosswalks pose a safety issue because they force pedestrians onto the street in order to check for oncoming traffic before crossing).

Dormitzer thinks the town is proposing too much change too quickly.

She said any changes the committee has made, "have been slow. We don't try to impose a lot of change at once," which she thinks is part of the problem the town is seeing now.

"With so much uncertainty downtown, we do things one project at a time," she said.

Whelan agrees and thinks things should be relatively left alone in the village.

"That little village serves its purpose for the people who live there," she said.

Years ago, Dormitzer said the committee had an idea to try to fix up the sidewalks in the village, and were going to ask individual merchants to build a brick entranceway to their stores to help with the overall look of the streetscape. Whelan said the committee feels very strongly that "brick would look nicer," as part of the revitalization project.

Recently, the Board of Selectmen proposed the town try to start up a beautification committee, which would be responsible for the upkeep of islands and other small parcels of property in town. While the Renaissance Committee is not town appointed, Whelan thinks another committee working on the same kinds of projects directed by the town isn't necessary.

"We have a committee that's already in place and we've already made changes in the village," she said. "We feel we have quite a bit of knowledge and we could be used."

Being a member of the committee, Whelan said what she has enjoyed the most is getting to know all the people downtown over the years.

"It's been a fun thing to be a part of," she said.

Dormitzer said the committee's work is ongoing and it welcomes suggestions from anyone who has an idea. Plans for exposing a granite ledge behind Hub Shipping and possibly the addition of a "lollypop" clock at the end of the James Brook Walkway are being discussed.

The group is always looking for new ideas and will continue their efforts wherever help is needed.

"We keep our eyes open," Whelan said.

TOP CADET

Cadet Alexander Schmidt of Cohasset has been named to the president's list at the Massachusetts Maritime Academy on Cape Cod. The president's list is the highest achievement a cadet can earn at the academy. To be named to the list, a cadet must maintain a grade-point average of more than 3.5 during the semester. Amazing work Alexander.

WILLIAMS GRADUATE

Stefanie H. Noering, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Noering of Cohasset, received a bachelor of arts degree from Williams College June 8. Stefanie majored in political science and was captain of the varsity field hockey team. She was a four-year member of both the varsity field hockey and lacrosse teams at Williams. Congratulations Stefanie.

NEW CENTENARIAN

Happy Birthday wishes to Olive Wisenfluh on her 100th birthday. Olive, who is a resident at Cohasset Knoll, celebrated her special day with family and friends on July 23.

TRINITY SOCCER STAR

What a talented young man. Trinity College senior co-captain forward Morgan Sandell of Cohasset played in the annual New England Intercollegiate Soccer League Senior All-Star Game at Gillette Stadium in May. The Trinity men's soccer team posted a 7-7-1 overall record and a 4-4-1 mark in the league, qualifying for its first NESCAC Championship Tournament. The Bantams lost in the tournament first round, 5-1, at Middlebury. Morgan started all 13 games in which he played, leading the team and finishing second in the NESCAC in scoring with 10 goals and eight assists (0.62 per game was 14th in the nation) for 28 points (2.15 points per game was 28th in the nation). A first team All-NESCAC selection in 2000 and 2001, as well as 2001 and 2002 second team All-New England honoree, Morgan notched 31 goals and 18 assists for 80 points, including five game-winning goals, in his career. He is also a graduate of Noble & Greenough School.

THE BIG FISH

Patrick Holyway, 6, of 212 S. Main St., won the 16-and-under Junior Division of the annual Cohasset Yacht Club Fishing Tournament July 12. Patrick was the youngest of six crew members aboard Uncle Dave Holway's boat "Retrieve," a 32-foot Contender. Patrick and his brother, Conor, 14, have been fishing with Uncle Dave since they were old enough to hold a fishing rod. Patrick is shown in the photo with his fish, a 16-1/2 lb., 36 in. striped bass. Patrick fought hard to reel this big fish in. He's also pictured with his brother Conor, a former winner of junior division CYC tournaments.

UMASS DEAN'S LIST

The following Cohasset residents have been named to the dean's list at UMass Amherst for the spring 2003 semester. In order to qualify, an undergraduate must receive a 3.5 grade point average or better on a four-point scale. Hats off to Susan M. Dane, Kayleen Devine, Elizabeth N. Hassan, William P. Kearney, Ashley E. Koed, and Taylor A. Toth. Wow, great job to all of you on a wonderful spring.

COLLEGE HONORS

Meghan O'Sullivan, a sophomore and psychology major at American University in Washington, D.C., has been named to the spring 2003 dean's list. To earn this distinction, Meghan had to obtain a grade point average of 3.5 or better. Fantastic job Meghan.

HIGH HONORS

I heard some wonderful news about Kristen James of Cohasset who had another successful semester at South Shore Vo- Tech in Hanover. Kristen made high honors for the last semester and the year. A great way to get started for her senior year. Way to go Kristen!

NEW ADDITION

Four-year-old Madeline Rose Ronzoni has a new baby brother whom she would like to add to her doll collection, or so she might tell you. Merrick Raymond Ronzoni was born on June 25 to proud, happy parents, Michael and Irene Ronzoni of Cohasset. At birth, Merrick weighed 7 lbs., 12 oz. and was 19.5 inches. Overjoyed grandparents are Maureen Gagnon of Plymouth, and Ronald and Janice Ronzoni of Manhasset, N.Y. Congratulations to your wonderful new addition to the family.

TOP WRESTLERS

Congratulations go out to two Cohasset wrestlers at the Bay State Games at U Mass in Boston: Philip Strazzula,17, wrestling at 152lbs. took fifth and Joey Kehoe, 15, wrestling at 140lbs. took third place at the games. They both received medals and jackets. Great job by both.

Tournament winner Patrick Holway, 6, stands by his 16-1/2 lb., 36 in. striped bass. His brother, Conor, 14, is at left.

AMATEUR GARDENERS

On Tuesday of last week, the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset met at Doris Flint's lovely garden for tea and a meeting to plan next year's program. Meetings are held the third Tuesday of each month. Anyone interested in joining should call Shelly Donze at (781) 383-9734.

PSO CALENDAR DEADLINE

Ok, Cohasset! Here is the final call for the 2003-2004 PSO Calendar in terms of dates, contacts and entries. If you have something from a nursery school, organization, group information, anything related to a Boosters club within the schools or any other important information that you would like to see in the PSO calendar, now is the deadline! Please forward any and all information to psocalendar@yahoo.com or send it to me, Jen Piepenbrink at 622 CJC Highway, Cohasset MA, 02025. If you send items that need a contact name, phone number and/or email, make sure to include that information as well.

That is all for this week. Make sure to keep the information coming and get it in no later than Mondays at noon.

Young farmers dig organic gardening at Holly Hill

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Haley Foye, 11, and Michael Hegarty, 12, head to the fields at Holly Hill Farm.

For children participating in the Holly Hill Farm young farmers program, eating their vegetables is something they will gladly do. In fact, as part of the program, they not only get to eat vegetables they've harvested with their own two hands, they learn the importance of organic farming and letting nature be their guide.

Throughout the summer, Holly Hill offers week-long courses for children entering grades seven through nine on the premises at 236 Jerusalem Road.

"We still meet people who say, 'There's a farm on Jerusalem road?'" said Kate Sullivan, educational director for the farm.

From 8:30 a.m. until noon, Monday through Friday, "young farmers" participate in a wide variety of tasks, helping the farm run smoothly, while making good friends and enjoying fresh air.

Young farmers assist with the harvesting of many different organic vegetables, such as carrots, radishes, garlic, broccoli and peas. They also harvest a variety of culinary herbs as well as organic flowers.

"He just ripped that out of the ground about an hour ago," said 11-year-old Haley Foye of a giant garlic bulb harvested by Michael Hegarty, 12.

Haley, who is visiting her grandmother in Cohasset for the summer, has already learned some very valuable information while at the farm. She is able to identify many weeds along the trails, including one that you "chew up and spit out" onto yourself after receiving any kind of poisonous sting. When the plant reacts with your own saliva, it helps take the itch out and relieve the bite.

While Haley participated in the third, and final week of the course, Michael, who lives in Scituate, participated in both the first and third weeks of the session.

"It's awesome being out all day. I'd probably be at home on the computer or watching TV," he said.

During his first week, Michael helped plant beans that have sprouted very well since then. He is careful to explain that while they look as if they've been planted in rows, they have actually been planted in special triangular patterns next to each other.

The farm was awarded its organic certification in 2000 for following the guidelines provided by the National Organic Program of the USDA. This means it promises not to use any synthetic fertilizers, pesticides or herbicides, and guarantees the farm to be free of genetically modified organisms.

There are other chores to be done along with the harvesting, which the young farmers help with as well, such as transplanting, weeding, and building compost piles. Farmers on staff say the program is truly a work experience, and young farmers even receive a stipend at the end of the week.

"It's awesome being out all day. I'd probably be at home on the computer or watching TV."
— Michael Hegarty

Sullivan said she loves being able to work with the children and pass along what she has learned.

"They get a sense of connection to the land and understand where their food comes from and the importance of having farms in the community," she said. "They enjoy the work and the outdoors and learn skills that will help them throughout their lives."

However, time spent at the farm is not completely devoted to work. Young farmers spend some time each day exploring the farm's fields and woods, learning to identify trees, weeds, insects and birds.

Haley and Michael have also spent time working on bat houses to be placed around the farm to encourage the "insect-controlling friends" to take up residence.

Haley explained that they nailed planks of wood together, straight from the mill so the wood will be rough and give the bats "something to hang onto."

Michael said he has learned that a small brown bat can eat 1200 insects in an hour, which helps control pests without using any chemicals.

On the last day of the program, young farmers harvest and prepare a meal for family members, made from the fresh vegetables and herbs grown on the farm. A menu is carefully planned to incorporate as many delicious recipes as the children can come up with. On the menu for Haley's and Mike's families are pizza with herbs, vegetable dip, a big salad, and for dessert, mint and black raspberry ice cream.

"If tomatoes were in season, we could make sauce," Haley said.

While the young farmers program is over for this year, the Holly Hill Farm, owned by Frank and Jean White, is very active all year long. In the summer, you can find produce at the Farmer's Market Thursdays on the Common from 2:30 to 6:30 p.m., as well as at their Farm Stand, which is open Tuesdays and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Their "Honor Stand" is open every day except Monday, with varying in-season produce available.

There are also walking trails around the property covering 130 acres of woods which are open throughout the year. The woods bordering Wheelwright Park are owned by various members of the White family, which has owned and operated the farm for five generations, and are therefore known as the "Cornelia and Richardson White Woods," in memory of the farm's previous owners.

During the spring, the farm sells organic vegetable, herb, and flower seedlings including hard-to-find varieties.

Local restaurants such as Bernard's Bridgeman's, Riva, Saporito's, Pleasant Street Parfait, Circe's Grotto and the Red Lion Inn also serve in-season vegetables harvested at the farm.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Bye bye bump outs

We have to admit, we'll miss the village bump outs. They've provided us with lots of editorial copy and fodder for local cartoons.

With the economy in a slump, the efforts to wage peace in Iraq among other local, national and world issues — bump outs, if nothing else, have offered some comic relief.

The theory behind the bump outs, which ended up being an unpopular proposal for the village, had the best of intentions. Improving pedestrian safety and making the village more pedestrian friendly are good goals.

Maybe bump outs aren't the way to accomplish "pedestrian-ization" because they appear to be a radical departure from the status quo. No one wants to see the ambiance of the village hurt by upgrades when there are alternatives, such as better delineation of crosswalks.

But please don't confuse the bump out experiment with the overall village revitalization project, which has been in the works for the better part of a decade.

Take a good look at the village —- especially the condition of the sidewalks — and it should be clear revitalization of what is a town treasure should move forward

Some of you will no doubt say the village is OK just the way it is because your eyes have become accustomed to the imperfections.

We believe new sidewalks and underground utilities would make a huge difference, the same way repainting, redecorating and new furniture can in your home. How often have you said, "wow — what a difference that new couch or window treatment makes!"

Sadly a new wrinkle that is jeopardizing the scope of village revitalization is the delay on the Greenbush project.

As selectmen discussed Tuesday, the lack of clarity on whether the Greenbush will move forward in a timely fashion is going to have a direct impact on the village because the MBTA has agreed to redo the town parking lot and help with the James Brook flood control project. Those promises are on hold while Gov. Mitt Romney reviews Greenbush.

If Greenbush is put on hold for the foreseeable future, some of the grant money for village revitalization would have to be used for the parking lot and flood control.

But whatever happens with the train, let's continue to support village revitalization even if that just ends up including new sidewalks and lowering South Main and Elm streets.

The village is the heart of Cohasset and needs more TLC so it continues to thrive.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Blames League for Merrill's departure

TO THE EDITOR:

It has been my pleasure to work as a volunteer with Andi Merrill at the Cohasset Consignment Shop for more than 10 years.

I have observed her amazing ability to utilize human resources to achieve her fundamental responsibility to manage the shop and support the Social Service League of Cohasset.

Andi's daily contacts with the volunteers and her effect on the satisfaction they derive from their tasks make her a key individual in the lives of many, many people. Consignors and customers return year after year and are old friends to all of us.

Managers usually have minimal voice in top management decisions and have little control over the climate in which they must function. Not infrequently, managers are blamed for top management errors in long term planning.

The Social Service League letter dated July 17, 2003 sent "To the Volunteers of the Social Service League of Cohasset" stated the fact that "the Board feels that they have worked very hard for the past year to resolve key issues." One year does not appear to have been adequate time for long-range planning or developing negotiable changes in a stumbling economy.

I wish to thank Andi and Colleen for the great experience of having worked with them.

My Consignment Shop key was returned to the Shop on July 26, 2003.

Pedestrian safety should come first

TO: THE BOARD OF SELECTMEN

Bumpouts are about pedestrian safety, as I understand it. The mockup experiment, I thought, was to see if traffic works despite proposed changes in the curbing, as indicated by yellow floppies and orange barrels. It looks to me as if traffic has proceeded as usual in the village, although the yellow and orange markers look ridiculous, thus eliciting a lot of negative reaction.

I believe that your decision should be to insure maximum pedestrian safety, if indeed traffic has worked. I hope you will not take too seriously the to-be-expected negative reactions to change, and misunderstanding about the whole idea. I am impressed that other towns have successfully used bumpouts for the protection of their citizens.

League plans for the future

TO THE EDITOR:

The Board of Directors of the Social Service League of Cohasset wants to thank the volunteers who attended a meeting at the Cohasset Consignment Shop Monday, July 28. Concerns were addressed; plans for the future were discussed. The league will remain focused on community service and trusts that individual differences of opinion will be seen in their proper perspective. Growth involves change that can be painful.

The resignation of Andrea Merrill defines a time of service alongside that of previous managers Messrs. Megathlin, Beaman and Cotton. As we celebrate the past we look forward to another new beginning where there can be a closer connection between the Social Service League and its consignment shop. The reputation of the shop is its greatest asset. Service to the community is its highest priority. The mission of the social Service League is "…to identify the most important and least served social services problems and to create, develop and support ongoing programs which can have significant positive impact."

The Cohasset Consignment Shop is not a stand-alone business but for 50 years has been a charitable support to the mission of the league. We want to express our appreciation to all the volunteers who make this possible.

League President Amy Cutler

Making sense of train economics

TO THE EDITOR:

It is time to get real about the Greenbush line. The work has started ... concrete has been placed ... temporary fencing is up. The field offices are in place. Permits are in hand. The design is almost complete. Materials and equipment have been ordered ... lots have been delivered to the site. Construction equipment has been rented; contracts have been signed, sealed and delivered.

If the project is stopped now, the lawyers will move in. It could cost $500 million in delay related damages if we stop now.

And ... let's take a hard look at the project economics. It is really a public works welfare project. The funds pay for jobs ... architects, engineers, contractors, equipment operators, construction workers. Most of these folks are local. Take a look at your pay stub from your job; look at the State and Federal taxes paid by you. This is what happens to all those employed by the Greenbush project. The Greenbush staff pays taxes ... the State and Federal Governments get money back. What is not paid to the Government by the workers, goes to savings accounts, mortgages, insurance, food stores, clothing stores, colleges, universities, little corner stores, big 'box' stores, car payments, car repairs, home repairs, water bills, power bills, sewer bills, State and Local fees (yup ! ... fees not taxes). Some free cash also goes to vacations and weekend trips. This is how the economy works. And guess what?

Workers employed in the mortgage, insurance, big box, small store, car ... etc. businesses also pay taxes and fees. The Government gets more money back.

Eventually, Government gets all the funding back due to personal income taxes, except for a little leakage overseas and into the underground economies of the region.

The bottom line is: what is all the 'ragtime' talk about stopping Greenbush ... let's get on with it. Just like the Central Artery / Tunnel, the Deer Island Sewer Plant / Boston Harbor Cleanup, Logan Airport Expansions.

We in New England and in Metro-Boston are very good at getting our share of Federal and State funds for our job creating projects...we probably get more than we pay in. Take a look at your pay stub ... visualize thousands just like it from workers on these public works projects. Take away the projects, and you take away the pay stubs. No pay stubs means no revenues for car dealerships, big 'box' stores, little stores, mortgage bankers, bankers, lawyers, dentists, doctors, engineers, architects, CPAs, and the rest of our fellow workers in the local economy.

And just think: our region will have boats and trains to take us to those jobs that will be created in South Boston and in Boston when the city is expanded over the next 10 or so years. Yup ... high tech, biotech, banking, finance, insurance, college, university, medical, other high end jobs will be created by the thousands in and around Boston over the next 10 or so years. And ... what about housing prices in and around Hingham? What about affordable housing in the area? This is subject matter for another letter ... the forecast is good for current owners of real estate; not good for young families moving into the region to take some of those metro-Boston, Cambridge jobs ... not good at all. Housing and the high cost of living in metro – Boston is an issue; a big issue for future growth in the region.

Self-defense sprays

TO THE EDITOR:

The recent discovery of the remains of Molly Bish, the still unsolved murder of Christa Worthington on Cape Cod, and the countless other attacks on women all across this state should ignite an outcry against legislators who continue to defraud the public of any means of self-defense. A case in point is Chapter 180, the draconian Gun Control Act of 1998. This legislation, championed by the group Stop Handgun Violence, forces women (no matter how endangered) to go to a police station to obtain a Firearms Identification Card (FID), pay $25, and be fingerprinted and photographed — all just to be granted the right to carry mace or pepper spray! This absurd requirement creates a needless barrier that, in practice, discourages most working women from having any means to defend themselves and their children.

Representatives Tom O'Brien and Bradley Jones have filed bills (H.R. 2288 & 3380) to remove this ludicrous requirement from Massachusetts gun laws. Please contact Speaker of the House of Representatives Tom Finneran (617-722-2500) and ask him to put this life-saving legislation on the fast track for passage in the legislature. Women should be encouraged to carry non-lethal defense sprays not made helpless victims by a legislature totally oblivious to their real safety needs.

HEALTH NOTES

Tune-up time at August clinics

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

If your house gets termites, or the oil burner smokes, you consult an expert and have it fixed. Same with your car. You wouldn't run it without proper lubrication or care. Similarly you owe it to yourself to consult an expert occasionally to get a checkup. August is a good time to consider whether your body is telling you something needs looking at. On Aug. 14, Jan Bennet, our new registered nurse will be joining Judy Fitzimmons the town public health nurse at the Senior Center Luncheon at 11 a.m. for the first of two get-well clinics. The second will be on Aug. 28 from 1- 3 p.m. at Harborview Senior Housing on Elm street (Behind the police department).

These clinics and the Cohasset Health Fair coming up on Tuesday Sept. 9 at the Second Congregational Church (Next to Cohasset Town Hall) 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. are a good time to become familiar with health services available to town citizens.

Health screenings such as the ones described above are of considerable value for several reasons: First, public health nurses are aware of most of the various illnesses which are prevalent in towns in which they provide services. They should be your first line of defense in sorting out those ailments which could be dangerous and those which are more rumor than substance. Also, they are familiar with a great variety of symptoms and can provide the opportunity for early diagnosis of many common problems. Finally, they are able to give you accurate information about referrals and where to go for appropriate care of problems. It's important to become familiar with the town's health care services because they are the easiest, most economical to get a first look at any problems you may be having. Contact Judy Fitzimmons or Jan Bennet at 781 383-2210.

West Nile Virus update

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health (MDPH) announced West Nile Virus (WNV) was detected in a pool of Culex pipiens mosquitoes collected June 29 in Westfield. The isolation of West Nile virus in mosquitoes from Westfield is the first detection of WNV in mosquitoes in Massachusetts this season. MDPH announced June 20 that a dead bird found in Springfield tested positive for WNV.

The MDPH has increased collections of mosquitoes in areas of western Massachusetts in order to estimate the prevalence of West Nile virus and provide further updates to the public. In addition, testing of dead birds was increased in Hampden County by requesting submission of all bird species, not just crows and blue jays, for a few weeks (until about the end of July) to determine if virus is spreading among the bird populations. Only crows and blue jays are being tested throughout the rest of Massachusetts because these species are known to be most vulnerable to West Nile Virus infection.

MDPH reminds residents of Massachusetts that human infections with West Nile virus transmitted by mosquitoes may occur from July through October, with the period of highest risk in August and September. West Nile virus activity has been found at low levels in western Massachusetts this year and therefore there is some risk of human infection. Even if WNV is not detected in an area, there is some small chance of infection and therefore prevention measures should be practiced anywhere where there is exposure to mosquitoes. Most human infections with West Nile virus do not result in serious illness, and the risk of a serious illness increases with age.

Remember, you can reduce your risk of infection by taking simple precautions throughout the summer season:

- Remove standing water near homes, clean gutters and drains, change water in birdbaths frequently and properly maintain swimming pools
- If you remain outdoors while mosquitoes are biting, wear clothing that provides more coverage of your skin (such as long sleeve shirts and pants)
- Use mosquito repellents containing DEET. Repellents should not be used on infants.
- Use mosquito netting to cover carriages and playpens
- Check window and door screens to assure they are in good repair.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Convicting Kobe Bryant

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Well, now that we've convicted Kobe Bryant of whatever it was he did in that hotel room in Edwards, Colo., where do we go from here?

The young lady in question, who is known by name only to radio talk show fans on the West Coast and several thousands more on the Internet, says he did, Kobe says he didn't, and some 250 million Americans have already chosen up sides.

A trial before his peers? Who needs it?

It all began the night of June 30 when Kobe checked into the Lodge & Spa at Cordillera and sent down to room service for something to eat. It being late at night, there was no one to bring it to his room but the young woman concierge, whom we shall call Miss X.

Curse the luck! Every time I ordered room service in a strange hotel, it was brought by a waiter of the male persuasion, and the only thing he was interested in was a tip, preferably the kind you can fold and put away in your wallet.

But I digress . . .

The next day, Kobe trotted off to nearby Vail to have his knee operated on, and Miss X trotted off to the County Sheriff's office to tell The Man how the celebrated basketball player raped her — and maybe operate herself on his $45 million Nike contract.

A trial before his peers? Who needs it?

Of course, in the old days, when I was young and ice covered most of the earth, there was no such thing as rape. It was "criminal assault."

Once I asked an editor to explain the difference between criminal and non-criminal assault. "Shut up," he explained, in the immortal words of Ring Lardner.

But again I digress . . .

A couple of weeks later, after much "soul-searching," the DA filed felony sexual assault charges against Kobe and the first hearing date was set for Aug. 6 — which meant that the trial would begin at once on television and radio and in the papers.

Kobe, in the presence of his wife and before a nationwide TV audience, tearfully confessed to having sex with Miss X but said that it was entirely consensual, which half the country (mostly the female half) found hard to believe once Miss X's dossier was made public.

She was 19 years old, a former high school cheerleader, now a college student and a talented musician who had auditioned for the Fox Channel's "American Idol" last year. And, although it was mentioned only in hushed tones, Miss X is also white.

Then Kobe's defenders (the other half of the nation) dragged out their big guns. Miss X was a mental basket case who had once tried to commit suicide. Days after the meeting with Kobe, she was at a party describing in glowing terms certain parts of Kobe's anatomy. It was said she is only after money or publicity, and so it goes . . .

Does anyone see a trial coming on Court TV that will eclipse those of O. J. Simpson and William Kennedy Smith?

State legislature continues to stick to its old ways

THE HEDLUND REPORT

BOB HEDLUND

At the outset of the budget process this year I was optimistic that the more than $3 billion dollar deficit the state was facing would force the Legislature to abandon the politics of patronage and enact true reforms in the budget. Early on, the Legislative leadership seemed honestly supportive of reforms to government and the elimination of patronage; however, when it came time for action, the legislative leadership made protecting waste and patronage their priority. While, through threats of a veto, Governor Romney was able to force certain reforms and was able to force the legislature to submit a budget with increasing taxes on working men and women, this budget is a far cry from the reforms that the taxpayers of Massachusetts deserve.

Even though the Governor vetoed many of the legislature's more ridiculous actions, the Legislature has readily overridden them at the whim of the legislative leadership. In a sad example of the current state of our Government on Beacon Hill, the legislative leadership has made it a priority to overturn as many of the Governor's vetoes as possible. And, as happens far too often, the rank and file members of the Legislature blindly vote with the leadership again and again and vote against the interests of Massachusetts voters and citizens again and again. Already, the House has overridden over 225, or 60 percent, of the Governor's vetoes accounting for more than $150 million of the $201 million the Governor was forced to veto when the legislature sent him a budget that was $200 million out of balance, and more veto overrides are expected to be taken up in the fall. According to the most recent figures, these vetoes have pushed the budget out of balance by more than $282 million and will set the Governor up to make hard budget adjustment decisions later this fiscal year.

Below are just a few examples of the leadership's efforts to put politics and patronage before reform:

- Boston Municipal Court — With administrative and management costs of $1.18 million, the Boston Municipal Court (BMC) spends more money on overhead costs than the entire statewide District Court System. In addition, the district courts of Springfield and Worcester have combined larger caseloads than the BMC, yet collectively receive half the funding of the BMC. With these facts, it's clear that the BMC is over funded and teeming with waste and patronage. However, the Legislature ignored the Governor's reforms and even expanded the BMCs reach. For years, the legislature has created a surplus of high paying, patronage assistant clerk magistrate positions in the courts, and nowhere is this more prevalent than at the BMC.

The rank and file members of the Legislature blindly vote with the leadership again and again and vote against the interests of Massachusetts voters and citizens again and again.

- Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission — The legislature went to extraordinary lengths with the Alcoholic Beverage and Control Commission (ABCC) in order to protect, and in some cases rehire, the patronage jobs that the Governor has been trying to eliminate since he took office in January. Back in February, a reform plan was announced that would have transferred the enforcement function of the ABCC to state and local police in order to produce significant cost savings for the Commonwealth. Unfortunately for the taxpayers of the Commonwealth, many of the inspectors charged with that function at the ABCC have significant political ties, and the Legislative leadership quickly came to their rescue. In order to save the jobs of the current inspectors and to rehire those inspectors laid off earlier this year, the Legislature took the unusual step of transferring the function of the ABCC from the Governor to the Treasurer.
- Metropolitan District Commission — Much has been said about the "success" of the legislature's efforts to enact reforms that eliminate the patronage laden and waste filled Metropolitan District Commission (MDC). Unfortunately, upon further review of the plan the Legislature passed it is clear that the MDC has been eliminated in name only. It has not been eliminated or consolidated into the Department of Environmental Management as I was hoping would occur, but has been replaced by a new Division of Urban Parks and Recreation. This is a major missed opportunity for reform and the elimination of waste in our budget, and is basically a hoax perpetrated upon the taxpayers.
- English Immersion — The overwhelming will of the voters was ignored when the Legislature significantly watered down the provisions of the English Immersion ballot question to change our failed bilingual education programs. Ignoring successes of English Immersion in other states, the legislature included five riders to the budget designed to water down the law as passed by the voters before it was even given the opportunity to be implemented.
- Mass Turnpike Authority — Much like with the BMC, the legislature was faced with hard facts about the inefficiencies of the Mass Turnpike Authority and took a step that was contrary to common sense. With the knowledge that the MTA expends nearly three times more dollars per mile to maintain its roadways than the Mass Highway Department, and as a deliberate tweak to the Governor, the legislature decided to expand the maintenance functions of the MTA and take some roadways away from the more efficient Mass Highway. It's absolutely inexcusable in these times of budget deficits that the legislature has decided to expand wasteful departments at the expense of more efficient ones.
- Rape Crisis Centers — While many quality programs are going to be facing a lack of funds this year due to the political machinations of legislative leadership, none provide quite the example of the callous political decision-making employed during this cycle than Rape Crisis Centers. These crisis centers provide an invaluable service to those most at need, operate with a very small budget, and are renown for their fiscal efficiency. However, the legislative leadership decided to not reduce, but nearly eliminate the funding for these centers. This will result in closures across the Commonwealth; all while making sure that funding for patronage havens such as the BMC and the ABCC is increased.

Hill hits lull after overturning 232 budget vetoes

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

MICHAEL LEVENSON

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

After a week in which lawmakers couldn't cram enough hours into the day, the Statehouse hit a summer lull. Lawmakers all but exchanged their briefcases for boogie boards.

Two weeks ago, Senate Democrats were so busy steamrolling Gov. Mitt Romney's budget vetoes that the Senate's clerks moved to calling the roll with just lawmakers' last names. It was a small change intended to save time, and larynges.

Hour after hour, Democrats used their huge numerical advantage to overturn 232 of the governor's vetoes, restoring $150 million to programs and making significant changes in bilingual education law, and early retirement programs. Exhausted, House members quit that Thursday at 11:49 p.m., Senators at midnight.

Last week, with the weather damp and hot, the marble hallways in the Statehouse fell quiet, the lobbyists and legislators had mostly vanished, and the Boy Scouts took center stage, at least in the official business of the House and Senate. Last Monday, House lawmakers met for six minutes, to approve one local bill to crack down on drag racing in Springfield, and pass a single congratulatory resolution. The Senate, for its part, convened for nine minutes, to name a field in Lowell and pass resolutions congratulating local Boy Scouts for achieving the rank of Eagle Scout.

House Speaker Thomas Finneran found time to host an AM radio show. The governor, a week after denouncing lawmakers for "unfathomable arrogance," for making changes to the voter-approved bilingual education law, filled his public schedule with less hard-hitting events.

The former CEO called state agency officials together for a company meeting of sorts. The idea was to keep open lines of communication. "What's significant," Romney's lawyer, Daniel Winslow, said, "is the act of reaching out to managers and acknowledging that we appreciate our managers."

What truly broke the summer lull, and reverberated across the US, was the report from Attorney General Thomas Reilly detailing his 16-month investigation into the sexual abuse scandal in the Catholic Church. Reilly called the abuse the worst tragedy to befall children in the state's history, involving probably more than 1,000 victims and 250 perpetrators since 1940. Within the state, the report appeared to broaden the public understanding of the number of victims of abuse, and focus attention on matters of serious policy: child protection laws and church abuse procedures that Reilly says are still insufficient to guarantee the safety of children.

Nationally, the report places blame for allowing the abuse to occur on a number of top aides to Cardinal Bernard Law who have gone on to become bishops in other cities. Among the church leaders who are now answering questions in light of the report are Bishops Thomas Daily of Brooklyn, N.Y., and John McCormack of Manchester, N.H. Other bishops implicated in the report now head diocese in Green Bay, Wis., and New Orleans, La.

House Speaker Thomas Finneran found time to host an AM radio show.

Other events making news include:

• UMASS trustees plan to hike fees by $750 — The University of Massachusetts finance committee unveiled a plan to hike student fees by $750 for the second semester next year. The increase, which must still be approved by the full board, will raise $21 million to offset state budget cuts. Trustee James Karam said the university budget was cut by $80 million and spending reductions would make up the rest of the cut.

• Romney aide says state should create panel to tackle zoning — Gov. Mitt Romney's planning expert, Douglas Foy, asked lawmakers to set up a task force with the administration to recommend changes in the state's zoning laws. The task force, patterned after one that has recommended changes to the anti-snob zoning laws, would be a way to "come to resolution" on zoning law changes, and bills backed by powerful construction, union, and environmental interests, Foy told the Natural Resources Committee.

• Police tell immigrant activists to move press conference — A union-backed press conference to demand broader rights for immigrants turned into a showdown over rights, after activists were told by Boston Police they could not assemble outside Faneuil Hall "without a permit." After a standoff, the activists moved to union headquarters blocks away, but not before several said the event made their point: that rights are still trampled in the US. "It's our constitutional right to assemble," Elena Letona, executive director of Centro Presente, said after arguing with police. "How soon they forget that their parents and grandparents were immigrants, too."

• Romney says he will draft plan to cut co2 emissions — Gov. Mitt Romney said he would work with the governors of Northeast and mid-Atlantic states on a plan to reduce carbon dioxide emissions from power plants, which have been linked to global warming. "I concur that climate change is beginning to (have an) effect on our natural resources and that now is the time to take action towards climate protection," Romney wrote in a letter to New York Gov. George Pataki. Pataki asked the governors to work toward ""meaningful reductions in carbon dioxide emissions." Romney said he would work to devise within two years a "flexible market-based regional cap and trade system." Pataki wants a plan in two years.

• Romney administration opens drug plan for one month — The Romney administration announced it would open enrollment in the state's prescription drug insurance program for seniors for one month, in August, disappointing advocates who said the window was too short to get the word out to seniors. AARP, Senior Action Council and other groups are pressing Romney to open the plan for two months. "There's a question of fairness," Rep. Deborah Blumer, D-Framingham, told the Globe.

Michael Levenson writes for the State House News Service.

POLITICAL NOTES

Open enrollment for prescription program

Senator Robert L. Hedlund has announced the drug insurance plan for seniors, known as Prescription Advantage, will hold an open enrollment period from Aug. 1-31. During that time, non-Medicaid recipients aged 66 or older and those aged 65 or under with disabilities will be able to be enrolled into the program that currently serves more than 80,000 people.

"This coverage is critical to the health and fiscal well-being of our seniors," Hedlund said. "I hope that every eligible senior takes advantage of the quality coverage provided by Prescription Advantage."

During the budget process, the Senate led the effort to retain and fully fund the Prescription Advantage program after it was initially not included in the House budget. The Senate prevailed during the conference negotiations, and the program was funded at $96.3 million.

"Since the Senate spearheaded the creation of Prescription Advantage in 2001, I have fought hard to see that it is fully funded and open to as many seniors as possible," Hedlund said.

Massachusetts developed the first national prescription drug insurance program in 2001. Applications and plan information may be obtained by calling Prescription Advantage Customer Service at 1-800-AGE-INFO. They are also available through local Councils on Aging, SHINE offices or by writing to Prescription Advantage, P.O. Box 15153, Worcester, MA 01615-0153.

KINDERGARTEN STUDENTS (H 4004)

House 105-49, Senate 28-9, override Gov. Romney's veto of a section allowing non-English-speaking kindergarten students the option to be taught in mainstream classrooms with "assistance in English language acquisition including but not limited to English as a second language." The voter-approved law only allows these students to be taught in sheltered English immersion classes. Override supporters said the change would give parents an additional option and allow a kindergarten child to sit in a classroom next to his English-speaking friends and learn to speak English. They said the change would enhance the voter-approved law that only allows kindergartners to be taught in a segregated classroom that consists of many children speaking different languages and only a teacher speaking fluent English. Override opponents said the change goes against the will of the voters who approved a law requiring that these students be taught only in sheltered English immersion classes. They noted the change is loosely worded and would be counterproductive if it was interpreted to allow an aide to regularly assist these students in their native tongues. (A "Yea" vote is for the change in the law. A "Nay" vote is against the change).

Senator Hedlund: N — Representative Bradley: N

TWO-WAY BILINGUAL PROGRAMS (H 4004)

House 110-44, Senate 28-9, override Gov. Romney's veto of a section allowing schools to continue to offer two-way bilingual programs for non-English speaking children of all ages. Two-way bilingual programs consist of English-speaking and non-English-speaking students sharing a classroom and alternately learning each other's language. The voter-approved law does not allow children under age ten in these programs but does permit them for children over age ten who apply for and are granted a waiver. Override supporters said these programs are currently offered in only a few communities but are very successful and should be allowed to continue. They argued that these programs not only help non-English-speaking students to learn English but have the added advantage of assisting English-speaking students to learn a foreign language. Override opponents said the change goes against the will of the voters who clearly voted to prohibit these programs for children under ten and allow them for children over ten only with a special waiver. They argued that this change could lead to many school instituting two-way bilingual programs in order to circumvent the voter-approved law requiring students to be taught in sheltered English immersion classes. (A "Yea" vote is for the change allowing the continuation of two-way bilingual programs. A "Nay" vote is against the change).

Senator Hedlund: N — Representative Bradley: N

ACCOUNTABILITY OF PROGRAMS (H 4004)

House 115-39, Senate 28-9, override Gov. Romney's veto of a section requiring that non-English-speaking students be taught to the same academic standards and curriculum frameworks as all other students. The section also requires districts to regularly assess whether this requirement is being met and to provide parents with report cards and progress reports on each student's progress in learning English. Another provision mandates that these reports be in a language that to the maximum extent possible is understood by the parents. Override supporters said this change would mandate increased accountability and ensure that non-English-speaking students are not only learning how to speak English but are also meeting the same academic standard that all other students are required to meet in all their courses. Override opponents said this requirement is already mandated by federal law and is redundant. (A "Yea" vote is for the new requirements. A "Nay" vote is against the new requirements).

Senator Hedlund: N — Representative Bradley: N

ON-SITE EVALUATION VISITS (H 4004)

House 116-38, Senate 28-9, override Gov. Romney's veto of a section requiring the state's Office of Educational Quality and Accountability to conduct on-site visits to school districts at least once every five years to evaluate the effectiveness of programs serving non-English-speaking students. The section also provides that if a district is failing to adequately improve educational outcomes for these students, any school within the district can eventually be designated as an underperforming school. Underperforming schools are subject to strict regulations and requirements by the state and can eventually be taken over by a receiver appointed by the Board of Education. Override supporters said this section would provide strict accountability and ensure that action is taken if the new voter-approved law does not help non-English-speaking students. Override opponents said the change goes against the will of the voters and argued the section goes too far. (A "Yea" vote is for the new requirements. A "Nay" vote is against the new requirements).

Merrill, Roth will be missed

TO THE EDITOR,

As a volunteer at the Cohasset Consignment Shop for approximately eight years, I was disappointed and perplexed by the premature departure of Andrea Merrill and Colleen Roth as manager and treasurer, respectively. Andi has done a wonderful job managing shop for 22 years. For her, the shop was more than just a retail venture.

I met many interesting people during my tenure there. Andi, Colleen, my fellow volunteers, and customers were always supportive during the really difficult times of my life. We had many customers who would just stop by and chat. Everyone was welcome

I thank Andi and Colleen for giving me the opportunity to meet so many wonderful people and to have the chance to contribute to a worthwhile cause.

I will miss everyone, and should Andi and/or Colleen choose to embark on other endeavors, I hope that there would be an opportunity for me to once again offer my services.

Thank you Andi and Colleen

Open barnyard at Weir River Farm

The Trustees of Reservations has opened the barnyard at Weir River Farm for the season. Visit the farm on weekends this summer and meet the horses, llamas, sheep, lambs, goats, piglets, chickens and rabbits.

Farm staff is on-hand to lead informal tours and answer questions. Pack a lunch and enjoy our picnic area.

Members of The Trustees of Reservations are free and non-members are $3/person.

The farm is open on the following dates and times: Saturdays and Sundays through Aug. 31, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Parking for Weir River Farm is at the end of Turkey Hill Lane in Hingham. For more information, call 781-740-7233.

Greenbush backers have new website

Greenbush on Track (GOT) has a website: GreenbushOnTrack.com that features information about the plan to restore the 17.7-mile rail line along the South Shore. It explains the environmental, economic and social benefits Greenbush would bring to the region — which is the only part of Eastern or Central Massachusetts not connected to Boston by commuter rail. And the site highlights the widespread editorial support for the commuter rail project, as well as a video clip of Gov. Mitt Romney speaking about Greenbush.

This is a press release from GOT.

Food Fest to help Father Bill's

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

To help in the fight against homelessness, Jim Wells, former owner of Abbadessa's Restaurant on Lincoln Street in Hingham, now the Cove, is once again organizing a Food Fest and Auction to raise money for Father Bill's Place, a homeless shelter in neighboring Quincy.

Father Bill's, operated by Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition, serves more than 1,000 clients annually, mainly from Quincy and the South Shore, including Hingham, Cohasset, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton, and Hull. The shelter, which is funded by state and federal grants and private donations, provides a temporary place to live and other services to the homeless. (See sidebar.)

"People from all walks of life have a wonderful time at the event, with more than 1,000 people gathering for an evening of fun, food, auctions, and music," Wells said. "Participating restaurants and bakeries do an unbelievable job, outdoing themselves for a wonderful cause."

"Father Bill's is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and the homeless population is not going down," said Wells, noting that the economy and the increasing difficulty in finding affordable housing are key factors. "Many of our residents are working two jobs and still can't make ends meet. It's difficult to find a studio apartment for under $1,000 and equally difficult for people in communities like Hingham, Weymouth, Cohasset, and Hull to buy a house."

For the sixth year, Wells is chairing the Ninth Annual Food Fest & Auction to benefit Father Bill's. On Wed., Aug. 6, from 6 to 10 p.m., Hingham and other South Shore residents will have an opportunity to sample tasty food and sip fine wine to the music of the I-Land Rokkerz steel band and watch ice sculptures in the making at WaterWorks at Marina Bay, Quincy. Hingham's Scott Wahle, WBZ-TV Morning News anchor, is the honorary chairperson. More than $600,000 was raised during the past five years.

WaterWorks owner Ed Kane of Eat Well Inc., the parent company of Stars, Tosca, and Casa Del Rey in Hingham, is donating the space for the evening's events.

Volunteers play an important role in ensuring the shelter's continuation, including fund raising. "If we didn't have people to step up to the plate we would have many more homeless people out on the street," Well said.

The Food Fest features delicacies prepared by chefs from many of the finest South Shore restaurants and wine from local distributors. Participants include Eat Well Catering, Stars Hingham, Tosca, Casa del Rey, Nona's Homemade Ice Cream, 99 Restaurant & Pub, Brian's Fine Desserts, Captain Fishbones at Marina Bay, Ginger Betty's Bakery, Jake's Seafoods Restaurant & Market, Joe's American Bar & Grill, Konditor Meister, Inc., Lantana, Montilio's Cake Shoppe, Old Hitching Post Restaurant, Reggio Italian Ristorante, Roche Brothers Catering, Rock Bottom Restaurant, The Catered Affair, The Common Market Restaurants, The Four's Restaurant, and This Takes the Cake.

The auction, with Wells serving as auctioneer, features items donated by many local businesses, including vacations, sports memorabilia, entertainment packages, and tickets to popular sporting events.

Fund raising always plays an important part, but this year in particular due to state budget cuts, which amounted to a $250,000 loss for the shelter last year.

"We're so appreciative of those who make this fund raiser possible in our mission against homelessness," said John Yazwinski, Executive Director of Father Bill's. "Eventually we'd like to be able to take down our sign!"

Food Fest tickets are available for $75 per person and may be obtained by mail, telephone, or by visiting www.fatherbillsplace.org with a charge card. Tickets are also available at the door. For further information or to donate auction items, call Janice Whalen, Erin Anderson, or John Yazwinski at (617) 376-2255. All proceeds benefit Father Bill's.

"We're always looking for unique items — trips, a ride on a yacht, vacations, rentals, or hot air balloon rides," Wells said.

About Father Bill's

Putting a face on homelessness

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

While many Hingham and other South Shore residents are enjoying vacations or activities offered in their hometowns, some who are less fortunate are struggling to find jobs and a place to live.

Homelessness, which knows no boundaries, can be attributed to a number of factors, including a lack of affordable housing, unemployment or underemployment, mental health issues, substance abuse, and the inability to access appropriate services.

"Homelessness isn't just the poor, sad soul on the side of the road, although that's part of it," said Jim Wells, former owner of Abbadessa's restaurant in Hingham and chairperson for an upcoming fund raiser to benefit Father Bill's Place, a homeless shelter in Quincy. "It's about not being able to make ends meet. A number of young people who once lived with their parents are finding they can't afford homes of their own, and with the current job situation, some people with six-figure incomes have all of a sudden found themselves out of a job with drastic things happening."

A number of Hingham and other South Shore restaurants and wine distributors are participating in the Aug. 6 Food Fest & Auction.

The shelter serves residents from Quincy and the South Shore, including Hingham, Cohasset, Hull, Weymouth, Braintree, Marshfield, and Milton by providing temporary housing and other services. Father Bill's now has separate men's and women's shelters.

Father Bill's goal is to link homeless individuals to the appropriate housing and services needed to live independently and to steer them towards treatment, housing, employment, and self-reliance.

"We like to see the results," said Wells. "Father Bill's provides not just a bed and a meal but also a restructuring of our clients' lives to get them back on their feet and help them solve their problems, including veterans issues, mental instabilities, and substance abuse."

According to John Yazwinski, Executive Director of Father Bill's, the number of people using the shelter has increased. "We've seen a big jump in the number of Weymouth residents, for example, so much so that the mayor committed some community development block grant money to Father Bill's," Yazwinski said, noting that the shelter served more than 200 Weymouth residents last year. The majority of calls came from working-class people facing homelessness, many because their pay raises weren't keeping up with increasing rents. Some were single parents with one or two children.

A single mother from Hingham sought shelter at Father Bill's a few months ago after finding temporary shelter for her children with nearby family members. "She was a full-time waitress in a Hingham restaurant whose rent went from $600 to $900 overnight," Yazwinski said. "She kept her job but needed to use our shelter temporarily" until she worked things out.

There's also been an increase in the number of Hingham residents seeking help or advice when faced with the possibility of homelessness. Last year, Father Bill's received more than 100 calls from Hingham, Hull, and Weymouth residents looking for rental assistance. The shelter has some funds available for that purpose on a temporary basis.

"We work with landlords to help families work out payment plans with their landlords," Yazwinski said. "We've served almost a dozen Hingham residents or individuals with relatives in Hingham during the past year in one way or another who were perhaps struggling with mental health issues, substance abuse, or difficulties in accessing programs offered by local state hospitals."

Some elderly people from various communities who are having trouble handling now-adult children with mental disabilities due to scaled-back state services have also contacted Father Bill's for help, along with young people who are no longer in the state foster care system because they are too old to access those services.

The shelter has provided help to 50 Hull residents so far this year. "A lot of rents go up for the summer season, pushing the working class out," Yazwinski said. "There is a real lack of affordable housing in many communities."

It's not only the working-class population that's been hard hit.

"We've seen some well-off people," too," said Yazwinski. "Those include young people from communities like Hingham, Cohasset, and Marshfield who are struggling with drug and alcohol-related problems who are no longer living with their parents or don't know who to turn to. We've also seen affluent adults struggling with alcohol who eventually lose their support network."

Domestic violence against women living on the South Shore is on the rise, according to Yazwinski. "We want a vibrant community here at Father Bill's to help people deal with drug and alcohol problems, domestic violence, and other issues," he said. "With the combination of state budget cuts and the economy, we're seeing more violence in the community, perhaps due in part to a lack of access to substance abuse programs and the fact that some mentally ill who used to be in residential programs are now roaming the streets of our communities" due to cut-backs in related services.

"People in need are always welcome to come to our emergency shelters," Yazwinski said.

Father Bill's is working with Quincy Interfaith Housing to buy a 15-room house in Hull to "help move people out of homelessness," said Wells.

Health board has a plan to stop storm-water pollution

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Many Cohasset residents take pride in having lush, green lawns. But what they may not realize, is one night of heavy rainfall can carry harmful pollutants from certain lawn fertilizers directly into local water bodies.

Rain can also wash litter, oil from roads and driveways, and even animal waste from wildlife into catch basins and storm drains.

Preventing pollution in water bodies is an important health issue. So to that end, the Cohasset Board of Health is working on a plan to not only spark awareness and educate people in town about the different pollutants that can contaminate the water supply – but involve them in the solution.

Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik met with consultant to the Water Commission Mark Bartlett of the Norfolk Ram Group last week, to go over the Storm Water Management Plan, which will provide useful information for residents and town officials on the state of the water supply, as well as a game plan to reduce pollution.

"Storm water can have a serious impact on other water bodies," Godzik said.

Storm water is rainwater and anything it takes with it into gutters and drains, such as fertilizers washed off lawns, as well as pollutants and debris from the streets. According to the Environmental Protection Agency, unlike sewage wastewater, storm water is not treated, and goes directly from the source out into various waterways. This means in just one day, water containing chemical pollutants could flow down a driveway, into the storm drain, and out into the wetlands, ultimately effecting wildlife living there.

With heavy amounts of rainfall, there is also the tendency for litter to get caught up in the current and sent out to sea, causing even more trouble for animals living in and around the water's edge.

"This is a plan to show how the town will mitigate storm waters to improve water quality," Godzik said.

Cohasset's Storm Water Management Plan includes six objectives, which will be carried out over the next five years:

- public education and outreach;
- public participation and involvement;
- illicit discharge detection and elimination;
- construction site runoff control;
- post construction runoff control;
- pollution prevention and good housekeeping.

As part of the public education objective, the Board will continue to provide the Health Notes column for the Cohasset Mariner, provide public service announcements on local cable stations, and hold various other public information sessions.

Students at the Center for Student Coastal Research on Parker Avenue will help fulfill the public participation component through their various water quality testing projects. Godzik hopes that more adult volunteers will begin to help as well, so testing can continue at a steady pace even during the school year.

To help control illicit discharge into waterways, the plan calls for the development of a regulation as well as the beginning of connectivity mapping. The DPW will use the storm drain maps created last summer as a template. Regulations or bylaws will also be developed for construction site runoff and post construction runoff control.

"This is a plan to show how the town will mitigate storm waters to improve water quality."

— Dr. Joseph Godzik, Health Agent

Under the Clean Water Act, which was enacted in 1973, urbanized, rural communities such as Cohasset, are required to meet standards put forth by the EPA. Not all suburban towns must comply, only those that meet certain statistical measures. The surrounding towns of Scituate, Hingham, and Hull, as well as many other South Shore communities, are held to the same measures as Cohasset.

Board of Health Chairman Steve Bobo said that in the near future, the town will be setting up a plan for a storm drain incident reporting system, which will involve the Department of Public Works as well as allow the opportunity for concerned residents to report problems. The program will be centered around incident reporting of storm events during the "first flush," which is the very beginning of rainfall, and will equip DPW workers with forms for describing conditions at discrete catch basins.

Bobo said experts say the first flush is the time when most of the pollution from roads and surface water is washed into catch basins, and from there into streams and waterways.

If a citizen calls the town to report a problem, they will be referred to the DPW that will record the complaint and then decide whether the issue is pressing and should be addressed at once, or if it can wait for later examination.

Bobo also said DPW trucks will have clipboards with forms attached, so that "any DPW personnel responding will have the phone report and the form for completion at the site."

Records will be coordinated and organized so the caller can be notified about any action taken.

In addition to reporting problems they notice around town, residents can help keep the town's water safe by paying close attention to anything their households might be doing to contribute to problems. Bobo said lawn chemicals cause pollution when they enter the town's ground and surface water, and urges residents to look into the lawn care initiative, which will be put forth by the Board of Health along with the Conservation Commission and Open Space Committee.

The groups will be sending out a town-wide mailing about lawn care, and are currently working on a listing of environmentally conscious landscapers, which will be available at the Board of Health and Conservation Commission in the near future.

'Shootout' on Common

Along with the mailing, there is a planned "shootout" on the Common, where two landscapers will apply their all- natural methods to the lawn, and be judged by experts who will determine which is the most environmentally sound practice.

Bobo said the Board of Health also has information for households regarding septic system maintenance, although aside from periodic cleaning every few years, "current site systems require very little maintenance."

Included with the information is a list of materials such as bleach and paint products which should not be flushed into toilets.

Bobo thinks that with the town's involvement in the plans, water supplies will stay safe.

"There is a more widespread consciousness about environmental issues than was present even four years ago," he said. "I am optimistic about the way citizens are beginning to understand the relationships between health and environmentally sound practices in and around their homes."

Funding for the project has been provided largely by grants, with a first year budget of $95,000. Any additional funding comes from Town Meeting. The total five year budget is estimated to be $850,000.

No matter what the cost, Godzik believes this program will provide an invaluable service to the town.

"Water is critical. We can't continue to throw pollutants into our water supply," he said. "Water plays an important role on the whole ecosystem, and when you play around with that, and start to mess around with the ecosystem, that isn't good."

The Storm Water Management Plan will continue to be a "work in progress," but Godzik said a final draft should be ready this week.

Summer baseball not for everyone

EXTRA POINTS

MIKE SPELLMAN

What could be better than summer youth baseball?

Depends on whom you talk to.

I, like a lot of my fellow coaches, can't get enough of summer ball. You go from being a teacher to a true coach once the all-star season starts, and experience vicariously the thrill the kids have playing against the best other teams have to offer. Many of my fellow proud parents feel the same way.

The answer to that question, according to my wife and many of her friends, though, is everything from root canal on up the pleasure scale.

I guess I can see her point. We have one son on a traveling 12-year old team and another on a traveling 11-year old team. I'm head coach of one team and help coach the other one on nights there are no conflicts. Right now, I'm in the middle of a stretch of 12 games in 10 days. And then there are all those other times the boys and I "have to" spend at the field for one reason or another.

On most game days, I get to go straight from work to the games, while my wife is forced to curtail her daily plans early to feed the kids, make sure they've got all their required gear (we couldn't expect them to remember, after all) and then drive them out to their assorted destinations.

For 180 days a year, moms fight the battle of getting kids out the door in time for school, getting the house back into some semblance of order before the kids arrive home, then getting them home, and, in scant little time, making sure the homework is done, they're well fed, clean and off to bed at a reasonable hour so they'll have the energy to fight the battle another day. Finally, they get a well deserved break of 2-1/2 months, just to see one plan after anoth-

Shea still getting his kicks

Former CHS soccer star has enjoyed two solid seasons at Bowdoin

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

Flash, if you can, all the way back to the fall of 2000. The boys soccer team is parading through the State playoffs, rattling off one upset after another, including wins over two of the top three seeded teams in the tournament.

The team is solid up-front, but the winning run is anchored by swarming defense which is anchored by senior Erik Shea.

Back to the present. What's Shea been up to anyway?

He is in very different surroundings, but doing much of the same: winning at soccer. Playing a key role off the bench for the Bowdoin Polar Bears, Shea, a sophomore, was a contributing member of the team that won the New England Small College Athletic Conference (NESCAC) regular season.

Earning the top seed going into the NESCAC tournament, the team did fall in the semi-finals to rival Amherst College, as the at-large NCAA bid went to Williams College. However, Shea was proud of the effort both he, and his teammates, put forth last fall.

"We had a really strong team this year," noted Shea, who came off the bench in his freshman year as well. "Its probably the highest level D3 soccer in the country."

Shea attributed some of the team's great success this past fall to the strong freshman class brought in, a class that included the 2002 Massachusetts High School Player of the Year, Andrew Russo of Weymouth. However, he also noted the stark contrasts in coaching and playing styles he has witnessed and experienced since becoming a college athlete.

"The thing that surprised me was that [college soccer] is less skill oriented and more about strength and pounding the ball," said Shea. "Conditioning is big, and you have to be very aggressive, willing to bang around."

Shortstop Danielle Pinkus was a rock in the Lady Skippers infield this season, earning her an Honorable Mention nod.

All-Scholastic softball team

Cohasset's Pinkus and Peraino named Honorable Mentions

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

Several of the young women you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

Recent Cohasset High graduate Heather Peraino (the team's lone South Shore League all-star selectee) and junior shortstop Danielle Pinkus were both given consideration for their noteworthy contributions in the Lady Skippers return to varsity play after an eight year hiatus.

In the end, however, we limited ourselves to a team of just 16 girls, and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top softball players in Marinerland for this honor:

Devon Hitchcock - Senior (Capt.) Centerfield - Abington

Devon Hitchcock

Was one of the best hitters in Eastern Mass. this season, boasting a .618 average from the No. 9 spot to lead the South Shore League...Reached as high hitting .700 in the first half of the season, pacing her team to a second-straight SSL title (12-0, 20-3)...The three-year starter went 42-for-68 this season, racking up four doubles and 19 RBI...A SSL All-star, Hitchcock went 2-for-3 against Dighton-Rehoboth in the Div. 2 South Sectional semifinals...Also very strong defensively in centerfield, Hitchcock recorded only one

Cohasset 11's prove a formidable nine

On the glorious weekend of July 19 to 20, the CYBSA hosted its first tournament at the New Barnes Complex. The boys 11-year-old travel team hosted players from Norwell, Scituate and Braintree.

Organized by Bob McCunney, coach of the boys 11 year old team, this event was a two day affair, culminating in the championship game played on Monday July 21. Tremendous communication and coordination between the guest teams, the CYBSA, and Coach McCunney allowed the event to run smoothly.

The Cohasset boys won all four of their weekend games, soundly defeating Norwell and Braintree and coming from behind to beat Scituate in an exciting bottom of sixth inning rally. Center fielder John Giuggio, with two outs, drove in John Maher for the winning run with a perfect base hit. Cohasset faced Norwell in the championship game Monday Night and won an impressive victory, 9-3.

According to Coach McCunney "all of the boys contributed to the win."

The strength of the team is evident in some pretty impressive statistics compiled throughout the five game tournament. Cohasset scored 41 runs while holding their opponents to 16 runs.

Catcher John Kearney crossed the plate eight times for the home town team and led the team with seven hits. Pitchers Robby McCunney and Thomas Buckley struck out a combined 32 batters, with the entire Cohasset team striking out only 13 times. Brendan Doonan and John Maher led the team with eight and six RBIs respectively. Defensively, Graham Stevenson, John Giuggio, Andy McKenna, Chris Walsh and Justin Yeager contributed eight putouts and seven assists, holding their opponents on base.

The first round of the individual competitions took place on Saturday with the final rounds on Sunday. All of the boys from each team participated in each event on Saturday, hoping to make it to the finals.

The first round of the hitting contest was highlighted by Cohasset slugger Robby McCunney scoring a whopping 62 points, with two home runs.

Cohasset sent several players to the final rounds of the individual competitions, but the Norwell and Scituate boys dominated the events. Norwell took first second and third place in the race around the bases, first in the hitting contest and second in the golden arm competition. Scituate scored first and third in the golden arm, and second and error this season...Hitchcock plans to attend Westfield State College and continue her softball career. Abington coach Steve Kingman: "We've been fortunate to have good outfielders and Devon is one of them. She's a terrific player who did everything right for us."

Michelle Leines - Junior (Capt.) Pitcher - Abington

Michelle Leines

A three-year starter on the hill, this talented lefty notched another solid season for the South Shore League champions (12-0)...Her 1.48 ERA and 8-1 record helped Abington (20-3) reach the semi-finals of the Div. 2 South Sectional...Also no-hit two SSL opponents this season...Leines also hit .460 and drove in 36 runs from the lead-off spot...Provided the perfect one-two punch with fellow All-Scholastic and AnnMarie Murphy, who were both unbeaten in league play and split MVP honors...When she wasn't pitching, Leines put her strong arm to work in rightfield and was rarely scored on...Smashed the game-winning triple in an extra-innings 1-0 victory over rival Hanover...Spends her summers playing Jr. Olympics and pitched this year's Bay State Summer Games' Southeast team to a silver medal...The three-time SSL All-star will return to captain the AHS squad next season. Abington coach Steve Kingman: "Michelle is a great competitor. She plays all summer and has been pumping iron. She pitches her heart out."

AnnMarie Murphy - Sophomore Pitcher - Abington

With two quality starters last year, Murphy didn't see much time, but in her first starting year, she showed her prowess...The sophomore was the South Shore League's leading hurler with a nearly untouchable 0.63 ERA and unblemished record for the champion Green Wave...Went 10-2 overall (66 K's) this season, her only two losses coming against Case and Dighton-Rehoboth in the semis of the Div. 2 South Sectional...Returned the favor in the opening round of the tourney, holding Case to just three hits in a 7-0 victory...Has already hurled two perfect games, the first coming in her only start last season...Also a solid hitter, Murphy recorded a .375 average with 13 RBI, and a homerun...Was named co-MVP of the team with Leines...Murphy also runs cross country and plays basketball at AHS...She spends her summers playing with the Drifters' Under-16 program...She will return to the starting rotation next spring. Abington coach Steve Kingman: "Most coaches would kill to have either one (Murphy/Leines) of these kids. AnnMarie had a tremendous sophomore season."

Alex Hitchcock - Sophomore Shortstop - Abington

Alex Hitchcock

Having to fill the void left by one of the most talented athletes that ever played at AHS, Hitchcock responded loudly...The sophomore recorded only a pair of errors from the heavily active shortstop position, ably filling the shoes of 2002 grad Brittany Cheney... Hitchcock also hit a respectable .394 from the No. 5 spot in the lineup and notched several clutch hits in games this season...A starting second baseman last season, Hitchcock is smooth, graceful, and steady in the infield, according to her coach...She will return to the AHS roster next season. Abington coach Steve Kingman: "We were asking her to replace a world class kid and she did it seamlessly. She's got a great arm and is really going to be a force for us the next two years."

Nicole Messina - Senior (Capt.) Pitcher - Hanover

Nicole Messina

A three-time All-star (twice with the Patriot League, once in the South Shore League), Messina capped her season as one of Hanover's winningest pitchers...Won 11 games this season for the Patriot League co-champion Lady Indians (9-3, 15-7 overall)...With a share of the title on the line, Messina hurled a no-hitter in a must-win 3-0 victory over East Bridgewater...Also outlasted Milton standout Tracey Cidlevich in a 4-3 non-league win...Not overpowering, Messina relies primarily on her smarts, beating batters with her clever pitch placement...A three-time All-Scholastic, Messina spent her summer playing in softball tourneys and with the South Shore Night League...She will attend Curry College and tryout for the softball team. Hanover coach Matt Plummer: "Nikki's like Greg Maddux. She doesn't blow pitches by people, but she works the count. She does her homework and knows her opponents very well."

Lindsey Arria - Sophomore Shortstop - Hanover

Just a sophomore, this two-time Patriot League All-star and All-Scholastic is already playing well beyond her years...Was among the team leaders in hitting from the lead-off spot with a .342, stolen bases, runs scored (27), and on base percentage...At shortstop, Arria committed only two errors this season, helping Hanover (15-6) tie EB for the PL title (9-3) and quarterfinals of the Div. 2 South Sectional...An extremely confident and dedicated player, Arria's quickness and good decision making ability are among her greatest assets...Also a forward on the HHS soccer team and point-guard on the basketball team, Arria made our All-Scholastic squads in each sport...She will be among the top returning players to the squad next season. Hanover coach Matt Plummer: "She is an extremely solid player. She's just so consistent and does a lot to help out. She's awesome; better than Nomar."

Lindsey Arria

Taryn Sullivan - Junior Second base - Hanover

Taryn Sullivan

While her average wasn't quite as high as last season (.502), Sullivan more than did her part for the Patriot League co-champions, hitting .400 from the No. 3 spot in the order...The two-time PL All-star led the team in extra-base hits, notching nine doubles and three triples for the Lady Indians (15-6, 9-3 PL)...Also a solid second baseman, Sullivan's play in field and at the plate helped land Hanover in the quarterfinals of the Div. 2 South Sectional...Sullivan is a two-time softball All-Scholastic...Also a talented soccer player at HHS, Sullivan will return to captain both teams next season. Hanover coach Matt Plummer: "Taryn can really crush the ball. She really hits all of our opponents' pitchers very well. She's a tough kid and a good player."

Rachelle Kulak - Senior (Capt.) Pitcher - Hingham

Rachelle Kulak

The "heart and soul" of the Harbor-women squad throughout her career, Kulak more than left her mark on the sport...Revered by opposing Patriot League coaches, Kulak's hard-hitting, hard-throwing play and fun-loving attitude made her an undeniable presence...The three-time PL All-star led the team again in hitting with a .553 average, with 16 RBI...On the hill, Kulak struck out an incredible 166 batters, starting every game this season...She hurled a no-hitter in a 1-0 victory over Rockland and struck out 23 batters in an extra-inning win over Scituate...Kulak helped lead her team to the tourney her sophomore year...Kulak spends her summers playing Jr. Olympic softball...She has not yet decided on future plans. Hingham coach Joe Cotton: "For years, we've relied so heavily on Rachelle because she was what we had. She lives and dies softball. She's been the glue that has held this team together for four years."

Ally O'Toole - Senior (Capt.) Catcher - Weymouth

Ally O'Toole

Was the second overall pick on the Bay State Carey All-star team, following a highly successful senior campaign...The two-year captain was the Lady Wildcats' (10-10) and BSC's leading hitter this season, despite missing four games...O'Toole hit .449 and had an on-base percentage of .550...The three-time BSC All-star also scored 11 runs, drove in 6, and stole 6 bases...O'Toole went 4-for-4 in a 7-6 stunner over Braintree and had key hits in a 7-5 victory over BSC champs Framingham...Behind the plate, O'Toole was one of the league's best as base-stealers rarely found success, throwing out 11-of-14 in non-first and third situations...Won her team's MVP award the last two years and was the runner-up for league MVP...O'Toole plans to attend UMass Amherst in the fall. Weymouth coach Kate Daley: "Behind the plate, she was like a wall for us. The accolades just kept on coming for her."

Sarah Taylor - Senior (Capt.) Third base - Marshfield

Sarah Taylor

A two-year captain on the Marshfield squad, Taylor was the leading hitter on the team for the second-straight season...Taylor hit .375 and racked up 21 RBI...Playing in the highly-competitive Old Colony League, home to Div. 1 state champs, Taunton, Taylor's solid play at the plate and in the field at third base helped Marshfield capture a 7-7 record in league...Their 11-9 mark qualified the team for post-season play for the first time in years...The OCL All-star also caught eight games this season for the Lady Rams...Also a volleyball All-Scholastic, Taylor was the squad's starting setter...She competed for the gymnastics team in the winter...Taylor plans to attend Tufts University in the fall. Marshfield coach Mike Barrett: "She's the one player that we're really going to miss next year. She did everything for us. She stepped in at catcher and threw out one of the league's best runners. She's just a great all-around student/athlete."

Jessica MacNeil - Junior (Capt.) Shortstop - Holbrook

Jessy has been the Lady Bulldogs starting shortstop since seventh grade...she played a big part in her team's 15-2 regular season in both the field and the plate...hit a team best .518, hit three home runs, led the team in runs scored and finished second in RBI...hit third in the batting order...is also a standout soccer and basketball at Holbrook High, earning Mariner All-Scholastic Honorable Mentions this year for both sports...has been a starting guard for the hoops team since her eighth grade season...has played varsity soccer since her eighth grade season, and this past fall moved from the frontline to the all-important sweeper position...will serve as a captain for all three teams next year as a senior...Honor Roll student...serves as an instructor at youth soccer camps in the summer...plays with group of high school teammates soccer in Rockland...plans to attend college, and would like to play at least one sport, with soccer or basketball being her top preference at the moment...Holbrook coach Sharon Farrell: "Jessy is a talented athlete, obviously, but she's also very committed to whatever sport she's doing and she's a leader on three different teams."

Jessica MacNeil

Linsey Vacchino - Senior (Capt.) Third base - Silver Lake

Linsey Vacchino

A sensational defensive third baseman who is being named to her second consecutive Mariner All-Scholastic team...three year varsity starter who really blossomed at the plate the last two seasons, hitting .470 as junior and .480 this spring with two homers and 21 RBI...made just two errors all season at one of the busiest spots on the diamond for the 15-5 Lady Lakers...two time Old Colony League all-star... had two hits against Taunton's Katlyn Mallette, one of the state's top pitchers...also had two hits in 5-3 loss to Quincy in the first round of the state tourney... plays softball year round, moving to the Bridgewater Sports Dome in the winter... used to pitch at youth level...Patriot Ledger all-scholastic...voted her "Gym Class Hero" for the Class of 2003...also plays basketball at Silver Lake...ran fall cross country as an underclassman, but gave that up to manage the SL volleyball team last year...Kingston resident... National Society member...Honor Roll student...graduated top 50 in her class of 350...is headed to Ithaca College, where she plans to try out for the 2002 Div. 3 national championship softball team...also to play plenty of intramurals, including basketball, tennis and possibly badminton...will major in Sports Management...Silver Lake coach Mike Brennan: "Linsey is without a doubt the best defensive third baseman I've ever coached in my 14 years. She has excellent instincts and reflexes. She makes unbelievable plays. Her improved hitting over the last two years was just an added bonus."

Korey Graney - Senior (Capt.) Pitcher - Silver Lake

Became Silver Lake's all-time winningest pitcher this spring with 28 wins (the old record was 22)...in her second season as the team's top pitcher, Korey posted a record of 15-5...most impressive wins were a no-hitter against OCL rival North Quincy and a three-hitter versus arch rival B-R in a key late season showdown...the tall righthander struck out 86 and walked 29 in 137 innings for the 15-5 Lady Lakers...had an impressive ERA of 1.39... Enterprise All-Scholastic...Old Colony League all-star...plays summer baseball for home town Pembroke team... a youth softball pitching instructor...will be attending Massasoit Community College and plans to continue playing softball...will likely be used as an outfielder and backup pitcher in her first collegiate season... Silver Lake coach Mike Brennan: "Korey is a grinder. She goes out like a horse every game, and she's never hurt. She would keep us in every game. I could count on her pitching four or five games a week. She's real tough. At one point, she had a foot injury but she still played."

Korey Graney

Andrea Gardner - Junior Catcher - Silver Lake

Moved from California to Kingston for one school year and wound up being named to two Mariner All-Scholastic teams (volleyball was the other)...a sensational athlete who quickly established her self as one of the area's premier defensive catchers...also hit around .300 for the 15-5 Lady Lakers...Old Colony League All-Star..." Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic Honorable Mention...also ran winter track for SL...High Honors student...gifted 5-foot-8 athlete has vertical leap of 28 inches...Silver Lake coach Mike Brennan: "We're going to really miss Andrea next year. She came in here, and just made us a different team with her work behind the plate. A really good catcher can make a huge difference for a team, and she did just that for us."

Andrea Gardner

Emily Bularzik - Sophomore Pitcher - Braintree

Posted a 12-5 record for the surprising Lady Wamps team (14-5) in what was supposed to be a rebuilding year... started 17 of 20 games, and allowed one run or fewer in 14 of 18 appearances...the 5-foot-2 righty utilized pinpoint control to strike out 104 batters, while walking just nine in 128 innings of work...finished the season with an ERA of 1.15... had a string of 27 consecutive scoreless innings in one stretch...season highlights include a 2-0 win over BSC rival Milton, in which she surrendered just three hits and only one ball reached the outfield... Bay State Conference first team all-star...Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic...went 5-5 on the mound as a freshman... plays AAU softball for the Bay State Strikers...tied for top rank in her class of 347...co-captain of the BHS debate team...member of the math team...French

Cohasset swimmers wash under K of C squad

It was a busy week for Cohasset swim team with the addition of an extra mid-week competition against Scituate's Knights of Columbus. The previous Friday meet had fallen victim to yet another thunderstorm and now it was time to catch up and get back on schedule. Cohasset had already accumulated 129 points to K of C's 102 before rain stopped play, but K of C's swimmers have always been tough competitors and although Cohasset has won in the past, the margin of victory has, at times, been slim. In the end, however, the home team prevailed and Cohasset won this critical meet by a comfortable 42 point margin.

The afternoon kicked off with the 100 yard medley relays, and the eight and under boys and girls got things off to good start with first place finishes in both their races (boys: 1st: Fontaine; McCarthy; Adkins; Kissick; 2nd: Brown; Michalowski; Swain; Berube; 4th: Green; Doonan; McCarthy; Rice; girls: 1st: Buckley; Carrier; Farren; Teague; 4th: Malerti; Bodner; Zimmerman; McCunney; 5th: McGowan; Noble; Berube; Farren). The ten and under boys just missed the win but took second and third places and the girls pushed back to claim first place in their race (boys: 2nd: Salerno; Durkin, T.; Mahoney; Durkin, J.; 3rd: Murphy; McCormack; Shipp; Buckley; 6th: Kennedy; Pratt; Murphy; Leahy; girls: 1st: Fontaine; Michalowski; Kissick; Donohue; 3rd: Adkins; Seraikas; Murphy; Karski; 4th: Axelson; Gibbons; Berube; Haber).

At the twelve and under level, the boys finished second and fifth while the girls claimed a win (boys: 2nd: Kissick; Porter; Doonan; Ulmer; 5th: Queenan; Plante; McCormack; Hurley; girls: 1st: Ryan; Meikleham; Mahoney, C.; Mahoney, M.; 4th: Costa; Sullivan; Buckley; Kelly; 5th: Gibbons; Asnault; Salerno; Teague).

The medleys ended with the seventeen and under 200 yard races and although the competition was fierce and Cohasset was denied the win in both races, the second place finishes gave the home team enough to push ahead by four critical points (boys: 2nd: Bilton; Zappalo; Tehranian; Conway; 3rd: Doonan; Musto; Drybanski; Hunt; 4th: Muir; Kelly; Cunningham; Shipp; girls: 2nd: Nelson; Anderson; Garber; Durkin; 5th: Harrington, B.; James; Harrington, K.; Ogrodnik).

The ten and under 50 yard freestyle was next and the boys and girls really pushed the pace, with wins in both their races (boys: 1st: Durkin, T.; 4th: Salerno, J.; 6th: Buckley, T.; girls: 1st: Michalowski, A.; 2nd: Karski, E.; 4th: Adkins, O.). Cohasset now had 61 points to K of C's 57.

In the individual medleys the twelve and under boys started well with a comfortable win (1st: Kissick, J.; 5th: Hurley, P.; 6th: Ofsthun, C.) and the girls, just a split second from a first place finish, claimed second (2nd: Ryan, K.; 5th: Buckley, A.; 6th: McElhinny, C.). At the fourteen and under level the boys, once again, just missed the win, while the girls finished first (boys: 2nd: Drybanski, J.; 4th: Cunningham, C.; 5th: Shipp, A.; girls: 1st: Durkin, L.; 2nd: Garber, C.; 4th: Teague, M.). The individual medleys rounded off with a second place finish for the boys in the seventeen and under level, and a first and fourth place finish for the girls (boys: 2nd: Bilton, B.; girls: 1st: Nelson, M.; 4th: Ogrodnik, M.).

The sky looked threatening and there was some concern that another meet would be rained out, but swimmers continued to line up, determined to get to their races.

Going into the freestyle event, Cohasset's lead had improved, though marginally, to 8 points, and, once again, the eight and unders set the pace with a win in both their races (boys: 1st: Kissick, C.; 2nd: Swain, G.; 4th: Green, C.; girls: 1st: Teague, M.; 3rd: Bodner, K.; 5th: McCunney, K.). The ten and under boys fell back a little into second, fourth and fifth place and the girls pushed ahead again, with a clean sweep – first, second and third places (boys: 2nd: Durkin, J.; 4th: Carpenter, C.; 5th: Mahoney, R.; girls: 1st: Fontaine, E.; 2nd: Murphy, O.; 3rd: Donohue, M.). The twelve and under boys and girls were both denied the win, but took second and third places (boys: 2nd: Doonan, B.; 3rd: Porter, I.; 6th: Ulmer, W.; girls: 2nd: Mahoney, C.; 3rd: Mahoney, M.; 5th: Sullivan, O.).

The fourteen and unders were up next, but by this time the wind was swirling, the skies were black and it was clear a storm was on the way. Still, the boys took their places and Colin Conway powered home to win the race, followed closely by Alexander Hunt and Nick Zappalo (1st: Conway, C.; 2nd: Hunt, A.; 3rd: Zappalo, N.) - and then the sound of thunder, a crack of lightening and a total downpour. The pool was cleared in what seemed like seconds and the meet was over for the day.

We had reached event 23 of 64. It was not the best end to the day, but the meet would be re-scheduled, and at least this time Cohasset would be returning to the competition having already established a 27 point lead.

And now we fast forward a few days to Wednesday, July 23rd, and the swim meet can resume.

The races began where they had left off the week before, and the fourteen and under girls were first up, in the 50 yard freestyle. They placed second and fourth (2nd: Teague, M.; 4th: Campbell, A.). The seventeen and under boys followed with a win from Kayvon Tehranian, and the girls took third and fourth places (boys: 1st: Tehranian, K.; 4th: MacCarthy, E.; girls: 3rd: Anderson, C.; 4th: Ogrodnik, M.). The score was now 138 for Cohasset and 120 for K of C.

In the butterfly we saw some wonderful performances, not least from the eight and under boys who got the event off to a great start with a win in their race (1st: Adkins, J.; 2nd: Swain, G.). The girls didn't quite make the win, but secured second and third places (2nd: Buckley, M.; 3rd: Teague, M.), as did the ten and under boys and girls (boys: 2nd: Carrier, J.; 3rd: Mahoney, R.; girls: 2nd: Kissick, H.; 3rd: Karski, E.). The twelve and under boys also claimed first place, courtesy of Jake Kissick and the girls put up a great fight against tough competition, and finished second and third (boys: 1st: Kissick, J.; 4th: Queenan, C.; girls: 2nd: Mahoney, C.; 3rd: Meikleham, A.).

At the 50 yard distance, the fourteen and under boys and girls followed their younger team mates with second and third place finishes, as did the seventeen and under boys (boys: 2nd: Conway, C.; 3rd: Shipp, A.; girls: 2nd: Garber, C.; 3rd: Fortin, S.; boys, 17 and under: 2nd: Tehranian, K.; 3rd: Cunningham, C.). The seventeen and under girls rounded off the event with second and fourth places (2nd: Daley, M.; 4th: Harrington, B.). As the butterfly came to an end Cohasset's lead had slipped back from 18 to 15 points.

In the breaststroke event Cohasset started strong, heading home first in all four 25 yard races (boys, 8 and under: 1st: McCarthy, M.; 3rd: Fontaine, A.; girls, 8 and under: 1st: Carrier, A.; 2nd: Farren, N.; boys, 10 and under: 1st: Durkin, T.; 2nd: Carrier, J.; girls, 10 and under: 1st: Michalowski, A.; 4th: Farren, A.).

At the 50 yard distance the twelve and under boys were held to third and fourth places, while the girls took first and second (boys: 3rd: Porter, I.; 4th: Queenan, C.; girls: 1st: Meikleham, A.; 2nd: Kelly, M.). The fourteen and under boys also put in a great performance to finish first and second (boys, 14 and under: 1st: Hunt, A.; 2nd: Zappolo, N.). The fourteen and under girls just missed the win, but took second and third and the event rounded off with a win for the seventeen and under boys and a second place finish for the girls (girls, 14 and under: 2nd: Durkin, L.; 4th: Teague, M.; boys, 17 and under: 1st: Roach, K.; 3rd: Kelly, T.; girls, 17 and under: 2nd: Anderson, C.). Cohasset was now 34 points ahead of K of C.

The backstroke was next and once again Cohasset put in some great performances to claim wins in three of the four 25 yard races (boys, eight and under: 1st: Fontaine, A.; 2nd: Adkins, J.; girls, eight and under: 1st: McCunney, K.; 2nd: Farren, N.; boys, ten and under: 2nd: Salerno, J.; 4th: Murphy, J.; girls, ten and under: 1st: Fontaine, E.; 3rd: Kissick, H.).

At the 50 yard distance the twelve and under boys and girls pushed hard but were denied the win (boys: 2nd: Doonan, B.; 4th: Plante, J.; girls: 2nd: Mahoney, M.; 3rd: Ryan, K.). The fourteen and under boys pulled back with first and second places, while the girls finished second and fourth (boys: 1st: Drybanski, J.; 2nd: Doonan, P.; girls: 2nd: Fortin, S.; 4th: Tehranian, R.). The event finished on a high with a win for the seventeen and under boys and girls (boys: 1st: Tehranian, K.; girls: 1st: Daley, M.; 4th: Harrington, B.). Going into the final event Cohasset had established a 50 point lead over K of C.

The final free relays are always an exciting spectacle and even with a comfortable lead they are a critical part of the meet. As always it is a delight to see the tiny eight and unders swim with such focus and technique and, as usual, they gave the event a great start with wins in both their races (boys: 1st: Fontaine; Swain; Adkins; Kissick; 2nd: McCarthy; Brown; Berube; Michalowski; girls: 1st: Teague; Carrier; Buckley; Farren; 3rd: Bodner; Noble; Malerti; McCunney). The ten and under swimmers also did well with second and third places for the boys and first and third places for the girls (boys: 2nd: Mahoney; Salerno; Durkin, J.; Durkin, T.; 3rd: Leahy; Carrier; Faber; Buckley; girls: 1st: Fontaine; Donohue; Kissick; Michalowski; 3rd: Adkins; Kucinski; Farren; Karski).

At the twelve and under level the boys finished in second place and the girls took second and third places to add a further eight points to Cohasset's score (boys: 2nd: Doonan; Connors; Porter; Kissick; girls: 2nd: Meikleham; Mahoney, M.; Ryan; Mahoney, C). Finally the event rounded off with second and fourth places for the seventeen and under boys and third and fourth for the girls (boys: 2nd: Zappolo; Drybanski; Hunt; Conway; 4th: Doonan; Shipp; Cunningham; Roach; girls: 3rd: Durkin; Teague; Garber; Anderson; 4th: Ogrodnik; James; Tehranian; Harrington). Cohasset now had 333 points to K of C's 291.

It was another great afternoon for Cohasset's Swim Team. It is not easy to restart an abandoned competition, but that is exactly what these young swimmers did – picking up where they had left off and staying in front right to the end of the afternoon. Congratulations on another successful outing to Ted Hughes and his assistants Casey Anderson and Blake Worrall. The schedule is back on track and so is the team.

third in the hitting contest.

Coach McCunney said "although our Cohasset players didn't win any awards in the individual competitions, they went undefeated in the games, ultimately winning the championship game. That effort is the epitome of true teamwork."

Cohasset players Chris Walsh and John Kearney both said "the individual skills competitions were very fun."

Walsh added: "It was great that we could play in so many games."

When asked, Brendan Doonan commented: "I think the bobblehead trophies are the best!"

Thanks to the efforts of Coach McCunney, CYBSA president Mike Kearney and several parents and fans, the tournament was a success, and hopefully the beginning of a great tradition in Cohasset youth baseball.

Front: Bat Boy Martin Buckley

Shea still getting his kicks gave him a good foundation of soccer knowledge and experience. But it was his tenure with the South Shore Crusaders, a club team out of Marshfield, that prepared him for the brutalities of playing past high school.

The Bowdoin squad is coached by Brian Ainscough, an "intense Irish coach who grew up in the hard-knock way of life coaching," according to Shea. The coach is known to have his players up at 5:30 the morning after a loss for an extra session of sprints.

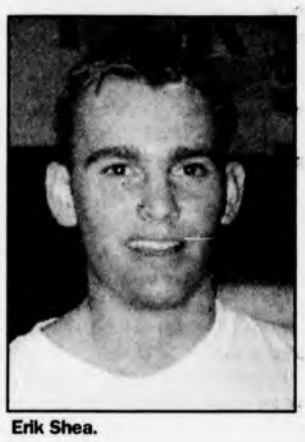
"He's not afraid to yell, and he's not afraid to really really push us," said Shea, who was actually quite complimentary of Ainscough's hardened approach to coaching. "But it definitely wears on you."

But Shea will not have to worry about such a maniacal practice schedule for his junior year, as he plans to spend the full year studying in Barcelona, Spain. While he plans to play club soccer during his study abroad, he is unsure of whether or not he will play upon his return for his senior season.

This freedom to decide whether or not to play was one of the factors that contributed to Shea's choice of Bowdoin. At a bigger school, or in a different division, he might have been obligated to play all four years.

At Bowdoin, Shea has the right to pursue the dream he began last year: defending the C-League Intramural Hockey League Championship with a 10-man team of skaters from Texas, California and Hawaii.

Shea admits he is "leaning towards" playing Bowdoin soccer again. Nevertheless, Skipper fans can rest assured that one of their own will be utilizing his athletic talents wisely.



Erik Shea.

Summer baseball not for everyone er to "do something fun" go up in smoke because of the constantly changing summer baseball schedule.

I bring this up — dads, coaches and young ballplayers – in the hopes you'll cut mom a little slack when the summer season finally ends, and not only do the things she wants to do, but do them with a smile.

It used to be such a treat to see my sons pop on SportsCenter first thing every morning…like father, like son.

That is until the "All Kobe, all the time" programming began, prompting my subtle suggestions for alternative viewing.

On that matter, let me just say this: whether Kobe is found guilty, completely exonerated, or anything in between, he has already been convicted and found guilty of phoniness.

Yet more proof of why we should never idolize pro athletes. Admire what they do in their chosen sport, sure, but hold them up as role models, never.

The star athletes of today all have handlers who, in the pursuit of insanely profitable endorsement deals, paint impossible-to-live-up-to perfect pictures of their clients. This is why, when the falls come, they are so long and devastating.

Charles Barkley, though he was widely criticized when he said that athletes were not cut out to be role models, hit it right on the head.

People were annoyed at Chuck for a bit, just as many were downright upset for a short time with Allen Iverson, Latrell Sprewell and Chris Webber when they went through their legal entanglements, but most people got past those feelings in relatively short order.

Kobe, however, should not count on the public having a similarly short memory. The reason: Allen, Latrell and Chris never allowed themselves to be portrayed as the personifications of morality. They may not be nice guys, but at least they're not phonies. Kobe has already been tried, convicted and forever labeled for that crime in the court of public opinion. The public has a tough time forgiving that. Just ask Michael Jackson.

I hope there's no truth to the bulk of the Red Sox trade rumors floating around these days. I've said it before and I'll say it again: the Red Sox braintrust would be foolish to trade Trot Nixon for anything short of a proven top notch number one or two pitcher. True, Trot is not a star, and nothing he does on the field is invaluable. But the combination of what he does on it and off it is extremely underrated and would, it says here, prove extremely difficult to replace.

It's become popular in recent months to call Jason Varitek the heart and soul of the Sox, but Trot is clearly cut from the same bolt of cloth. He's a true team-first guy and plays the game and works at the game as hard as anyone. Unlike most of his teammates, he's also not afraid to speak his mind or state the hard truth when it is called for.

I applauded the decision to trade Shea Hillenbrand for a B.H. Kim. I would have railed against the move, however, if it had been Trot going to Arizona even though I freely concede Hillenbrand may have more baseball talent.

Yes, character can make a whole lot of difference, as the entire baseball world witnessed last fall when the Angels won the World Series.

Finally, a sporting spectacle that lived up to its hype. This past weekend's three game set with the Yankees was as good as it gets in athletic circles, and I'd be saying that even if there had been late developments that cost the Sox wins on Saturday and Sunday. Of course, I might not have been as motivated to actually write about it.

Snaring stud Scott Williamson from the Reds for a minor leaguer (Single-A left-hander Phillip Dumatrait?) who wasn't even listed among the Sox top 20 prospects was a pleasant surprise, but the real treat came the morning after when King George flew his entire baseball management team down to Tampa Bay for "an emergency meeting."

As Theo Epstein said on WEEI, that's five hours in the air inside the final 30 hours before the trading deadline that no one is manning the phones.

As if that wasn't enough to make the corn flakes taste a little crunchier Wednesday morning, late word arrived that the Evil Empire cut its losses with disgruntled rightfielder Raul Mondesi, shipping him to Arizona for David Delucci and two minor leaguers—three guys who will have virtually no impact in this year's stretch run.

The guess here is the Sox will acquire a pitcher who knocks Wakefield down to number four in the rotation and sends Mendoza (hopefully with his confidence restored) back to the pen. Really, what else does this team need beyond that?

So why haven't the Yankees been unable to make scores in the trade market comparable to the Sox acquisitions of Sauerbeck or Williamson? One observer's thought: owners all around baseball — angered over Steinbrenner's resistance of the luxury tax, followed by his utter disregard for it once the compromise was worked — are intent not to help him.

THANK YOU CAMBRIDGE!!!

There Is an Alternative to Nursing Home Care

Families today are in search of much needed care for their senior family members. Yet, they know that the institutional environment of a nursing home that focuses on ailments and infirmities is not always a good choice. There is a better senior living alternative—Sunrise Assisted Living.

Here, in a beautiful homelike setting, residents enjoy supportive health care for all the realities of advanced age and the promise of new friendships, too. Sunrise is a positive and lively senior living option, where quality of life is as great a priority as good physical care. And... Sunrise is significantly less expensive than a nursing home. A truly better value and a better life.

American Legion raffles Vespa motor scooters

The George H. Mealy Post of the American Legion in Cohasset is sponsoring a most unusual raffle for the benefit of its Christine Burke scholarship fund. The lucky winner will drive away with two Vespa ET2 motor scooters or $5,000. The choice is theirs. The Vespa motor scooters have a retail value of $3,295 each. They don't require a special drivers license nor do they need to be registered. The winner may have their choice of any available colors. An anonymous friend of the Legion and Herb Chambers who, along with 25 automobile dealerships, owns Vespa of Boston donated the Vespa motor scooters. Chances for the raffle are $10 each and only 1,000 will be sold. They may be purchased at the Legion post at 98 Summer St. at 781-383-9657. The drawing will be held at the Legion's annual clambake on Sandy Beach on Sept. 6 or 7 (rain date). The Christine Burke scholarships are awarded to deserving high school seniors on the South Shore who are going on to a higher education. In 2003, $14,000 in scholarships were awarded.

Enjoy dinner and a movie

Patty Libby, owner of the Square Café in Hingham has announced a fun summer promotion along with the Loring Hall Cinema, Hingham's treasured "small screen" movie house. According to Libby, "The dinner and a movie package is a great way to treat our guests to a casual, yet special night out "on the square." The Loring is an all time favorite Hingham tradition and we think the package is a great way to celebrate the things which make Hingham Square so special."

The dinner and a movie package is available Monday through Thursday from 5 to 7 p.m. and includes a small salad, entree, movie ticket and a "tasty treat" package to go. The price is $25 per person (tax gratuity and beverages are an additional charge.)

ARC golf outing was a big hit

The 16th annual South Shore ARC Lou Bailey Golf Outing raised more than $23,600 in support of children and adults with mental retardation, cognitive, physical and/or developmental disabilities. On June 24, more than 100 golfers played Lakeville Country Club in support of this annual fund-raising event.

Kathleen Bailey of Cohasset and Bob Gramm of Norwell served as co-chairs of the golf outing, and Jim Lagrotteria of Cohasset served as volunteer auctioneer. Event sponsors included South Shore Savings Bank, Fallon Ambulance, Mass Knights of Columbus, Braintree Cooperative Bank, South Shore Buick, Elizabeth and David Potter, and Streetwear Consultants Inc. More than 40 area business donated items to raffle and/or auction off raising $6,000. According to David Calhoun, executive director of South Shore ARC, "We are very thankful to all those who support this annual event. The funds raised help sustain the services that so many individuals and families depend on us for."

South Shore ARC is a private not-for-profit agency dedicated to providing the highest quality services and advocacy for children and adults with mental retardation, cognitive, physical or developmental disabilities. For more information or to become a member of South Shore ARC, call Mary Ann Walsh at 781-335-3023, Ext. 2230.

Kids don creative costumes for Beanstalk dress rehearsal

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

This story is fifth in a series, outlining the process from start to finish, of producing children's theater. The Children's Drama Workshop, founded by the Deveney sisters, Beth, Grace and Sarah, is in its 15th year.

There are sure to be many mothers and mothers helpers around Cohasset with sore fingers, as children in this year's Children's Drama Workshop production of "Jack Beanstalk" came to rehearsal this week wearing full costumes. All actors are given a costume guide to follow, but the final masterpiece is created at home.

Beth Deveney, who has been running the workshop every summer for the past 15 years with her sister Grace, said she is always impressed with the costumes children make each year, and this group is no exception.

"The costumes are incredible. The parents did an amazing job," she said.

Sister Grace couldn't agree more. "I love them, but I knew I would," she said.

For many children, costumes can be fashioned from items found at home. For Luke Tedeschi, who plays a Mexican Jumping Bean, finding a sombrero was an easy task. His black and silver Mexican hat was purchased six years ago when he visited Tijuana.

Claire Pozniak, who plays Fairybell, said her pink tutu was from a past dance recital, as were many of the other fairies' tutus.

Ian Porter's Henry J. Harp costume was not as simple, and he is quick to credit his mother for his shiny gold ensemble.

"She worked for two days on it," he said. "Her machine broke, so she had to do most of it by hand."

With gold pants and a matching shirt as well as a gold cardboard harp, her efforts are sure to be noticed when Ian takes the stage.

The three Stalker Sisters, played by Betsy and Jillian Crawford as well as Johanna Regan and Kathleen Kelly who will share the role of Susie Stalker, can thank the Crawford's mother for outfitting them so well. All three Stalker Sisters will wear matching long green dresses with a hoop bottom for their performances.

"I'm not sure how long it took her [to make the costumes]. It didn't take that long for the dress, but she made the rest up as she went along," Betsy said.

McCauley Braun, who will play Sammy the Snail, said she had help from both her mother an d her babysitter to create her metallic green snail costume. She said it took about two days to make the costume in full, including the rolled foam snail shell, which she carries on her back.

"I helped pick out the cloth and I made the headband," she said, which has plastic "google eyes" attached to the top of long antennae.

But for little sister Micaela, who plays Bunny Rabbit, McCauley said they had to turn to their mother's very crafty friend to sew a bunny costume. Out of just a fleece blanket, she fashioned a bunny suit and hat, complete with floppy ears and a big, fluffy bunny tail.

Of the costumes, Grace said it's easy to see how much effort and imagination were put into their creation.

"People are really talented," she said.

She also said it's so nice to see people come together to help collaborate on the children's costumes, and in the end, they add a lot to the show.

But, what people might not know is just how important the costume design is to the overall feeling of the show. Beth said that colors for the scene are decided based on costume ideas and even the lighting takes into consideration the colors the actors will be wearing. Seeing everything come together during dress rehearsals, she couldn't be happier.

"They're the finishing touch," she said.

Performances for "Jack Beanstalk" will be held Aug. 5 at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. and Aug. 6 at 1 p.m. and 7 p.m. at the new air conditioned Deer Hill Auditorium. Tickets are $10. To reserve tickets in advance, please call Cohasset Town Hall at (781) 383-4109.

Curtain to rise on 'Jack Beanstalk'

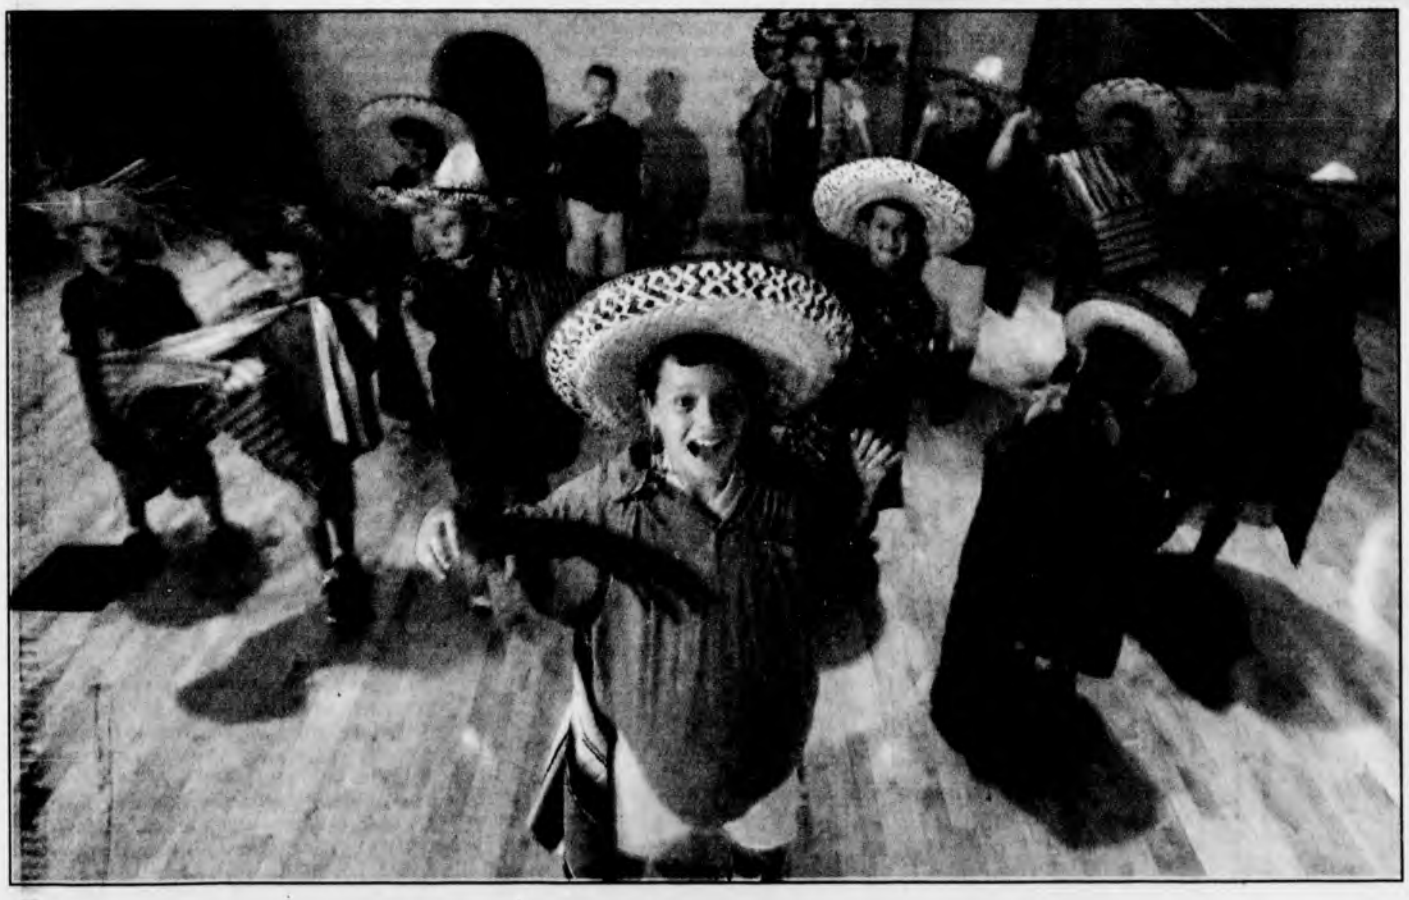
Original children's production debuts

Above: Olivia Adkins, Amy Costa, Paige DeSisto, Olivia Murphy and Madeleine Vayda portray the Flower Children in the production on stage Aug. 5 & 6. (Names are not necessarily in order).

At right: Mimi Mahoney (Old Man) and the Arrows rehearse for 'Jack Beanstalk' which is on stage next week.

The Fairies are bound to captivate "Jack Beanstalk" audiences. "Jack Beanstalk" tells the story of a boy named Jack who sells the family cow to a man of the woods in exchange for magic beans. A beanstalk grows and Jack ascends to a new world where he befriends a slew of quirky characters determined to help him stay the Giant and win the great treasure in the sky.

McCauley Braun (Sammy the Snail), Micaela Braun (Bunny Rabbit) and Isabel Robinson (Mad Cow) are featured in the show produced by the Deveney sisters.



Above: The Stalker Sisters (Johanna Regan, Kathleen Kelly, Betsy Crawford and Jillian Crawford) get into their roles. The Cohasset Children's Drama Workshop will celebrate its 15-year anniversary with two performances of "Jack Beanstalk" Aug. 5 and 6 at the new, air-conditioned Deer Hill School auditorium.

OCT Massachusetts TAG bags
The Spirit of America

Recycled pocket books give fashion minded a license to thrill

A Euro Cyclone made from an Ireland license plate is displayed along with a collection of license plate photo albums at Essentials boutique in Hanover.

By Alice Coyle
ACOYLE@CNC.COM

Ever wonder what becomes of that license plate you turned in to the Registry of Motor Vehicles?

Don't be surprised if your old red, white and blue "Spirit of Massachusetts" tag winds up in someone else's hands — literally.

Recycled license plate handbags are racing out of trendy Essentials Boutique at Hanover's Merchant Row Mall at high speed, and store manager Patricia Happel said ladies of all ages are driving up sales.

The quirky and unique purses are made entirely from recycled materials, most of them from cars and trucks. The body of each bag is made from the license plates riveted together in a cylindrical shape. The sides are constructed through the use of gleaming baby moon hub caps, and the straps — in shoulder or hand bag lengths — are made of rubber from truck inner tubes. The purse opens on a hinge with a recycled bottle top from beer or vintage soda companies serving as the clasp. The purses also have rubber feet on the bottom that allow them to sit upright perfect for outdoor venues like that next trip to Fenway Park.

But be prepared to draw some attention, cautions Happel, who loves her purse, but noted her husband doesn't share the fondness for this funky fashion accessory.

"Quite frankly, my husband hates it," said Happel, noting that whenever she carries the bag, wherever they go they are inundated with questions and comments about the purse. "He tells me to leave that purse at home, when we go out."

When she straps her cyclone purse with her initials on the plate over her shoulder, Lauretta Chouinard finds similar reactions, but says her husband, Bill gets a kick out of all the attention. When a woman seated next to them at Bellas one evening inquired about the purse, Bill informed them he made it during his time in prison, Chouinard recalls with a laugh.

Seventeen-year-old Nicole Carlson doesn't mind the attention a bit. A collector of handbags, the Hanover High School senior said her Massachusetts tag bag with a Coca Cola bottle top clasp is her favorite, and the one that brings the most compliments, especially from the boys.

"They want to pick it up and find out how it was made," she said.

Nicole said she jokes to those curious about the origins of her handbag that she made it herself, after removing the license plate from their car the night before.

Happel's Massachusetts license plate purse — the Super Cyclone model — has her initials and she waited for one to come in with a P and H together. She said several customers have done the same. Chouinard bought a license plate purse for her daughter-in-law, Patty, when she found one with the initials P C, and coincidentally the year she got married — 1989 — on that particular bag. A week later, another license plate purse with her own initials and the year of her graduation came into the store, and Chouinard had to have it, Happel said.

While any state's plate can be special ordered, Happel primarily carries Massachusetts and New York tags, although last week's display included a super cyclone model from the sunshine state with its familiar juicy orange smack dab in the center. The Euro Cyclone line featuring license plates from foreign cars is popular with world traveler types or those proud of their heritage, be it Italian, Irish or German. Although, Happel did note the Euro Cyclones from France weren't big sellers when they carried them during the spring.

Each license plate bag is felt-lined with a lip stick holder in the cover and a vintage bottle top used for the clasp. The sides are made of baby moon hubcaps which serve as a perfect mirror for makeup touch ups.

The Pittsburgh, PA. company Littlearth Productions constructs the handbags along with several other recycled accessory lines — including beer bottle cap belts and date books made out of street signs. The company can also custom-make purses from old tags you have stored in the shed, some perhaps with sentimental value, others that may spark nostalgic memories of your first time behind the wheel. Vanity plates or vintage tags with designs and slogans long ago discontinued are very much in demand, said Littlearth owner Ava DeMarco.

After her father-in-law passed away 10 years ago, Kingston resident Jo-Ann Graziano hung onto the 1959 commercial tags from his car for sentimental reasons. When she spotted the license plate purse display at Essentials while shopping one afternoon, she finally figured out what to do with those tags. She had matching cyclone handbags made from the two old plates that read CAR 28 and gave the other one to her sister-in-law Anne Graziano for her birthday — a cherished gift with great sentimental value for both ladies.

Some people like them shiny and new so they can put their own dents in them, and others like license plates with a little

Love still having 'fun, fun, fun'

Beach Boys hit the South Shore Saturday

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

The music of The Beach Boys may be the classic rock and roll soundtrack for the American summer, but the group's appeal has long been worldwide.

"There is no way that our international fans can really understand all of our lyrics, but they still love our beat and rhythm," founding member Mike Love explained by telephone last week from Zurich, a stop on the European leg of the group's current concert tour. "And they certainly love rock and roll."

And they're not afraid to show it. "We just played a

Honky Tonk Tailgate in America's Hometown

Country quartet play Memorial Hall

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

Country music and tailgate parties — they go together like say, rock 'n' roll and Lollapalooza.

That's sort of what Jeff Carson and a few of his country singing cohorts had in mind just over two years ago when they launched the Honky Tonk Tailgate Party, a special concert-tour package showcasing multiple artists for the price of one, and decked out with its countrified title theme and atmosphere much as Lollapalooza complements modern rock 'n' roll.

Carson's original 2001 co-founders and touring mates were singers Rhett Akins and Daryle Singletary, who, like Carson, are full-fledged, hit-making country artists in their own right. After sitting out last year's Tailgate Party tour due to other concert commitments and circumstances, Carson is back with the travelling show once again for 2003. And this time, the Honky Tonk Tailgaters are now four, with country crooner Chad Brock joining originals Carson, Akins and Singletary.

The quartet rolls into Plymouth Thursday, Aug. 7 for the opening date of Memorial Hall's 2003 summer-fall concert series. The show starts at 7:30 p.m.

"The three of us who started this touring package had a few things in common at that point about two years ago," said Carson. "All of us had first appeared on the country scene and released our first albums around the same time in the mid 90s. And we'd all had our tops and valleys of success so far in the business. We thought that the concept of

Grilled pizza

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Although grilled pizza sounds like some Wolfgang Puck plaything, it turns out that grilling pizza is a lot easier than baking it and it turns out great appetizers or even main courses with a minimum of work. I was looking for a food processor recipe to avoid kneading and a solution for the toppings since the rapid cooking time makes it difficult to melt cheese.

I revisited a quick pizza dough recipe that I developed 10 years ago and found that it still worked well, although I reduced the sugar and added a tablespoon of olive oil. Using rapid-rise yeast and a food processor, I could make the dough in just 3 minutes and then let it rise in a warm oven for just 40 minutes. With almost no hands-on work and less than an hour of total time, I had pizza dough ready for shaping.

Many grilled pizza recipes suggest rolling out thin rounds of dough. I find this process difficult for all but the most experienced home bakers and therefore decided to make 4 small pizzas out of my dough recipe instead of 2 large ones. Not only were the rolling and shaping easier, but also getting the dough on and off the grill is much simpler with a smaller, thicker round. I stretched each ball of dough into a 9-inch circle, which is about 1/8 inch thick. (If the dough gets much thinner the resulting pizza is almost cracker-like. Thicker crust grills up to a doughy focaccia-like bread—not bad, but not exactly what I was looking for.) The dough is soft and pliable and I found it easier to stretch the dough than roll it. Instead of stretching the dough on a floured surface, I found that an oiled surface worked best, allowing the dough to stretch much farther.

In terms of grilling, there are three basic methods: Use a hot fire for both sides; use a hot fire for one side and then finish cooking the pizza using lower heat, either by moving it to a cooler part of the grill (or adjusting the gas) or by removing the pizzas until the fire cools down; or use a hot fire for both sides and finish the pizzas, with toppings, under a broiler. I finally settled on my basic method – high heat for both sides – since it is much simpler. Also, if you have to grill four pizzas, you need as much surface area as you can get, which precludes building a two-level fire. I finally decided to top the pizzas off the grill, which meant that the toppings had to be simple and not in need of cooking.

My favorite and also the simplest topping is a minced garlic/olive oil mixture plus salt and a few sprinkled fresh herbs. For more substantive toppings, I tried grilling onions, peppers, fennel, radicchio, and zucchini. I found the radicchio and fennel wedges to be too much for the pizza but other vegetables worked well. Onion slices, zucchini slices and pepper sections cooked quickly and were delicious. I found it easiest to grill the vegetables first and set them aside while the pizza cooks. They should all be brushed lightly with olive oil and sprinkled with salt. The onions should be cut crosswise (forming rings) into 1/4-inch slices, which can be held together with toothpicks for easy turning. The zucchini should be cut into 1/4-inch slices on the bias. The bell pepper should be halved and seeded. The top and bottom should be trimmed off and the remaining rectangular strip should be cut (parallel to the ribs) into 1-inch sections. The zucchini takes about 2 to 3 minutes per side to acquire grill marks and begin to soften. The onion and pepper take about 5 minutes.

As for a mixed greens topping I really liked a mesclun mix with a basic vinaigrette. To the greens I added a few tablespoons of coarsely chopped parsley, basil, chives or scallions, oregano, or mint and tossed the mixture with the dressing. I used about 1 1/2 cups of greens per pizza. A few slices of garden tomatoes would not be out of place either.

QUICK GRILLED PIZZA WITH SIMPLE TOPPINGS

A long pair of tongs makes it easy to move the pizzas around on the grill. I often serve grilled pizzas as appetizers before I grill the main course. I often grill pizzas one or two at a time so that they are hot from the grill when they are eaten. For other toppings, see the article above for instructions.

For the dough:

1 cup warm water (about 120 degrees)

1 package rapid-rise yeast

Pinch sugar

1 tablespoon olive oil

1 1/2 teaspoons kosher salt

3 cups all purpose flour

To finish the pizza:

1/2 cup best quality olive oil

1 tablespoon pressed or minced garlic from 2 large cloves

Salt to taste

1/4 cup coarsely chopped basil, parsley, chives, oregano,

or

2 tablespoons finely chopped thyme

or

1 tablespoon finely chopped rosemary

Freshly grated Parmesan cheese (optional)

1. Heat oven to 200 degrees and turn off after ten minutes. Put the water in the bowl of a food processor fitted with either the metal or plastic blade and sprinkle in the yeast and sugar. Pulse to dissolve yeast. Add the olive oil, salt and flour and process until the mixture forms a cohesive mass. The dough should not feel sticky (if so, add 2 tablespoons of flour and pulse briefly), nor should it be crumbly (add 1 tablespoon water and pulse). Let sit for 2 minutes. Process for another 30 seconds.

2. Remove dough from food processor and knead until smooth, about 1 minute. You shouldn't need to add much (if any) flour. Place in a very lightly oiled bowl and cover with plastic wrap. Place in oven and let rise until doubled in size, about 40 minutes. Deflate dough; divide into 4 equal pieces. Shape each piece into a ball and let rest for 10 minutes.

3. Lightly coat a work surface or an inverted baking sheet with oil. Working with one piece of dough at a time, spread and flatten into O.K. – you will simply end up with a thicker grilled pizza.) Do not make a lip. The shape of the dough is unimportant (round, oval, whatever) but you should try and maintain even thickness. Set aside on a cookie sheet or tray for easy transport to the grill. Repeat with three remaining dough balls. The flattened dough can overlap a bit as you set them aside — as their surface is oiled they will not stick to each other.

4. To finish the pizza: Meanwhile ignite grill. Combine olive oil and garlic in a measuring cup or small bowl and set aside. When fire is medium-hot (you can hold your hand five inches above fire for 3 to 4 seconds) place dough rounds on the grill and cook until dark brown grill lines appear, about 2 minutes. Lift them to check for even "brawniness"; you may need to rotate them for even cooking. Using tongs, flip over and cook until second side has dark grill lines, about 2 minutes longer. Remove from grill and brush with garlic olive oil mixture and sprinkle with salt, herbs and optional grated Parmesan to taste. Serve immediately.

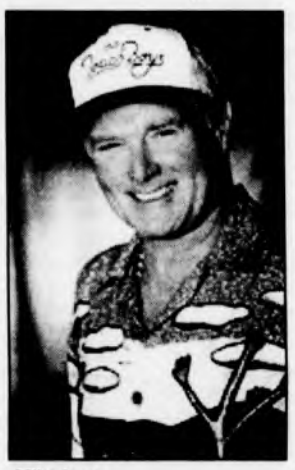
rock festival in Munich and the kids showed up in Beach Boys T-shirts just like they do at our shows in the US"

Mike Love hasn't had a summer off in 40 years. As lead singer of "The Beach Boys," Love performs some 150 concerts annually — heading up the seminal rock band he helped form in 1961 with cousins Brian, Dennis and Carl Wilson and also Al Jardine. Love is not only the voice of the group, but he also co-wrote — along with Brian Wilson — 11 of their top 10 singles including "Surfin'," "Fun, Fun, Fun," "I Get Around," "Help Me Rhonda," "California Girls," and "Good Vibrations."

The Beach Boys will bring their Southern California sound to the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset in two performances Saturday, Aug 2 at 5 and 9 p.m. and to the Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis on Sunday, Aug. 3 at 5 and 9 p.m. As the only original "Beach Boy" still touring under the group's moniker, Love has seen it all —from the physical and mental health issues that led to Brian Wilson's early retirement from touring, the 1983 accidental drowning of Dennis Wilson, and the 1998 death from lung cancer of Carl Wilson, to the many other lesser tumults and travails that have marked the band's legendary history. According to Love, lifestyle choices have helped him to stay the course and steer clear of most of the trouble.

"I never got involved with drugs. I meditate for about two hours every day, and I also do yoga," says Love. "Brian smoked pot, took acid and did just about everything else you can imagine. Brian's musical contributions to this group are huge. He is a genius, but people have always pandered to him and let him do whatever he wanted and that hasn't made his life easier. As for Dennis, he was stoned right through to the end of his life. At one point, years ago, we even traveled by two separate charter planes — one for smokers and one for nonsmokers. You don't even want to know what went on in the smoking plane."



Mike Love

Earlier this year, Brother Records, owner of the rights to The Beach Boys' name, filed suit against former Beach Boys singer-guitarist and original member Al Jardine for using the band's name when he tours.

"'The Beach Boys' is a name that is licensed to me," according to Love. "Al is well aware of that, but he hasn't wanted to conform to the standards of that deal. The whole matter is very unfortunate. It makes it tough to maintain any kind of personal relationship." Love also admits he rarely sees Brian Wilson. He believes, however, that there may be hope in the future for better relations between the surviving original members.

"I think it was Ian Fleming or maybe Sean Connery who taught us a long time ago to never say never. All doors remain open as far as I am concerned."

In the meantime, Love and longtime keyboardist Bruce Johnston, who replaced Brian Wilson on the road in 1964, will see to it that the seemingly eternal summer continues for The Beach Boys who hold the record as the rock band that has performed more concerts than any other. That is far from their only distinction. The Beach Boys have also sold more than 100 million records worldwide and have received 32 Gold and Platinum records. They were 1988 inductees into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and received a 2001 Lifetime Achievement Grammy Award.

The period between "Good Vibrations" (1966) and The Beach Boys' biggest selling hit "Kokomo" (1988) is one of the longest spans between number one records in history. Actor John Stamos ("General Hospital," "Full House") played percussion and sang back-up on the recording of "Kokomo" and has appeared in concert with The Beach Boys on and off since 1985. For the first time in eight years, Stamos will perform with the group at this weekend's shows as well as other stops on the tour. Love will be glad to have Stamos back, but it's not who is on-stage with him that has sustained the Los Angeles native all these years.

"The thing that makes all this worthwhile is the audience response — it is still euphoric even after all these years," says Love. "The Beach Boys have always evoked happiness and positivity, and as long as I'm around we always will."

Heavenly Hydrangeas provide long-lasting summer blooms

Green thumbs up

Part 2

By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

A beautiful tiger swallowtail butterfly floats gracefully through the garden on a steamy afternoon in late July. As it approaches a bed of multicolored daylilies, it smoothly descends, folding its large, delicate, yellow-and black-striped wings over its back as it nearly disappears into the large trumpets in search of the sweet reward within. Throughout the borders, numerous species of "fluttering flowers," as Robert Frost described these ethereal creatures, drift from flower to flower, attracted by bold displays of coneflowers, daylilies and phlox. July and August are butterfly heaven in the perennial border.

As the month of August approaches, even the most dedicated gardeners often lose interest in the everyday maintenance of beds and borders but due to our cool, damp spring and delayed bloom period, the gardens seem more inviting this year. Enthusiastic gardeners are scouring local nurseries for jumbo pots of colorful annuals and perennials to fill spaces in their borders as daffodil foliage finally disappears and oriental poppies enter midsummer dormancy.

As I wander through the garden looking for places to tuck in my newest acquisitions, I pause to examine the luxuriant leaves of my blue, mophead hydrangeas (Hydrangea macrophylla). Regrettably, another season will pass without the stunning blue flowers so many of us yearn for during the height of summer. Perhaps the most asked question at our local nurseries is how to promote bloom from these reluctant deciduous shrubs. I often recommend that the best solution is to move to the Cape where they seem to thrive every summer. As much as gardeners love the massive, colorful blooms of the pink and blue hydrangeas, these showy shrubs can be temperamental and produce scant bloom unless just the proper blend of conditions is provided.

The bigleaf hydrangeas (H. macrophylla) include two groups of shrubs recognized by their distinctive blooms. The hortensias or mophead types produce large, globular, flowerheads primarily composed of showy, sterile ray florets in pink, red, blue or purple. The lacecaps bear flat, feathery blooms, which tend to be more delicate in appearance, the flowerhead comprised of many tiny fertile flowers interspersed with a few ray florets.

Hydrangea macrophylla prefers a rich, well-drained, moisture-retentive soil. Although these hydrangeas are tolerant of full sun, they seem to perform their best when grown in areas protected from the hot midday and afternoon sun. County Extension Agent, Deborah Swanson, recommends planting these popular shrubs in locations that receive morning sun and dappled shade the remainder of the day or in environments that offer high shade throughout the day beneath tall deciduous trees. Supplemental moisture should be provided during the latter half of the growing season, especially during periods of drought.

Flower color in the bigleaf hydrangeas will vary depending on the pH of the soil in which they are grown, a plant litmus paper of sorts. In our typically acidic, New England soils, the flowers tend to be blue but as the pH of the soil becomes more alkaline, flowers acquire a mauve tinge and in sweet soils become pink. The variation in pH affects the plant's ability to absorb aluminum, which is responsible for the blue coloration. The addition of aluminum sulfate to the soil will promote the stunning blue color; lime worked in around the base of the shrubs will give rise to pink flowers.

Pink and blue hydrangeas bloom on 'old wood', meaning that their flower buds are set on the previous year's stems, usually near the tips of the branches. In cold winters or exposed locations, these buds may be subject to winterkill and while the shrub may produce fantastic new foliage from the base, few flowers may appear. Do not prune the bare woody stems in spring until the plant has fully leafed out or you may eliminate the flower buds. Pruning to reduce the size or improve the shape of the plant is best done while the plants are in bloom or as they finish flowering. Winter protection may be warranted in cold pockets or exposed areas; place a burlap barrier around the shrubs to block desiccating winds. If your shrubs have never bloomed, you may want to transplant them while they are dormant in early spring to a protected northern or eastern exposure. Southern or western exposures may cause premature opening of the leaf buds and subsequent frosts may damage future flowers. Avoid high nitrogen fertilizers as these often promote lush foliage and fewer flowers. For reluctant bloomers, an application of superphosphate worked into the surrounding soil during the spring or summer months may help to generate better flower production next season.

The showy florist's hydrangeas available at Easter and Mother's Day are cultivars of H. macrophylla but many of these tend to be varieties that are tender in our area. If planted outdoors, they may produce foliage year after year but never bloom due to the yearly winterkill of the flower buds. Select container-grown or balled and burlaped nursery stock for best success. The cultivar 'Nikko Blue' is perhaps the most widely available, hardy blue-flowering mophead hydrangea and 'All Summer Beauty' has received positive reviews as a sky-blue tinted variety. Hydrangea 'Glowing Embers' produces stunning reddish-pink flowers. Hydrangea 'Endless Summer' is being promoted as the hot new cultivar to seek out as it is reported to bloom on both old and new wood and although limited this season, should be more readily available next spring.

Honky Tonk Tailgate

a joint-effort tour would work for us as artists and where we were at in our careers."

"Economically and production-wise, it certainly made a lot of sense. The four of us would be performing and touring with the same backing band as well as splitting the cost. And each one would play about a 30-minute individual set and join onstage for a big finale jam at the end. We believe this sort of format really keeps the music flowing and gives the country music fans their money's worth altogether," Carson said.

Carson was voted Billboard Magazine's "Top New Country Artist" after releasing his debut album on Curb Records in 1995. The Arkansas-raised singer has followed that initial success with a string of top-selling country albums yielding two #1 singles - "Not On Your Love" and "The Car" - and two more in the Top Five - "Holding Onto Something" and "Real Life." The singer is best-known for a crooning, heart-rending ballad style typified by the aforementioned hits and numerous other tracks. 2003 is something of a comeback year for Carson also. The singer's absence from last year's Tailgate Party Tour was a result of his then current single, "Real Life," doing well on the charts and putting him in demand for solo concert dates. But also, Carson spent part of 2002 hospitalized with a severed neck, resulting from crushed vertebrae behind his left shoulder sustained in a tree-collision while sledding with his family on vacation. The injury sidelined the singer for four months. Carson's latest record release is the ballad single, "I Can Only Imagine," his first issuing under the newly merged Curb/Asylum label.

Other Tailgaters Akins and Singletary hail from Georgia and Brock from Florida and all have distinct individual styles from roadhouse country-rockers to downhome ballads.

"The four of us have found that we mutually benefit together on this package tour," Carson said. "Each of us has gained fans from the others who fans come out to see and we end up with four times the audiences that we normally have."

Recycled pocket books give fashion minded a license to thrill mileage on them, noted Happel, who first started carrying the bags at Essentials last summer. But problems getting the plates from the Massachusetts DMV slowed shipments for a few months. Fortunately, the problem seems to have been cleared up, but Happel said there are some plate requests that they still have trouble filling.

"We can't get the Cape and Islands plates," she said. The Maine Vacation land plate with the lobster is another tag in demand, which Happel has trouble delivering.

The company deals with state registries of motor vehicles, license plate dealers, auto dealers and junk yards and gets what it can get when it comes to tags, explained DeMarco. "We can't guarantee certain plates."

"Some states are harder to get than others," she said. "West Virginia is very hard to get. It really depends what the state does with old plates."

Essentials store manager Patricia Happel has a Massachusetts license plate handbag which coincidentally has her initials.

Littearth takes special requests, but when after three months of waiting to get a discontinued "You've got a friend in Pennsylvania" license plate in, DeMarco said the company informed the customer they were out of luck.

But disappointments like those haven't slowed growth for the company celebrating its 10th anniversary this year. Last year alone, Littlearth's Web site boasts having actively recycled "more than 30 tons of rubber, 40,000 license plates and a quarter million bottle caps."

The environmentally conscious company with plans to design creative, unique products using all recycled materials was founded by DeMarco and Rob Brandegee in 1993. The two started out in DeMarco's basement but as the business took off and their suburban yard took on the look of a junk yard piled high with truck inner tubes, it became clear they'd need a little more room for Littleearth — leading them to set up shop in Pittsburgh's Hill District. Over the last decade, DeMarco said many new product lines have been started and others have had a tune up or two.

"When we first decided to make license plates into hand bags, we folded them and rolled them and then used empty tuna cans for the sides," DeMarco recalled. "They looked a little crude and smelled a little fishy, but people liked them any way." The baby moon hubcaps that replaced the tuna cans, and which Happel pointed out serve as perfect mirrors for touching up your lipstick, were a big product improvement. And others are in the works, DeMarco said. Following last fall's release of the square model bag, a new high-end line of license plate purses dressed up for evening wear will feature Swarovski crystals along the plate's numbers and letters.

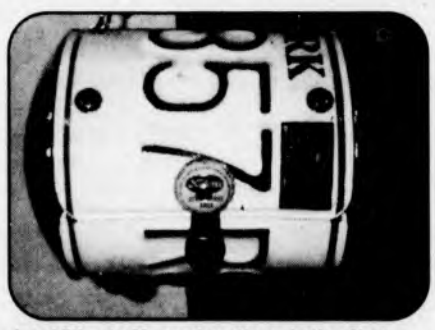
Featured on Oprah! and CNN Littlearth's products have been worn by a host of celebrities including Brook Shields, Jay Leno and Chelsea Clinton.

Essentials, which also carries license plate photo albums, is just one of more than 1,000 retailers who sell Littlearth product lines all over the country. The bags retail in the range of $60 to about $80 depending on the size and style. There is an additional $20 charge for custom plates and customers must sign a waiver stating the company is not responsible for any damage to the plates in their conversion to a pocketbook, said Happel, who estimates she sells at least two bags per week. Several of her employees have their own bags and sales associate Mary Ruddick has her eye on the Euro Cyclone — the perfect size for her, she declares.

And what could be a more perfect style handbag for Jennifer Sukanek, who works as a receptionist at Sullivan Brothers car dealership in Kingston? Sukanek said a customer came in carrying one of the license plate purses and the very next day she had bought one of her own.

"I bring it everywhere and always to work," she said. "It's a conversation piece."

For more information on the license plate handbags or any of Littlearth's products go to the Web site at littlearth.com or call or stop by Essentials at the Merchant Row Mall in Hanover at (781) 871-7727.



In addition to Massachusetts and other New England states, Essentials carries and sells many New York license plate handbags with the familiar Statue of Liberty.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

WEDNESDAY, JULY 30

The Leo moon aligns with Jupiter, generating an upbeat mood this morning. Projects should come together easily. Mercury moves into Virgo at 10:06 a.m., remaining there until October 6. Mercury will travel in retrograde motion when it reaches 26-degrees of Virgo on August 28. It is best to initiate new activities between 10:06-11:46 a.m., when the Leo moon becomes inactive. At 10:27 p.m. a Virgo moon takes over.

THURSDAY, JULY 31

Gear up for a hectic day. Expect the unexpected. Avoid making rigid plans or placing yourself in high stress situations. Don't act on impulse or make important decisions. The moon travels in Virgo, and forms a challenging 180-degree alignment to Mars at 4:13 p.m. In addition, Mercury, the planetary ruler of Virgo, opposes Uranus. A good way to let off steam is to spend extra time working out with exercise routines. Eat light foods and avoid stimulants.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 1, 2003

The first half of August is prime for vacationing. Planetary action turns around completely during the last week, when a barrage of planetary activity arrives.

Today the Virgo moon becomes inactive at 5:01 a.m. After that no major planetary activity occurs. If you have work projects to accomplish, finish old business, clean up and get rid of the clutter.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 2

A Libra moon and an applying sun-Neptune opposition set the stage for a fun, social weekend. At 2:48 a.m. the moon enters Libra. There is one rough spot, however, in effect between 1:50-4:50 p.m., when the moon aligns with Saturn. This may bring a down period; there may be delays or obstacles. Keep it light; go with the flow. The remainder of the day rates high for social and romantic activities.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 3

Yesterday's planetary patterns are in effect today as well. The Libra moon forms flowing 60-degree contacts to Pluto in the morning and Jupiter at 9:33 p.m., when it becomes inactive. The sun prepares to oppose Neptune, generating an easygoing, upbeat mood. This is a wonderful day to relax, enjoy favorite pastimes and friends.

MONDAY, AUGUST 4

The moon enters serious Scorpio at 6:12 a.m., remaining there today and tomorrow. However, it may take a while for the morning fog to burn off. A sun-Neptune opposition culminates at 10:01 a.m. Others may be sleepy, forgetful, distracted. You can make up for lost time this afternoon and evening, because influences turn around completely. A harmonious alignment of Mercury and Saturn prompts you to take on a big work project and stick to it. You can be most productive. Tackle jobs that need problem-solving, mental precision.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 5

The first quarter phase of the moon occurs 3:28 a.m., signaling the buildup to a full moon that culminates next Tuesday, August 12. The moon continues to travel in Scorpio today, prompting you to keep your nose to the grindstone. Get major work projects out of the way. An applying polarity of Mercury and Mars warns against getting caught up in negative feelings, behaviors. Others may be moody, difficult to please. Take quiet time out for yourself; maintain a peaceful, mellow demeanor.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 6

Gear up for a challenging, fast-paced day. The Scorpio moon aligns with Jupiter at 1:22 a.m. and becomes inactive. At 9:11 a.m. the moon enters fiery Sagittarius, and the Mercury-Mars polarity culminates at 9:13 a.m. However, the Sagittarius moon will interact with Mercury and Mars, extending its influence throughout the day and evening. Take it slow and easy. Sidestep arguments, conflicts with others. Don't take chances or do anything risky. If you are working, it is better to handle a variety of jobs rather than one that demands focus and concentration.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 7

A polarity of Venus and Neptune takes center stage. Its influence enhances creativity and artistic sensitivity. On the other hand, it is not favorable for making important decisions, purchases or long-term commitments. Keep it light and avoid touchy subjects between 12:353:35 p.m., when the moon and Pluto conjoin. The remainder of the afternoon and evening rates high for enjoying favorite pastimes and friends.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 8

It may be difficult to get motivated to work this morning. The Sagittarius moon aligns with Jupiter at 5:01 a.m. and becomes inactive. Influences turn around completely at 12:02 p.m., when the moon enters ambitious Capricorn. Roll up your sleeves and plan to get a lot accomplished. Zero in on jobs that you have been putting off. You can get them out of the way now. A lunar opposition to Saturn sets the stage for a quiet evening. Repay debts, follow through on promises you have made to others.

LISTEN To Life

INTO THE DIGITAL AGE

Analog hearing instruments amplify sound signals picked up by a microphone and convert them into small electrical signals, which are transmitted into the ear in real time. They can be altered according to the needs of the individual user within the limits of analog technology. Newer digital technology, on the other hand, is quite a bit more advanced. Digital hearing instruments transform the sound, convert it into bits, and manipulate it before amplifying the sound. This type of technology is similar to that used in a CD player. A digital hearing instrument can be programmed, meaning that it can be indivdually adjusted to suit the specific user by means of a small computer.

Today, there is a continuing trend toward digitally programmed hearing instruments. The result is smaller, more powerful devices, with better wearing comfort, sound quality, ease of operation, and long-term dependability. Come hear what all the excitement is about at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER. We carry multiple lines of hearing instruments so that each individual can be fitted appropriately and accurately. Call 781-337-1144 to set up an appointment at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. We offer FREE batteries for the life of any hearing instrument purchased and FREE repairs of any make of hearing aid.

P.S. A digital hearing instrument outfitted with directional microphones will be particulary helpful in noisy surroundings.

OBITUARIES

Mary Kraft

Mary Kraft of Ridgway, Colo., 41, a registered nurse, died July 26, 2003.

Born in Boston, Mrs. Kraft grew up in Cohasset, a place she held dear to her heart. After graduating from Cohasset High School, she earned a bachelor of science in veterinary technology from Mt. Ida College and later a bachelor of science in nursing from Mesa State University in Grand Junction, Colo.

She worked as a registered nurse with Montrose County Health and Human Services and was devoted to helping others. Her love for people transcended all aspects of her life. Her main passion was healthy parenting and helping the families she worked with by educating them about parenting and children's needs.

Her other interests included outdoor recreation such as camping, hiking, mountain biking and skiing.

Mrs. Kraft will be remembered for her ability to bring others together in friendship and celebration.

She leaves her husband Dean and their two sons, Colin and Tyler; her mother, Virginia (Gavin) Walsh; three sisters, Patricia, Karen and Cathy; two brothers, Peter and Richard; and five nieces.

A memorial celebration will be held Aug. 3 in Ridgway.

Arrangements were by the Crippin Funeral Home/Crematory in Montrose, Colo.

Loraine Stevens

A memorial service for Loraine Stevens was held at the Vedanta Center, 130 Beechwood St. on July 18. Ms. Stevens died May 31, 2003 at Boston Medical Center due to complications following surgery. She was 89.

A native of Washington, D.C., she had been a puppeteer in Chicago. During World War II, she served as a WAC (Women's Army Corps) of the U.S. Army. In New York, she was involved in civil defense for the army. She was a five-year resident of the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home.

After the war, she served as a secretary to a number of notable personalities, including authors Paul Brunton and John Steinbeck as well as actress Gloria Swanson.

A longtime member of the Vedanta Center in Massachusetts and Ananda Ashrama in La Cresenta, Calif., she served Rev. Mother Gayatri Devi who passed away in 1995. Ms. Stevens often traveled to India.

An avid animal lover, she raised many cats and dogs. She also loved to sing and had a beautiful singing voice.

She leaves her nieces, Carol-Leigh Duce and Nancy DiMaio; her nephew, Haskell Frei; and many grand and great-grand-nieces/nephews. She also leaves her best friend, Ella May Damiani.

Funeral arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Cohasset.

Catherine M. Turner

Catherine M. (Cheever) Turner, 83, of Cohasset, died July 2, 2003, at South Shore Hospital after a long illness.

Born in Boston, she was the daughter of the late John and Mary (Buckley) Cheever. She attended Dorchester High School and Boston Business School.

Mrs. Turner was employed for more than 30 years as an office manager at Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant in Cohasset. Prior to Hugo's, she worked at Harvard University. She retired in 1983.

After retirement Mrs. Turner and her husband enjoyed traveling to Europe, Hawaii, Africa, and Jamaica.

Wife of the late Arthur L. Turner for 46 years, she leaves two daughters, Cathy and her husband, James, Pryles of Hanover and Elizabeth and her husband, Stephen, Venti of Hanover; two grandsons Michael David and Kevin James Pryles of Hanover.

A funeral Mass was held at St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset. Interment was private.

The arrangements were handled by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Donations may be made to Etrusco Associates Inc., 1 Common St., Scituate or Animal Rescue League of Boston, 599 Washington St. Pembroke, 02359.

Town wants train ruling

Asks Romney for a decision

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset selectmen are urging Gov. Mitt Romney to make a final decision sooner rather than later on whether the Greenbush Line will become a reality.

In an Aug. 5 letter to the governor, Town Manager Mark Haddad stated the "Board of Selectmen is very concerned with the delay in the decision to either move forward or abandon the project" and asked him to make a final decision as soon as possible.

Plans unveiled for a 105-unit, 55-plus project

Slated for 41 acres off Beechwood St.

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Plans are moving forward for an upscale "55-plus" condominium project on the former 41-acre Hayes estate off Beechwood Street on the east side of Rte. 3A.

If the 105-unit developement, dubbed "Cedarmere," passes muster with town boards, it would be the first built under Cohasset's Senior Overlay District, established at Town Meeting last fall, which allows higher density development than the residential district permits to encourage more local housing for senior citizens.

"It's designed to look as if it's always been there."
— Kelli Calhoun, King Taylor Cohasset LLC

"It's designed to look as if it's always been there," Kelli Calhoun said about the shingle-style architecture and the fact the buildings would blend with the topography of the site. Kelli and David Calhoun of Sheldon Road and Tom Ragno of Lexington are principals with King Taylor Cohasset LLC, the developer, which bought the property for $3.85 million in June.

The Planning Board held a public hearing on Cedarmere last night after the Mariner went to press.

Fourteen market-rate units would be included in a new grand manor house near the center of the site that would also include an underground parking garage. Plans also include 23 single-family residences and 18 two-family residences in clusters around courtyards to preserve open space. A barn on site would also be renovated into a single-family residence. All market-rate units would be 2,400 square feet and have two bedrooms. They would start at $650,000, the developers say.

Twenty-nine affordable, one- and two-bedroom units are planned for a building to be constructed near Rte. 3A with parking for 50 cars. A cabin at the western end of the site would be renovated into two additional affordable units. The 31affordable units put the development over the minimum 26 (or 25 percent), required under the Senior Overlay District.

It is not clear if the affordable units would be sold as condominiums or rented as apartments. But their purchase price or rent would conform to state guidelines in order to be afford-

Klimko pleads guilty, keeps job

Works as school business manager

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Sitting on the hard, wooden benches of the Hingham District Court, Ivan Klimko took a few deep breaths as his long-awaited trial finally came to a close Tuesday, bringing some good news for the 56-year-old Cohasset School Department business manager. He won't have to serve jail time for assault and battery of his wife during a domestic dispute, and he will keep his job.

"He's done a quality job for us. We're going to keep the two matters separate."
— Edward Malvey, Superintendent of Schools

"He's been a valuable employee here," said Supt. Edward Malvey, who was present at the trial. "He's done a quality job for us. We're going to keep the two matters separate."

School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn shares Malvey's view and said any professional dealings he has had with Klimko have been very impressive.

"Anything professional he's done for us has been very well done," he said. "He's a valuable employee and I don't really have a comment on the personal side."

ALAN CHAPMAN PHOTO

Ivan Klimko, left, is advised by attorney Jeffrey C. LaPointe on Tuesday at Hingham District Court.

Klimko was originally charged with attempted murder last November because his wife told police that during the altercation he said he was going to kill her. At that time, he was suspended from his job, and was reinstated when that charge was dropped due to insufficient evidence last December.

Klimko stood before the microphone at the front of the courtroom Tuesday and was addressed by Judge Ronald Moynahan.

"Did you do what the Commonwealth says?" he asked.

"Yes," replied Klimko.

Flanked on both sides by her Russian interpreter and School Committee member Pat Martin, Klimko's wife looked on as her attorney, Russ Eonas, presented Moynahan with photos from injuries she sustained on the night of the incident. Martin, who works at Wellspring in Hull and is a domestic violence intervention specialist, accompanied Klimko's wife to the trial in a show of support. Martin said she has been legally recused from all School Committee discussion involving Klimko since November, so as not to create a conflict of interest.

Klimko sat silently as his wife made her victim's impact statement, expressing how much that night has affected her life.

"I have lost faith in people. It's very difficult to live," she said. "This event has affected me physically and emotionally."

She said that by his actions,

Keep well clinics

The Cohasset Board of Health monthly keep well clinics for August with Judy Fitzsimmons, R.N., P.H.N. and Jan Bennett, R.N. are Thursday Aug. 14 at 11 a.m. during the Senior Center luncheon and Thursday Aug. 28 from 1–3 p.m. Harborview senior housing off Elm Street (behind the police department).

Save the date for the Cohasset Health Fair on Tuesday, Sept. 9 from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. at Second Congregational Church (next to Cohasset Town Hall).

Keep well clinics are for all town residents regardless of age!

Nichols Road beach gate closed for good

Beach-goers no doubt have noticed the gate at the Nichols Road end of the Sandy Beach parking lot is closed permanently. Town Manager Mark Haddad ordered it closed in late July to enhance safety and keep out non-residents.

Sandy Beach Association president Robin Lawrence also told selectmen the association would like the gate closed to keep out-of-towners from using the popular location. On busy days in the summer, up to 20 percent of the cars there don't have resident stickers, he said.

While the beach is owned by the Sandy Beach Association, the town owns and maintains the parking lot.

Haddad said there is a greater police presence in the parking lot; on a recent sunny, weekend police issued 71 parking tickets, most of which were for Sandy Beach, he said. Parking tickets carry a $25 fine.

A part-time town employee is also monitoring stickers on the weekends.

"While this is a short-term solution for the summer, it should address concerns raised by residents," Haddad said.

Selectman Michael Sullivan's suggestion of constructing a safer, new entrance-exit, at about the midway point along the parking lot on Atlantic Avenue, will go forward in the fall, said Haddad, who gave a "ballpark" estimate of $5,000 for the work, which would be performed by the Department of Public Works. The strip of sand between the parking lot and Atlantic Avenue would have to be scooped up and put back on the beach, Haddad said. A new gate may also be needed, and the parking lot could be relined. The new central gate would serve as single access-egress point for the parking lot.

Bradley office hours

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D-Hingham, will hold district office hours Monday Aug. 11, in Cohasset. He will be available at the Cohasset Town Hall from 5:30 - 6:30 p.m. If you are unable to attend this scheduled office hours, but would like to meet with Bradley, call (617) 722-2120 to schedule an appointment.

Jet Pollution Council meets again Aug. 12

The next South Shore Jet Pollution Council General Meeting will be on Tuesday, Aug. 12 from 7-9 p.m. at the Hingham Library on Leavitt Street to formulate strategies to address current and future air-traffic problems. Volunteer opportunities for small and large projects are available.

Money needed for harbor seawall work

The town hopes the state will ante up with substantial funds to help repair the dilapidated, 311 linear feet of seawall between Atlantica and the Mill River Marine Railway along Border Street.

Consultants Vine Associates of Hingham estimate it will cost $522,500 to completely remove and replace the existing stonewall, pedestrian railing and walkway. The estimate includes design and construction.

A second, and less preferred alternative, would be to just fill the cracks and redo the sidewalk at an estimated cost of $187,500, Town Manager Mark Haddad said.

Haddad has sent a letter to state Secretary of Environmental Affairs Ellen Roy Herzfelder seeking her assistance in obtaining funds for the seawall repair. In the letter, he stated the existing sidewalk and seawall are "in terrible condition and need immediate repair.

"This is a heavily traveled vehicular and pedestrian area in Cohasset and the town needs to address the problem immediately," he said.

Haddad researched 1994 legislation that included $10 million for financial assistance on a 50-50 basis, with the town and state each paying half, to coastal communities for shoreline protection. He thinks there may still be money available. "The town is extremely interested in this potential funding source," he wrote to Roy Herzfelder.

Haddad has also asked state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, to contact US Rep. William Delahunt to see if there is any federal grant money available for the project.

The seawall near Lawrence Wharf at the harbor could use some touching up but is in far better shape, Haddad said.

Train crossing designs on hold

The MBTA will not submit any further Greenbush railroad grade crossing design plans to Cohasset until the Army Corps of Engineers holds its meeting on grade crossing treatments expected sometime this month.

Cohasset, along with Hingham, Scituate and Weymouth, started the informal dispute resolution process with the MBTA last month, as laid out in the towns' mitigation agreements, because they said the MBTA continued to submit grade crossing design plans showing standard grade crossing treatments, when the towns have asked for four-quadrant gates. The informal dispute process involves both sides talking about areas of disagreement.

Town Manager Mark Haddad, who received the July 31 MBTA letter with the news, said he was pleased the informal dispute resolution process worked. He explained the type of grade crossing used will ultimately be up to the MBTA. However, the Army Corps will issue a recommendation to the MBTA on the type of gate, he said.

The towns prefer four-quadrant gates which do not require construction of median strips. Because Greenbush is a whistle-free corridor (meaning train whistles would only be sounded in emergencies), if standard grade crossing treatment is used, median strips are needed to keep impatient motorists from skirting around a closed gate to beat an oncoming train. Four-quadrant use four arms, not two, at crossings, therefore stopping traffic on both sides of the road.

Cohasset's mitigation agreement specifies the MBTA's consideration of four-quadrant gates does not apply to the North Main Street grade crossing, so the MBTA will submit designs for that crossing this month. Haddad explained the North Main Street crossing, which is between Woodside Cemetery and the Cohasset Golf Club, is at a 45-degree angle and would not be suitable for four-quad gates. There are also no residential abutters who would object to the median barriers at that location, he said.

Outsider to review the way Cohasset government is run

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"We can always look at ways to improve the way we deliver services and an outside set of eyes is probably the best way to do this."
— Town Manager Mark Haddad

Can Cohasset be run better? Selectmen plan to find out and have commissioned a review of the "Town Manager Form of Administration," which the town adopted six years ago.

Selectmen are quick to point out this study to be conducted by MMA Consulting Group, Inc. of Boston is not intended to be a performance review of Town Manager Mark Haddad, but a look at the governmental system itself to see if more efficiencies can be realized.

Haddad stressed the review is looking at the town manager form of government.

"It is not looking to see if the town manager is doing his job – that's up for the selectmen to decide," he said.

In fact Haddad urged the board not to wait until this fall's Special Town Meeting to appropriate the money for the survey, which is expected to take three to four months, so any proposals could be put on the warrant in time for the spring's Annual Town Meeting.

"I think a review of the structure of government is always a good thing," Haddad said. "Cohasset doesn't have the corner on government.

"We can always look at ways to improve the way we deliver services and an outside set of eyes is probably the best way to do this," he said.

The impetus for the review came out of the town-wide forum on the "way we do business" held last spring, Haddad said.

Selectmen opted to pay the $16,100 for the report through available funds in their budget.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said it was important to create the most cost-effective environment possible.

According to MMA Consulting Group the review will include:

- Duties of the town manager in relation to town departments and elected and appointed boards;
- Policy and administrative relationship between selectmen and the town manager;
- Internal administrative structure and coordination of town government;
- Relationship between elected and appointed offices, and the town manager's relationship with elected offices;
- Evaluate internal management and communication and evaluate administrative systems.

To accomplish these goals, MMA Consulting will conduct interviews with the town manager, department heads, as well as the police and fire chiefs, DPW and water department superintendents; and meet with and interview major boards. It will also review reports and internal procedures, including budgeting, procurement and human resources.

MMA will repair a report which will include an overview of the current situation, findings, recommendations and an implementation plan.

MMA Consulting Group has provided consulting services to local governments across the United States for the past 16 years, company officials said.

A handle on budget deficit

Haddad says town can absorb aid cuts

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Fiscal year 2004 is turning out to be a big headache for cities and towns across Massachusetts. Thanks to and estimated $3 billion state budget deficit and a legislature with a penchant for overriding the governor's vetoes – what will happen to local aid as the year progresses is anybody's guess.

Local aid is money the state sends back to municipalities for everything from road repair to school assistance.

Although many towns, like Cohasset, braced for a 15 percent cut in aid over last year's levels – they weren't prepared for a decrease in the 20 percent range. This year Cohasset's local aid receipts are estimated to drop about $439,250 to $2.39 million.

At this juncture, however, Cohasset is faring better than most, thanks for a $350,000 override in the spring.

So despite a new wrinkle in the way the state Department of Revenue charging towns for charter school tuition, the town should be able to cope without layoffs, Town Manager Mark Haddad said.

The state is deducting $132,000 in charter school tuition up front from the town's local aid "cherry sheet." In previous years, the money was deducted from the town's fourth quarter local aid payment – so in essence, the town is being charged twice within just a few months.

Haddad said the town can make up the charter school tuition gap by raising estimated receipts that include revenue from building permits and motor vehicle excise taxes. "It won't impact the operating budget," he said. Also, it appears fewer students will be attending the South Shore Charter School than the state estimated, so there could be an adjustment from the state Department of Revenue in the fall.

Haddad said the $106,000 snow and ice removal deficit from last winter will likely be covered through a transfer from the stabilization fund, which is similar to a savings account. The state allows towns to deficit spend their snow removal accounts, because they want the streets clear for safety reasons, he explained.

That still leaves about a $99,000 deficit due to the 20 percent cut in local aid. (rather than 15 percent, the town planned for). Haddad said he would present a plan to cover that figure when he gets the final numbers for new growth that includes new construction and other increases in the property tax base.

Walgreen's shoots Common commercials

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Autumn leaves and pumpkins adorned the Common while skeletons walked freely in the "Town of Perfect," last Wednesday and Thursday. No, Halloween did not come early this year and Cohasset has not changed its name, but the town once again had a brush with fame. This time Cohasset provided the location for a series of new television commercials for Walgreens.

Commercials for both the Halloween and Christmas seasons were shot, with views of the First Parish Meeting House, Second Congregational Church, and Town Hall in the background.

Town Hall auditorium was also transformed for the occasion, with a fireplace mantle erected for the Christmas spot.

Friendly snowmen and marching soldiers were included in the Christmas scenes, which sparked the need for artificial snow. The Common was blanketed in the fluffy, white stuff, which was actually white cotton blankets and a special non-toxic foam which does not harm vegetation.

"I love it when people want to come use the Common," said Town Manager Mark Haddad, noting that this is not the first time the town has been featured in a production. In his six years as town manager, Haddad has approved two movie scenes and five commercials, two of which were also for Walgreens.

Jeff MacLean, Walgreen's location manager for commercials, said working with the town on this project and others has been a wonderful experience. He also said Haddad has been a great help in coordinating the projects and he believes that with this recent shoot, his crew "got some great looking stuff."

While filming was taking place, five police officers were on duty to help direct traffic, which was shut down on Highland Avenue and Jason and Long roads. The Farmers Market was also asked to relocate to another part of the Common on Thursday. North Main Street was open for traffic as usual.

"One day of inconvenience on a stretch of road a tenth of a mile long is worth it to be able to showcase the Common," Haddad said, adding that he sees the Common as one of Cohasset's prized possessions and any time the opportunity arises, it should be shown off.

From start to finish, Haddad said the experience was a good one. With the amazing transformation that happened, he said it's hard to believe everything is back to normal again so soon.

"If you were to drive by right now, you'd never know they shot a commercial," he said.

Walgreens gave the town $2500 that will be put into the Common Gift Fund. Police details were paid by Walgreens, which also covered the cost of the clean-up.

Bassing Beach fails the test

No swimming due to bacteria count

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

In what may seek like a case of déjà vu, Bassing Beach is closed to swimming until further notice due to high bacteria counts.

At almost the same time last year, health officials closed the popular swimming spot due to a consistently high presence of enterococci, a group of bacteria that shows the presence of fecal matter.

Bassing Beach, which was closed to swimming last Thursday, is the only beach in town to fail the test. The five-week average at Bassing Beach was 47.15 parts per 100 milliliters. According to Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik beaches can be closed to swimming in two ways. If tests reveal a one-time "spike" of more than 104 colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters of water is one way. Also if tests over a five-week period reveal a "mean" that is higher than 34 colonies of enteroccocci per 100 milliliters of water.

"Bassing Beach was not closed due to one particular high count," Godzik explained.

Health effects related to swimming in polluted waters could include ear infections, conjunctivitis and rashes. The most common ailment is gastrointestinal disorders, stemming from swimmers swallowing polluted water.

Godzik said the high bacteria counts could come from a number of sources including storm water that could carry animal waste into the harbor. The sewer treatment plant also discharges into the harbor, but Godzik said the chances of that being a contributor are low because the wastewater is treated.

The only other location to register higher than allowed enterococci levels is the yacht club.

"The general idea is to avoid the harbor for swimming," Godzik said.

Testing will continue, but it is unlikely that a low count at Bassing Beach would bring the "mean" down below 35, which would allow the beach to reopen. Godzik said the beach may be closed for the rest of the summer.

The Cohasset Sailing Club and harbormaster are both flying yellow flags to warn boaters about the swimming ban. The sailing club has also posted a no-swimming sign.

Testing for enterococci started three years ago after tests determined the bacteria group was a better indicator of health risks than fecal coliform.

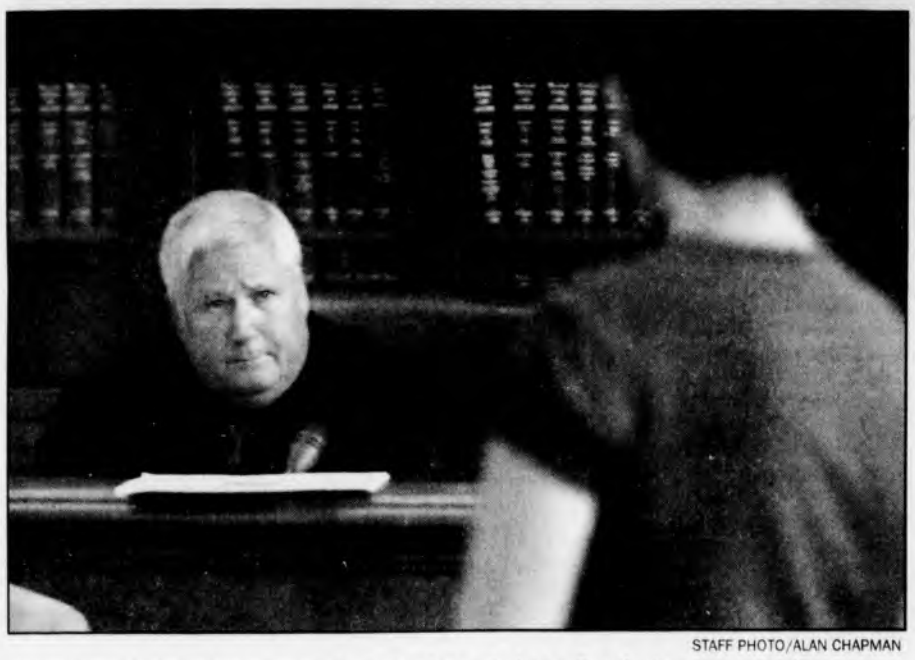
School business manager pleads guilty, keeps job



STAFF PHOTO/ALAN CHAPMAN

Klimko made her feel guilty about the incident, and that she is experiencing financial hardship by having to pay for a divorce lawyer.

But when asked what she would like to see happen as a result of the trial, she said she wanted to see Klimko serve time in jail, as well as receive mental counseling.

"You want to see him go to jail?" asked Moynahan.

"Yes," she said.

Klimko then sat only one bench away from his wife as defense attorney Jeffrey C. LaPointe spoke on his behalf.

"Up until now, [Klimko] had never been arrested in any state. On this particular evening, an unfortunate incident took place," he said.

According to police reports, Klimko was arrested without incident last Nov. 4 after having an altercation with his wife in their condominium in Hull. They had only been married for five months when the altercation took place. Klimko's wife said he strangled her and pushed her head to the floor, telling her he was going to kill her. After escaping once, she said Klimko caught her and tried to strangle her again. She escaped again and ran, wearing only her bathrobe and slippers, out to the road for help, where four teenage boys picked her up and drove her to the Hull Police Department.

La Pointe said Klimko told him he had grabbed his wife then realized what he was doing and let go. He said the incident only lasted a moment and was an isolated case, and that he did not chase her in any way.

Sitting in the last row of the court room was Klimko's sister, whom LaPointe made reference to and said she was there to show support for her brother. She had told LaPointe that everything being said about Klimko seemed out of character from the brother she knows.

LaPointe went on to say, that in his years of legal experience, he has become very familiar with domestic violence cases and said, "The fact is, she didn't receive medical treatment."

Police reports confirm that while his wife showed signs of an altercation, including fresh scratches and red marks on her neck and throat, when the fire department was called to make an assessment, it was determined that she did not need to go to the hospital. His wife took out a restraining order days later.

LaPointe said there have been no problems since the restraining order was put into place. Moynahan asked if Klimko's wife had been contacted at any point by Klimko to which she said he had called her a couple of times and contacted some of her friends during the holidays, but nothing of a threatening nature.

Moynahan said he was "surprised" to hear Klimko's wife say in her victim impact statement that the incident has caused a financial hardship. Per order of the probate court, Klimko, who makes roughly $80,000 a year, has been paying both support and her health insurance. For this reason, Moynahan said he was concerned about how she would fare financially if Klimko were sentenced to serve time.

"If I put him in jail, what happens?" he said.

"If you put him in jail, his life will be ruined. He's not a threat, he's never been a threat," said LaPointe. "They don't hire you to work in a school system without an adequate background check."

LaPointe asked the judge to give Klimko "this one chance" and "let him keep his job."

Moynahan needed time to think things over and came back with a verdict later Tuesday afternoon.

"He does hold a responsible position in the community," said Moynahan, adding that by losing his job, neither Klimko nor his wife would benefit.

Klimko was sentenced to two and a half years of supervised probation, and will also be required to participate in a batterer's program. He will continue to pay support and health insurance for his wife and must continue to respect the restraining order. In addition to his sentence, he will pay a probation fee of $65 a month and a $350 fee for the batterer's program.

Town wants train ruling

to the James Brook drainage system are tied to restoration of the Greenbush line through the town's mitigation agreement with the MBTA, Haddad said.

"While the MBTA is responsible for the reimbursement of some of this work, the town has committed other funds to these projects as well," Haddad said, adding that money may have to be reallocated depending on the fate of Greenbush.

The scope of the Village Revitalization Project, which is being paid for through a state grant and private donations, may have to be changed if Greenbush is abandoned and the MBTA doesn't rebuild the parking lot.

Selectmen are now in the position of putting these projects on hold until Romney rules on Greenbush, Haddad said.

The board became alarmed when reading published reports that Romney's decision due this month might be pushed off until later in the fall. Haddad said selectmen are not advocating a position for or against Greenbush.

"The Board needs to make decisions on the future of Cohasset that are solely dependant on your decision," Haddad wrote to Romney. "It is important that you make this decision in a timely fashion."

Plans to reconstruct the 17-mile Greenbush line have been in the works for 20 years. Design is underway, but construction is on hold pending the resolution of permitting and right-of-way issues, and Romney's review of the economic feasibility of the $470 million project.

able for someone making 80 percent of the area median income.

All buildings would comply with height and dimensional requirements, so no zoning relief would be necessary, developers say. The project, which is before the Planning Board, also needs Conservation Commission approval due to some limited wetlands crossings.

Also involved in the development are Cohasset resident and architect Jim Sandell of Carr Lynch Sandell + Denig, Inc., and engineer Neil Murphy of Neil J. Murphy Associates of Cohasset.

Existing curb cuts on Rte. 3A and the section of Beechwood Street off Norman Todd Road would provide access and lead to a small network of private ways within the development. Traffic impacts would be negligible, the developer says. It is expected the project would generate a total of 728 vehicle trips on a weekday, but only 56 during the morning peak hour and 76 in the evening peak hour.

Ideally developers would like to tie the project into the town's sewer system, whose line is 1,800 feet from the site. Consultants for the developer visited the Cohasset Water Treatment Plant along with a consultant from the Sewer Commission to determine the feasibility of the plant being able to absorb the project.

Sewer Commissioner Sean Cunning said while the board did not close the door — it was unlikely there would be capacity for the project, which is outside the Central Sewer District. The issue will be discussed at the commission's Aug. 18 meeting, he said.

David Calhoun said the development would generate about 14,000 gallons of wastewater per day.

"We put the engineers together and if they can come up with a creative plan, we'll listen to it," Cunning said, adding the Sewer Commission might even be willing to help with a satellite treatment plant for the project in the Beechwood area that also could hook up other homes and businesses.

Kelli Calhoun said when fully occupied, the project would generate about $750,000 a year in property taxes for the town and because it is geared to empty-nesters and retirees, would have no impact on the schools.

"It's a win-win," she said. The developers want to move aggressively and are optimistic they can break ground by October. They say about 35 people have already expressed interest in living at Cedarmere.

A year from now, they hope people can start moving in.

On August 16th and 17th, MetroLacrosse is pleased to host the second annual Cape Ann Charity Lacrosse Classic, at the Raymond Fields in Ipswich, MA. The tournament will draw 40 men's and women's teams for a charitable weekend of lacrosse to support Greater Boston's youth!

MetroLacrosse provides youth from historically underserved Greater Boston communities with a free sports-based character education program. MetroLacrosse strives to inspire, motivate, and support youth participants to achieve success both on- and off-the-field. Relying on seven core values - Responsibility, Effort, Sportsmanship, Participation, Enthusiasm, Communication, and Teamwork - MetroLacrosse teaches young people to RESPECT themselves, others, and their communities. MetroLacrosse believes that its program gives youth and teens a compelling way to spend their out-of-school time, learn from positive roles models, and practice values that are transferable to other areas of their lives.

Please join us at the tournament - it's free and open to the public!

Reed Dickinson is Cohasset's ambassador to New Zealand

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

U.S. STUDENT AMBASSADOR

Welcome back to Cohasset, Reed Dickinson!

Reed, who is going into ninth grade at Cohasset Middle School represented the United States as a member of the Massachusetts delegation of the People-to-People Ambassador Program. He spent one week in New Zealand, including a two-day home stay with a New Zealand family. He then continued to the "land down under," Australia, for another two weeks. While in Australia, Reed snorkeled in the Great Barrier Reef, which is one of the seven natural wonders of the world and went sand tobogganing down a sand dune with a vertical height of 150 meters, traveling at 50 mph. Reed got to hug kangaroos, cuddle koala bears and even view a wombat.

People-to-People was started in 1956 by President Dwight D. Eisenhower to improve relations between students in the United States and students in Russia. Since then, the program has expanded its reach to other countries. It has become an opportunity for U.S. students to share their culture and experience with people of other countries.

MASTER'S DEGREE

Julia A. Sechen of Cohasset was awarded a master of science degree from the College of Engineering at Northeastern University on June 14. Commencement was held at the Fleet Center in Boston and honored some 1,400 graduate students who earned master's and doctoral degrees. Great job, Julia. Good luck in your future endeavors.

HELPING YOUNG GOLFERS

Cohasset resident Robbie McVey of the Cohasset Golf Club played in the Ouimet Fund's Golf Marathon XI at Stow Acres Country Club Aug. 6. The "marathon" is a fund-raising event in which golfers, clubs and organizations attempt to play 100 holes or more in one day. They solicit pledges for per hole or flat contributions in support of their efforts. Proceeds benefit the Francis Ouimet Scholarship Fund, which has awarded more than $12.6 million in need-based scholarships helping more than 3,900 students over the years who have served as caddies, helpers in pro shops or course superintendent operations at Massachusetts courses. The fund was founded in 1949; last year 43 golf clubs, individuals and organizations raised $280,000, which was the highest ever for the fund.

IN THE WINNER'S CIRCLE

Speaking about golf, I have to brag a little about my son Daniel and my mom, former Cohasset resident, Joann Egan. Daniel and my mom played in a tournament at the Rockland Golf Course and came in first place winning them both a trophy and recognition. Then, my mom played in a tournament shortly after that and was the champion in her age group (of course we all know that is the 29-plus age group, hee, hee) Anyway, I am very proud of both of them for these accomplishments.

NEW ARRIVAL!

Shannon Turner and Joel Cruz announce the birth of their son, Dylan Joel Turner, who arrived at 3:26 a.m., July 2. Grandparents are Mike and Jude Turner of Scituate and Oscar Cruz of Florida and Gloria M. Rodriguez of Puerto Rico. Super news on this happy, bouncing baby boy.

PRESIDENTIAL SCHOLARSHIP

Cohasset's Rachel McElroy, a 2003 graduate of Notre Dame Academy, will be a member of American University's freshman class. Classes begin Monday, Aug. 25. Rachel has been accepted to the honors program and has been awarded a Presidential Scholarship. This scholarship is awarded to freshmen applicants who demonstrate outstanding academic excellence through high school grades, test scores, rank in class, community involvement, and service. American University is in Washington, D.C. Enjoy your freshman year Rachel and make sure to keep us all updated on any news you have to share.

Reed Dickinson spent one week in New Zealand through the People-to-People Ambassador Program. Reed is shown here holding a Kuala bear.

SEMESTER ABROAD

Eileen Ridge, a Cohasset resident was a student abroad in Ireland for the spring 2003 semester. A senior at Connecticut College, Eileen was part of the School for International Training Ireland program, which focuses on peace and conflict studies in Ireland. The program is based in Dublin and includes a homestay, a peace and conflict studies seminar, guest lecturers, and educational excursions. Eileen is a 2000 graduate of Cohasset High School and is the daughter of Kathleen Ridge. Eileen, this was a great piece for me to place in the paper. Good luck with all of your future plans.

FARMER'S MARKET

Don't forget to head down to Cohasset Common on Thursday afternoons from 2:30-6:30 p.m. to the Farmers Market. This is a great way to purchase fresh produce, flowers and yummy other treats. Also, their are many children's activities and a whole lot of time to socialize in a fun and festive surrounding.

RIVERSIDE CHURCH CARILLONNEUR

Want to spend a relaxing Sunday evening right here in Cohasset? Then you won't want to miss the seventh Summer Series concert on the 57-bell Cohasset Carillon Sunday evening, Aug. 10, by Dionisio Lind, Carillonneur of the Riverside Church in New York City. Mr. Lind will play a varied program of interest to all listeners, including music for carillon by Lefevere, Allard, Van Ooik, Van Balkom and Franco, folksong arrangements from England, Ireland and Wales, and transcriptions of music by MacDowell, Liadov, Engelmann and Gershwin.

The hour-long recital begins at 6 p.m. and is free of charge. It will take place rain or shine; in case of rain, listen from your parked cars. Printed programs, brochures and schedules will be distributed on Cohasset Common, and will also be available in a stand near the church courtyard on Highland Avenue extension. Listeners are invited to bring lawn chairs, blankets and picnic suppers to the Common or the church courtyard.

For further information, telephone St. Stephen's Church at 781-383-1083, or the Church Carillonneur, Sally Slade Warner at 978-475-2599, or the Assistant Carillonneur, Mary Kennedy at 781-383-9599.

HULLAPOLOOZA!

Hull's summer music festival, Hullapalooza, returns Saturday night, Aug. 9, to the Red Parrot on Nantasket Avenue. Five of the areas bands will play from 7 p.m. to midnight during this benefit event organized by Hullonians Steve West and Colleen MacDonald. All proceeds from the concert will benefit the Hull Lifesaving Museum and its youth programs.

The bands include Rob and Tim (folk, blues, and Celtic), Brook and Katie (Americana - not folk!), Freeda Rome and the Lost Boys (country twang), Cat Basket (rock 'n roll from the 60's onward), and the Pemberton All-Stars (rockin◊ blues and the best covers ever).

Tickets are $10 apiece, available in advance at the Lifesaving Museum or at the door. The Red Parrot's full menu will be available during the performance. Families are welcome. With any questions, please call Vicki Stevens at the museum at 781-925-5433.

SUNSET AT THE ABBEY CONCERT

Hingham Symphony Chamber Players present An American Celebration, full of good old-fashioned summertime music, at their annual outdoor concert on the lawn at Glastonbury Abbey, Saturday, Aug. 23 at 4:30 pm.

Featured soloist is pianist Jacqueline Schwab, known for her piano improvisations on the soundtracks of Ken Burns' PBS documentaries. She will perform American parlor and traditional folk music from Mark Twain's age and beyond: Stephen Foster and Civil War songs, vintage ballroom dances, hymns and spirituals, ragtime, tango and blues ballads.

HSO Chamber Players, all principals with the symphony, include oboist Andrew Price, trumpeter Misha Grandel, and Jobey Wilson on tuba. Each will play a solo set of American classics, and combine for some jazzy improvs.

Bring a blanket or beach chair and a picnic; refreshments will also be available to purchase. In case of rain, the concert will be moved to picturesque First Parish Meeting House on Cohasset Common. Tickets $10 adults, $5 through age 18; available in advance at Hingham Public Library, Noble's Hingham Square, Cards & Shards, Cohasset, or call 781-740-5694. The concert is sponsored by Serono, Inc. in Rockland, a member of HSO's Corporate Advisory Council.

That is all the news for this week. Make sure to send in all information to me no later than Mondays at noon.

Lawyer hopes small-town practice will really rock

Gives up city for hometown

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Hearing the word "lawyer" can bring to mind a host of preconceived terminology. "Rocker" is probably not one of them. But for Howie Altholtz his interest in music began a law career that is anything but ordinary.

Although now in private practice with an office on Elm Street overlooking Cohasset Harbor, there was a time when his view consisted of city lights and city streets, judging from the photos on his office walls. There are also pictures of Altholtz with legendary rockers, Ringo Starr and Steven Tyler, as well as pop star, Willa Ford, showing he hobnobs with chart toppers – not the usual acquaintances for a typical attorney.

"Things are growing. Progress has been really good."
— Howie Altholtz

Howie Altholtz sits by the window in his office on Elm Street across from Veterans Memorial Park at the harbor.

For 11 years, Altholtz worked at Nickson Peabody, a law firm in Boston. Wearing "two hats", he helped regulate the business side as well as the legal side of the firm. It was there he began seeing clients involved with the music industry. Having been in a band himself for years, it was easy for him to relate.

The majority of Altholtz's work with entertainers focused on contracts, licensing agreements, and copyright and trademark issues, but no matter how many clients he saw, there were always business matters to deal with on the company end.

"I was part of the administration as well as a lawyer," he said.

Working for such a large firm provided many perks other companies may not have had. Altholtz had not only a personal secretary, but access to pools and a company chef as well.

But in 1999, when the company went through a merger, Altholtz began having second thoughts about continuing his career in a firm that had skyrocketed to roughly 500 lawyers. He ultimately decided a firm that size was just too big.

Looking for alternatives to his situation, Altholtz came across an Internet startup company in desperate need of strong management. The DotClick Corporation, an online music service site provider, hired Altholtz as its vice president of business and legal affairs, through which he took charge of all legal matters for the company. Both inside and outside legal matters went through Altholtz, meaning he handled everything from matters dealing with the lease of the building to negotiating with vendors.

Joining the company at the height of the Internet boom, Altholtz said it seemed like a secure business venture with a lot of opportunities. Because DotClick was a much smaller company, so many of the perks he had become used to weren't available anymore. However, the experience he gained there was invaluable. As the in-house counsel for the company, Altholtz became very experienced in many different facets of the law, which he had not had a chance to practice in-depth before, because everyone at Nickson Peabody had been so specialized.

"It was a great way to hone my legal skills," he said.

For two years, his job remained secure, until the Internet economy began to collapse and "DotClick took a hit," he said.

While the company tried to "wind the business down," Altholtz made an agreement to stay on part time in order to help the business close on a better note. It was then that he "set up shop in Cohasset," just behind the town parking lot, to give him a space to work while planning his next business move.

Altholtz has been living in Cohasset for five years now, and his new business venture is one-year-old. He has since moved from his office in the village to one across from the Cohasset Harbor Inn. He continues to provide the wide range of legal assistance that he gained while at DotClick and is adjusting well to life in the slow lane.

"Things are growing. Progress has been really good," he said.

Starting a business can be risky. But after some thought, Altholtz decided it was the best route to take.

"I thought it was the best alternative. It just made sense," he said. "With the economy so bad, and with no one hiring, this seemed to be the best for me and my family."

For Altholtz, an added bonus to working from his hometown is that he has much more available time to spend with daughters Madeline, 11 and Colette, 10. "My kids are very important to me," he said.

But working for himself has caused some added pressure. He said that every day, he not only has to concentrate on his work, but also has to hustle for business, where at a firm, the business always comes to you. But Altholtz is confident that by his doing "good work for people in an honest way," that will build his reputation as well as client list.

He said there are many advantages to having his own practice, mainly that now he doesn't have to deal with the politics that go along with being a part of a large firm. He also said that with all the resources available to him at the larger level, he didn't get the chance to use all of his legal skills the way he does now.

"The Internet world was crazy. It was a think by the seat-of-your-pants operation." Which he said, "Positioned me perfectly for where I am now."

Of course, the location provides a much easier commute, but Altholtz said he finds himself spending more time at the office that he might otherwise.

"You have to spend extra time when you build a business," he said, and notes that because he lives so close, it's easy to be home for dinner, then shoot back over to the office later that evening because "it's so close and easy." With a firm in Boston, that isn't an option. However, he realizes the importance of budgeting his time so other aspects of his life aren't neglected.

"It's important to strike a proper balance between your financial interests and being a father. It's important to maintain that balance and this business gives me that opportunity," he said.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Expel school junk food

Childhood obesity has reached epidemic proportions in the United States. In 1982, 4 percent of U.S. children were obese. That percentage rose to 16 percent by 2001, and the numbers are climbing.

The Center for Disease Control points to three factors that contribute to the increasing number of overweight children (and adults, too):

• Behavior — eating too many calories while not getting enough physical activity;

• Environment — home, work, school, or community can provide barriers to or opportunities for an active lifestyle;

• Genetics — heredity plays a large role in determining how susceptible people are to overweight and obesity. Genes also influence how the body burns calories for energy or stores fat.

Why would the CDC be involved in the weighty problem of obesity? Because obesity leads to a number of life-threatening conditions including diabetes, heart disease and stroke.

In 1990, the number of childhood cases of Type II diabetes — it used to be called adult onset diabetes — was 4 percent. That percentage is now 20, and 85 percent of those children are obese.

Actions must be taken on many levels to turn the tide. At the state level, legislation has been filed that would prohibit the selling of candy, soft drinks and other forms of "junk food" on school grounds during school hours.

Cohasset is a step ahead of many towns. Concerned about the obesity epidemic sweeping the country, the Cohasset Board of Health recently directed Chartwells Educational Dining Services, the company that provides school lunches to Cohasset schools, to provide healthier options for students.

Students leaving a health education class where nutrition is part of the curriculum should not be given the option of a Snickers bar and Coke as a snack between classes.

The proposed bill doesn't entirely ban the sugary, fatty snacks craved by most of us at one time or another. It just restricts the time a student has access to the fat-building foods by putting a lock on the offending vending machines until school ends. Hungry students might then be pointed toward healthier options.

However, as the Cohasset Board of Health has asked, school vending machines should offer apples, yogurt and other healthy snacks that are low in fat and carbohydrates.

It's not clear when this legislation will make it to the floor of the House of Representatives and Senate for discussion. But it's opened the door to dialogue on an issue that has serious implications for every child in this state.

Legislators should do all they can to make sure the bill doesn't become one of the many legislative proposals to die in committee due to a lack of interest.

POLITICAL NOTES

Republicans appoint nominating committee

The Cohasset Republican Town Committee has appointed David Farrag, Martha Gjesteby, Julie Guild, Polly Logan, Kevin O'Donnell and Nathaniel Palmer to the Nominating Committee. This group will work over the next few months to fill the slate of 35 members to file with the State Committee by Nov. 7. Registered Republicans interested in taking a more active role in Republican politics and becoming a member of the Town Committee are invited to contact any member of the committee for further details.

Sunday, Aug.17 is the annual Cohasset Republican Town Committee Cookout at the seaside home of Julie Guild from 4:30 - 7:30 p.m.. Special guest this year is Mickey Edwards, the former congressman from Oklahoma who is currently a professor at the Kennedy School of Government and Harvard University Law School. For reservations and further information call Heather Palmer at 781-383-3339.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Merrill, Roth thank volunteers

TO THE EDITOR:

We would like to thank all the generous folks who volunteered at the Cohasset Consignment Shop and have worked with us over the years. There are many of you who taught us what volunteerism really means.

It is the unique combination of professionalism, dedication, and camaraderie that we shared that made the Shop the success it was. Many of you worked for more than one shift and were always quick to cover for sick or vacationing friends; your hours be it three or more a week allowed the Cohasset Consignment Shop to succeed like no other consignment shop around.

While we may never be able to compute your total number of hours of volunteering we can tell you that from 1989 your hours have produced over $622,000 of profit payments to the Social Service League. The amount of money although staggering is peanuts compared to the many hours needed to accomplish this feat.

As impressive as all of this may be, what is truly amazing is the camaraderie and extended family relationships that has evolved from this whole volunteer process. While we say thank you for those results we want you to know what we truly cherish are all those naturally evolving relationships that made volunteering fun for everyone at the Shop. While we will miss the fancy store and it's location it can never compare to the daily interaction that we've shared with all of you.

You folks have included us with your dates, divorces, marriages, deaths, grandchildren, vacations, etc.; you have made us part of your lives. Thank you, thank you, thank you, or as Bob Hope would have said, "Thanks for the memories...till we meet again."

Nothing compares to life here in Cohasset

TO THE EDITOR:

It was another quiet week in East Woebegone, where new houses are humongous, children and taxes are above average, and some adults querulous.

To nearly everyone's delight, the Selectmen yielded to popular outrage expressed by petition and in person, and deep-sixed the bumpouts, but not without some pointless quibbling that some signatures were by minors. Early next morning all evidence had disappeared except some painted dotted lines on the pavement.

The venerable Consignment Shop received a severe set-back with the resignation of the manager and several volunteer workers.

A mechanical malfunction created a duel between a classic convertible and Tedeschi's store window, and attracted the attention of at least three TV stations.

A few days earlier another good citizen in an inattentive moment whacked a parked truck, destroyed both vehicles, attracted the attention of the RMV, but no TV stations.

A replica of the shallop Elizabeth Tilley, which was brought to the New World disassembled and used for trading along the coast by the Pilgrims, visited our harbor on its way to the trading post they had established on the Kennebec River, now the city of Augusta. The replica was built with the tools and methods of the era at Plymouth Plantation, commissioned by the John Howland Society. (Howland was one of the Pilgrims, husband of Elizabeth Tilley).

It was autumn and winter on the common, so camouflaged in order to film two commercials for Walgreens. We had been judged "the perfect town" by the producer!

The grass is greener, plants more vigorous, and weeding more frequent, than usual this time of year, thanks to the frequent rains.

Volunteer resigns

TO THE EDITOR:

I am shocked by the action of the Board of the Social Service League of Cohasset with regard to Andi Merrill, Colleen Roth and the Cohasset Consignment Shop. The shop was the brainchild of four women (the late Jean Cotton being one of them), all of them members of the Social Service League, with the express purpose of raising money to support the services the league offered. For the past 50 years, with the exception of the past two or three years, the shop and the league have shared a very happy, autonomous and mutually beneficial association. That amicable relationship has ended with the board's takeover of the shop, done without any knowledge of the multiple facets or experience needed to run a successful enterprise and without any of the members ever having even volunteered in the shop.

Because I believe the board has been grossly unjust, I am resigning after 40 years as a volunteer. I am going to miss my Tuesday afternoons at the shop and the volunteers I worked with and the customers we served. I believe my feelings are shared by the more than 100 volunteers who have worked with loyalty and devotion.

This whole unhappy situation brings to mind the following lines from the poem, "The Invitation" by Oriah Mountain Dreamer (a Native American elder):

"I want to know what sustains you from the inside

When all else falls away.

I want to know if you can be alone with yourself,

And if you truly like the company you keep in empty moments."

GOT gives pro-Greenbush petitions to gov

In a press release Greenbush On Track, an advocacy group that seeks restoration of the Greenbush commuter rail line, has announced it delivered petitions signed by more than 1,200 South Shore residents to Gov. Mitt Romney, urging his administration to "finish work on the Greenbush commuter rail line project."

"The restoration of Greenbush is a vital project for the South Shore — the only region in Greater Boston without sensible, reliable public transportation service. In 1991, the state promised to restore Greenbush. We urge you to fulfill that pledge," the petition reads.

In February, the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority placed a six-month moratorium on the Greenbush project to study permitting and right-of-way issues associated with construction. The moratorium Aug. 11. In the interim, contractors continue with planning, designs, land takings and pre-construction work. To date, the MBTA has spent more than $130 million on Greenbush restoration, including the purchase of new trains for the line.

The MBTA's Greenbush commuter rail service between Braintree and Scituate, which will be 18 miles long and have seven stations, is expected to attract a total of 4,200 riders each way on weekdays and remove 3,100 vehicles from local roads, including Route 3. For more information go to www.GreenbushOnTrack.com.

HEALTH NOTES

The facts behind beach closings

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

As a result of water quality sampling, the Board of Health has closed Bassing Beach to swimming until further notice because of high bacteria counts. As you know, the Board of Health regularly (every Tuesday morning) samples the water at selected sites around the Town. Bassings beach is closed if enterococci reach a geometric mean value of 35 colonies per 100 milliliters of the sample. Enterococci (EC) is a better measure of the presence of human waste than fecal coliform which has been used as a criterion for beach closings for many years. Actually, according to state requirements, the measurements must be averaged over five samples taken on different days. The EC level of one sample, must reach 104 colonies per 100 ml for a beach closing. Bassing has had high counts for over six weeks, and also have reached 104 colonies at least once.

The actual sampling is now being done by volunteers at the Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR; the former Hagerty Building) and brought to the Board of Health for analysis by a professional lab. Students take water samples at six locations in town: the Sailing Club dock, the Yacht Club, Sandy Beach, just inside Cunningham Bridge at Little Harbor, Sandy Cove, and Black Rock Beach. Notification of beach closing is given by the Board of Health when levels reach the trigger point. We close Bassing Beach if the Sailing Club readings are too high. Levels are posted at the Board of Health, and the Harbormaster is informed, as is the Yacht Club, The Sailing Club, and the Center for Student Coastal Research. The Harbormaster flies a yellow flag at the Harbormaster's shack as does the Sailing Club. The Board is considering purchasing warning signs to place at selected locations at Bassing Beach. We have tried wooden signs, but they are removed almost at once. Budgetary restrictions prevent us from obtaining more permanent signs.

Notification of beach closing is given by the Board of Health when levels reach the trigger point. We close Bassing Beach if the Sailing Club readings are too high.

The cause of the high readings is unknown, except in a general way. Generally, during rainy weather, storm-water runoff of surface water from catch basins and storm drains will give high readings. This condition was found in a 1999 study of Little Harbor by Camp Dresser McKee. But other things may cause the increase. For the Town, fecal coliform readings have been correlated with business activity. That is, the fecal coliform levels in Little Harbor were higher in the 1980s during the business boom, and lower in the early 90s when the economy sank. The Gulf has been assailed by ever increasing fecal coliform levels in recent years. This year, student volunteers at the CSCR have been regularly getting fecal coliform levels with the notation TNTC (too numerous to count). Also, the geometric mean at the Yacht Club is greater than 35 (Geomean 38). The board has not assessed these data yet, but we will begin requesting split comparison samples with one part of the student's samples going to a professional lab for analysis, and the rest being used by the students for their regular analysis.

The heavy plant growth over the wet spring may have aided wildlife by providing food for larger litters of rabbits, other animals and birds, all of which contribute to surface water pollution with their droppings. For example, Whale Meadow at the left of the channel on the way out of the harbor, has shown high bacteria counts for years. Studies of this problem lead us to believe that its pollution comes from wildlife. In other areas, high levels of building and construction also add to contaminated runoff.

According to experts, so called 'non point source' pollution is the source of about half of the pollution entering our waters. Such pollution is an enigma and a challenge to an ever more densely populated environment. The next steps in this battle with our environmental threats are now being planned and implemented by the Sewer Commission, the Board of Health, and the Water Commission. Other boards and committees in town have coordinated programs to identify and cope with the most active threats to our environment. Clearly, it's not going to be a back to nature proposition, but a long-term and expensive battle against the persistent factors which degrade our way of living.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Board of Health.

LIBRARY CORNER

'Stories from stuff'

Carolyn Martino is back by popular demand! Carolyn will perform, "Stories from Stuff", on Tuesday, Aug. 12, at 7p.m. She will be our final performer of the summer season. A book raffle will be held promptly at 6:55. The winners of the coloring contest will be announced after the book raffle. Winners that are present will receive their prizes before the performance."

Summer reading program to end

The READ! THINK! CREATE! @your library summer reading program will end on Aug. 18. All participants who have successfully completed their summer reading goal should bring their reading logs to Mrs. Moody in the Children's Room to receive their book bag. Congratulations to the 238 students who participated in the summer reading program. What a success!

Booking ahead

Bestseller preview! Reserve your copy in advance by calling the library or by placing a hold on any of the following new titles on order at the library: "Madam Secretary: a Memoir," by Madeleine Albright and "Rumsfeld: a Personal Portrait," by Midge Decter.

Contributions from foreign authors include "The Storyteller's Daughter," by British-born Shah Saira. Saira provides a personal account of her life as an Afghan woman caught between Western and Eastern culture, religion, politics and tradition. Bestselling Canadian authors Ann-Marie MacDonald and Frances Itani return with new novels. "The Way the Crow Flies," MacDonald's latest, takes us back to a post-war world where Madeleine McCarthy learns about the ambiguity of human mortality. "Deafening," is Itani's World War I story of a young deaf woman and her husband, a stretcher-bearer at the Western Front. Forthcoming are bestsellers "The Wedding," by Nicholas Sparks and, "The Sinner," by Tess Gerritsen.

Anne Rivers Siddons returns with a new novel, "Islands." Ann's promise to live with her husband's family in old age rather than enter an assisted-living facility, becomes a painful challenge.

In the name of security

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I tell you this USA Patriot Act is starting to make me nervous.

The Act, as it was passed by Congress in the wake of Nine-Eleven, gives the FBI the right to check out who checks out what books from the library and who buys what books from a bookseller for reasons known only to the successors of J. Edgar Hoover.

The last time I looked, the FBI itself was being checked out to find out how come a fellow named Joe Salvati and his friends were sent up the river for 30 years or more for a killing the FBI was well aware was done by someone else.

I haven't found it necessary to check a book out of the library since Grove Press started selling "Lady Chatterley's Lover" and "Fanny Hill" direct to the readers, and in the years since the ice melted I have amassed a personal library of several thousand volumes.

This is mostly because I never throw anything away, but I digress . . .

What is the FBI going to do in the name of security once it runs out of public libraries to keep under surveillance?

The thing that worries me is this: What is the FBI going to do in the name of security once it runs out of public libraries to keep under surveillance? Will it then turn to private libraries in an effort to root out the sleeper cells among us?

I'll probably get into trouble for confessing this but I have in my possession two books that helped to change the course of Western Civilization, and not for the best — an English translation of "Mein Kampf" and Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman."

I also have a copy of Erskine Caldwell's "God's Little Acre," and, boy, the things that Will Thompson does to Darling Jill just aren't to be believed. But again I digress . . .

"Mein Kampf," you'll recall, details the struggle of a young German (or Austrian) artist in his efforts to conquer most of the known world years before Osama Ben Laden or Saddam Hussein were even a blip on the FBI's radar.

"The Clansman," you'll also recall, recounts how a band of young Southerners donned white robes and masks to save the shrinking maidens of Dixie from misogyny. D. W. Griffith made it into a classic early day silent movie, 'The Birth of a Nation."

The theory that one can tell a lot about a man — even a terrorist — from his taste in books and pictures reached full flower during the hearings into Clarence Thomas' appointment to the Supreme Court when it was discovered he once borrowed the tape to "Long Dong Silver."

He was confirmed in spite of it.

Supporters of the "damn the privacy, full security ahead" theory of government defend their position by assuring us that they would never nose around our library records or test our taste in reading unless they have good reasons to be suspicious.

And how will they find those good reasons for suspicion?

Why, by checking into what we read, of course.

SENIOR SCENE

The following events, programs and classes are upcoming at Cohasset Elder Affairs this summer. Please call the CEA office at 781-383-9112 to reserve your space.

OWLS — Older Women Life Skills: Announcing the formation of a support and skills group for women age 70 and older who are coping with depression and anxiety. This group will build on each women's life experience and personal strengths to help meet the challenges of this stage of life. Psychologist Nancy Cherico, Ph.D. of Hingham will run the program. Limited to seven participants, the group will meet once a week for 10 weeks. The fee is $50 per session, covered by Medicare and most other insurers. Day and time of meetings will be arranged for the convenience of members. For more information, contact Dr. Cherico at 781-749-9689.

Escorted Grocery Shopping New!: Tuesdays, 1:15 p.m. Please call if you would like a shopping companion. This new program provides an escort to help you with your grocery shopping. Or, if unable to shop, a volunteer will take your list, return and put away the groceries. 781-383-9112.

TRANSPORTATION

The first Monday of the month, the CEA will provide transportation "around town" only. We will discontinue the trip to the South Shore Mall that first Monday of the month, the reason being there has not been sufficient interest to continue this service.

Monday trips to the Stop and Shop will be at 1:30 p.m. instead of 9:30 a.m.

The last change will be on Thursdays. The 9:30 a.m. service will be for downtown (Cohasset Village) only. The van will then bring you to the center for lunch, after which you will be taken home.

This revised schedule is on a trial basis. The CEA trusts these modifications to its van schedules will continue to be helpful to you.

LUNCH

Cohasset Elder Affairs serves lunch at the senior center, 3 North Main Street, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. All Cohasset residents over 60 are welcome to join the group. Transportation provided to and from your home upon request. The cost is $2. per meal. Must make reservation at least 24 hours in advance, 781-383-9112.

Executive raises may not sit well with state workers

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

The politics of personnel wound up dominating the week inside the Statehouse.

Personnel matters are always at the center of the radar screen for state employees anyway — not because they're state employees, particularly, but because they're employees. While some cyber-columnist will no doubt be making a easy living in 3003 poking fun at public-sector workers for being underworked and overpaid, the reality is less nefarious than the bulk of the inked insinuation. Obsession with payrolls and pensions, rank and retirement, is simply immutable organizational behavior, and the Commonwealth is the largest single organization in New England, with 70,000 workers.

That said, decision making around administering the government and its payroll is shot through with even more political nuance than other workplaces. That's why the head-turning stories of the week — personnel cuts likely in the Senate and the awarding of pay raises to state managers in Mitt Romney's Executive Branch — possessed so much value as fodder for gossip and rhetoric.

Former Senate President Thomas Birmingham appears to have gone on quite a spending spree in the last months of his tenure. According to the Boston Globe, though he'd floated a budget for the Senate that cut spending, his actual spending ran at clip well beyond the appropriated amount — so much so that the Legislature had to transfer money and dip into reserves to pay the Senate's bills. Among the items were charges such as a $2,000 bar tab at the 21st Amendment and $13,000 for carpeting. All legal, and all unpalatable, to say the least, for legislative staffers and other state workers now bracing for layoff notices as fallout from the budget tightening of the last year hits the rank and file.

A number of elements added to the intrigue that gave the problem a prominence well out of proportion to the $1.2 million dollar amount. For one, the governor vetoed a budget item that would have covered that shortfall —and the House did not take it upon itself to override the item when a record 232 vetoes were being overridden three weeks ago. For another, it turned out that current Senate President Robert Travaglini did some hiring that did not look good when printed in the Globe.

The anger and anxiety generated by an emergency Senate internal-budget caucus mingled later in the week with a general feeling of outrage on the part of the Democrats when the Globe reported on raises approved by the governor for about 2,700 state managers.

Obsession with payrolls and pensions, rank and retirement, is simply immutable organizational behavior, and the Commonwealth is the largest single organization in New England, with 70,000 workers.

At a time when 1,200 state workers have already been laid off, more seem likely to lose their jobs, and people and families dependent on state services are losing their benefits, Romney granted a 2 percent pay hike for managers in state agencies. The raises add to a 2.7 percent cost of living hike received July 1.

Democrats have not appreciated being told they're behind "the mess on Beacon Hill," in Romney's catcall. If he goes forward with the raises, the purported mess makers are likely to raise the "managers vs. Medicaid" issue approximately one billion times between now and the next election.

Also, legislative leaders have a way of waiting for a chance to pay back what they perceive as ill treatment, and when payback comes, effect is commonly untraceable to effect. If Romney doesn't know by now that quiet on the legislative front from can be ominous, he's likely to learn it — at a time of the Legislature's choosing. The Senate problem might still be solved with an override in the fall. Most Democrats are thinking of ways to add to, not solve, Romney's problems.

July merged with August and the pace slowed down but there was still plenty going.

• Dems: we can't wait to nominate the next president — A big political rally at the Old South Meeting House gave a taste of what's to come, as US Sen. Edward Kennedy, Boston Mayor Thomas Menino and everyone who's anyone in the Democratic Party unveiled the branding for the 2004 Democratic National Convention. The convention, to be held at the Fleet Center, will be the first national political event held since the 9/11 attacks. The Massachusetts political establishment is also hoping it serve as the coronation of US Sen. John Kerry as standard bearer against President Bush in the general election.

• Sec says Kerasiotes and turnpike misled investors, won't be punished — The US Securities and Exchange Commission found former Turnpike Authority Chairman James Kerasiotes negligently misrepresented the financial status of the Big Dig project in 1999. Kerasiotes agreed to the release of the order without admitting or denying any of the findings. It settles the SEC investigation into the billion-dollar-plus coverup of Big Dig overruns that led to Kerasiotes' firing.

• Project will have a window of completion — At the same meeting where they discussed the Kerasiotes findings, Turnpike Authority officials said that the project will be complete not by a specific deadline, as announced earlier, but rather in a "window." The deadline had been May 2005. The window is May 2005 to November 2005.

• Healey signs teacher bonus amendment, holds line on MCAS — Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey signed a budget amendment restoring $4 million to the teacher bonus program. Healey also said the administration will not "back off" its commitment to holding special education students to high standards on the MCAS exam. Asked about another matter, the lieutenant governor — acting governor last week — said Attorney General Thomas Reilly's findings in the Boston Archdiocese scandal were the "final word," but the governor's chief legal counsel, Daniel Winslow, will look into what "legal loopholes" may be preventing any indictments of Catholic Church officials.

• Acting Gov. Healey signs muni relief — After a great deal of lobbying, procedural adjustment and angst, acting Gov. Kerry Healey signed the municipal relief bill, putting it immediately into effect. The bill allows cities and towns to hike fees, delay pension payments, charge for school busing, and adopt a local early retirement incentive system. The new flexible management options are intended to help towns cope with cuts in state aid.

• Healey: no decision made on Greenbush — The lieutenant governor told the South Shore Chamber of Commerce that, newspaper reports to the contrary, the governor nor his administration has made a final decision on the controversial Greenbush line through Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate. Romney suggested all big transit projects are going to be tough for finance for a long time coming, but Healey said that doesn't mean the project's been cancelled. Opponents say the new line is superfluous and expensive and will degrade the quality of communities already served by water transit to Boston. Proponents say the public wants the line because it will take more cars off the roads, provide another transit option, and help the environment.

• Parkland conversion will face new hurdle — What's been a routine matter in the Legislature is about to get more complicated, but the administration say it's for a good reason. From now on, Lt. Gov. Healey said, the Romney administration intends to veto bills authorizing new uses for protected parklands unless proponents can prove there's been a thorough environmental review process and a rigorous exploration of alternate sites. She gave the details in a letter. The veto threat may hamper future efforts to build schools on parklands.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for over 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' and senators' votes on four roll calls from earlier July sessions. All of the roll call votes are on legislative action surrounding Gov. Romney's overrides of items in the $22.1 billion fiscal 2004 state budget.

WORK REQUIREMENTS FOR WELFARE RECIPIENTS (H 4004)

House 105-51, Senate 31-9, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a budget section allowing able-bodied welfare recipients with children between the ages of two and six to substitute 20 weekly hours of education and/or job training as an alternative to the recently-approved law requiring that they work 20 hours per week. Override supporters said that Massachusetts is the only state in the nation that does not allow the education and training option. They noted the cost of these options is a worthwhile investment because the strict work requirement often prevents many recipients from getting basic education and job training and dooms them to a life of low-paying jobs, poverty and continued support by taxpayers. Override opponents said that weakening the work requirement is a step backwards in welfare reform and argued the state-funded training option would cost millions of dollars that the state cannot afford. They noted they support welfare recipients who want to voluntarily get an education or job training as long as they also work while pursuing these other alternatives. (A "Yea" vote is for allowing substitution of 20 weekly hours of education and/or job training. A "Nay" vote is against allowing the substitution).

ADMINISTRATION OF THE CHILDREN'S TRUST FUND (H 4004)

House 140-12, Senate 36-4, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of the entire $870,557 in funding for the administration of the Children's Trust Fund (CTF). The CTF is a public-private partnership that was created by the state in 1988 with a mission to establish community-based educational and service programs designed to reduce the occurrence of child abuse and neglect. Override supporters said the funding is necessary for the CTF to properly administer its many programs that help children and families across the state. Override opponents said the CTF is a public-private partnership that is allowed to raise money privately and should do so during the state's fiscal crisis. (A "Yea" vote is for the $870,557. A "Nay" vote is against the $870,557).

PARENTS OF AT-RISK NEWBORNS (H 4004)

House 129-22, Senate 38-2, overrode Gov. Romney's $6,677,891 veto reduction (from $12,238,703 to $5,560,812) in funding for neonatal and postnatal home parenting education and home visiting programs for at-risk newborns. Override supporters said these programs, focused on first-time parents under 21, have been very successful in educating many teen parents about taking care of babies and raising them. They argued that the programs have resulted in increased health for the children, harmony for the families and reduced subsequent pregnancies for the teenage mothers. Some override opponents said it is not pleasant to reduce funding for good programs but argued that $5,560,812 is all the state can afford during this fiscal crisis. Others said there is poor oversight of this program's contracts and administration and argued the additional money would be of more help to high-risk children if it funded agencies like the Department of Social Services. (A "Yea" vote is for the $6,677,891 A "Nay" vote is against the $6,677,891).

ABCC TO TREASURER'S OFFICE (H 4004)

House 131-19, Senate 27-8 overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a budget section transferring the control and operation of the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission (ABCC) from the governor's administration to the office of State Treasurer Tim Cahill. The ABCC enforces the state's liquor laws and regulations related to manufacturing, importing, exporting, storing, transporting and selling alcoholic beverages. Override supporters said the governor has irresponsibly fired many ABCC investigators and is continuing to dismantle the agency in order to allow liquor laws to be enforced on the local level. They said local officials are already reeling from budget cuts and cannot assume this responsibility. Override opponents said the transfer to the Democratic treasurer's office is a blatant political move to wrest control of the ABCC away from the governor who has cleaned house at the commission and fired employees with deep Democratic political ties. They said the ABCC has been a patronage haven that the Democratic leadership is trying to rescue. (A "Yea" vote is for transferring the ABCC from the governor's administration to the treasurer's office. A "Nay" vote is against the transfer).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

MUNICIPAL RELIEF PACKAGE (H 3944)- Acting Gov. Kerry Healey signed into law a municipal relief package giving local cities and towns more management flexibility, fiscal choices and revenue raising options in order to compensate for this year's cuts in local aid. Provisions include an increase in the maximum fine for parking violations, failure to stop and blocking intersections; increased fees for towing, gun registration, fire department permits and auto leasing; permitting school districts to charge students in kindergarten through sixth grade for bus transportation to school; allowing communities to offer early retirement incentive programs for local workers and to reduce the next two fiscal years' unfunded pension liability payment by an amount equal to their loss in local aid; authorizing cities and towns to work with the Registry of Motor Vehicles to design and sell distinctive vehicle license plates and keep the profits and allowing communities to bid for state contracts for maintenance of public ways including snow and ice removal.

ZBA denies permit for Rosano triangle

Leaves door open for modified plan

The proposal would have to include less lot coverage, less signage, and comply with setbacks, Chittick said.

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The 27,000 square foot "Rosano triangle" at the corner of lower King Street and Rte. 3A, which is best known for its dirt piles and construction equipment may continue to have that distinction for some time to come.

The Zoning Board of Appeals has decided not to grant owner Joseph Rosano the zoning relief necessary for a commercial-residential use at the site that would include a colonial-style building with office space, and two one-bedroom apartments. Plans also included parking for 26 vehicles.

Rosano sought a special permit allowing the commercial-residential use but the ZBA determined he also needed sign and parking variances, and a variance for lot coverage.

Back in 1992, the ZBA granted a special permit for Rosano to construct a building that would have included a doctor's office and one residential apartment because such a profession is allowed in an owner occupied single-family home. The special permit was conditioned on the structure meeting all setback requirements for a residential dwelling in that district. The ZBA did not grant signage and parking variances for the project, which ultimately fell through when the doctor decided not to go forward with the purchase of the premises.

In the spring of 2000, Rosano was also unsuccessful in obtaining zoning relief to build a house on the site that would include office space and two apartments. Rosano planned to house his motor vehicle sales company in a small office on the first floor.

At the June 16 hearing, Rosano attorney William Ohrenberger argued the parcel is in a residential zone and is currently used as commercial property, and therefore the current proposal would not be substantially different in character or more detrimental to the neighborhood — two tests that must be met under the zoning bylaw before a special permit can be granted.

But ZBA chairman Woody Chittick said in denying Rosano's application, the board was leaving the door open for a "greatly modified proposal that was more in keeping with a residential district." The proposal would have to include less lot coverage, less signage, and comply with setbacks, he said.

Less trash, more recycling saves town tons of money

Pay As You Throw is deemed a success

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

In these tight fiscal times, the town's Pay-As-You-Throw trash disposal system is a good news story.

Since the program's inception in July 2001, more residents are recycling —which has translated into less trash to haul to SEMASS — resulting in savings for the town, officials say.

"I think it's going very well," said Selectman Merle Brown, who also sits on the Recycling Committee.

In the first year alone, the town saved $116,000 on the cost of tonnage going to SEMASS, the incinerator in Rochester, Mass.

According to Director of Finance Mike Buckley, the town spent $351,000 in fiscal year 2001 on solid waste disposal and $266,000 in fiscal year 2003, which ended June 30 – a drop of about 25 percent. He also said because hauling rates have increased by about 8 percent, the town saved even more.

As a result of the savings, the town has been able to reduce sticker fees a little more each year the program is in place. Before the program started, RTF stickers cost $85, which was reduced to $50 the first year of the program, and $35 last year. This year, which is the third year of PAYT, stickers cost $30 ($15 for senior citizens). Residents also pay $1 for a 30-gallon trash bag or 50 cents for a 15-gallon bag..

The Municipal Recycling Incentive Program, run by the state Department of Environmental Protection, has taken notice of Cohasset's participation and provided the town with a grant of $4,200 in light of its recycling efforts. Towns can apply for the grants each year, and this is not the first time Cohasset has received funding. In previous years, money has gone toward not only maintenance of the RTF, but toward the purchase of a new container for glass recyclables, as well as for covering the costs of sending informational mailings to residents.

"I would estimate that probably 90 to 95 percent of the people do a good job [recycling]," Brown said. And the figures can attest to what Brown says.

"I would estimate that probably 90 to 95 percent of the people do a good job recycling."
— Selectman Merle Brown, Recycling Committee

Although the cost of recycling has gone from $41,000 in FY '01 to $54,000 in FY '03, recycling cuts down the tonnage to SEMASS, which is more expensive than paying for some recyclables. Currently, the town pays roughly $85 per ton. The town does not charge residents to recycle.

One of the grant's criteria is to track material the town buys so the items contain some recycled material. The town and schools buy photocopying paper, toner for copiers, paper towels, and toilet paper, as well as some cleaners that contain recycled materials, Brown says.

However, there are still people who try to cheat the system. Brown thinks in general, Cohasset residents abide by the rules. But that has not been the case next door in Scituate, where enough residents are using regular trash bags rather than the PAYT bags, to force the town to seek ways to curb cheating.

Brown surmises the regular trash bags spotted in Cohasset have actually tumbled out of the blue PAYT bags. He said some residents are disposing of their trash in smaller bags and then putting those in the larger PAYT bags. He added RTF employees monitor activity closely, and haven't seen many people breaking the rules.

Currently, there are three full-time employees during the week and one part-time employee who helps throughout the weekend. Workers check for stickers as well as the use of blue bags, and also make sure people are throwing other waste items, such as construction and demolition debris into the right receptacles.

Workers write down the license plate number of anyone they see breaking the rules, and the offender is sent a letter warning that the vehicle's all-facilities sticker could be revoked if he or she is caught breaking the rules again.

PAYT bags are available at Joseph's Hardware on Route 3A, Fiori's Exxon, Stop and Shop, Mobil Mart, Cohasset Food Mart in Jonathan Livingston Seagull Square off Route 3A, Tedeschi's near Hingham in the west corner, Cohasset Hardware in the village, and Hingham Lumber.

Bags are also available at the RTF and DPW during the hours of 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Bags are sold in rolls of 10 and cost $10 a roll for 32 gallon bags, and $5 a roll for the 16 gallon bags.

Brown said the schools need to be more involved in recycling.

"The lower grades do a fairly decent job on recycling," Brown said, but a lack of recycling is a big problem at the middle-high school. Brown said the Recycling Committee plans to work with the school to institute more recycling there.

Tax bills due, it's OK to pay online

Residents can arrange for bill payments to be automatically withdrawn from their checking or savings account, and eBill will be accepting credit card payments shortly.

The Town of Cohasset has issued Fiscal Year 2004's first-quarter tax bills, were due last Friday, Aug. 1. Anyone did not receive their tax bill should contact the Board of Assessors at 781-383-4114 to confirm their correct mailing address or the Treasurer-Collector at 781-383-4102 for a copy of the tax bill.

The Town of Cohasset now offers residents the option of paying their real estate tax bills via the Internet. The eBill system takes the town's billing data and posts it on the Metropolitan Communications (MCC) Web site, which allows residents to view and pay their real estate tax bills. At 25-cents-per-transaction, the new payment option costs residents less than a postage stamp.

Residents can arrange for bill payments to be automatically withdrawn from their checking or savings account, and eBill will be accepting credit card payments shortly.

Currently, residents are able to pay their real estate tax bills with eBill. Soon, residents will also be able to pay motor vehicle excise taxes and water/sewer bills using the eBill system.

To find out more information, or to make a payment, please visit the eBill web site at www.mcc.net.

8 Consecutive Years BEST OF BOSTON 2003

Sisters Elizabeth and Grace Deveney are surrounded by the cast of their original production "Jack Beanstalk" which was on stage this week at the Deer Hill School auditorium.

Rave reviews for 'Jack Beanstalk' on opening night

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

This story is the last of a series, outlining the process from start to finish, of producing children's theater. The Children's Drama Workshop, founded by the Deveney sisters, Beth, Grace and Sarah, is in its 15th year.

There must have been 65 children with "broken legs" in Cohasset Tuesday night if the old actor's saying is true. After weeks of hard work and long hours of rehearsals, the children participating in this year's Children's Drama Workshop production of "Jack Beanstalk" finally took the stage, with delighted friends and family members in the audience.

The line outside the Deer Hill Auditorium stretched down the halls of the school as many eager theater-goers waited to enter. Posted on the walls were many clippings of newspaper articles spanning the successes of the last 15 years of the program, of which this performance is no exception.

Just over one month ago, many timid children were introducing themselves to one another, hoping to impress the judges, while trying to calm the jittery nerves that auditions can bring. However, to look at the actors performing on stage, it's almost hard to tell it's the same group.

Once shy little girls, many fairies took the stage and threw karate punches with the confidence of seasoned veterans. Mexican Jumping Beans "jammed" to the music, more so on stage than they ever had in rehearsals. The solo performances were done with tons of energy, drawing the audience in. Everyone involved, without exception, took their parts very seriously and delivered performances they can all be very proud of.

In addition to the talent of the children involved, there is a wealth of support behind the scenes, which includes the Deveney sisters, who began the program 15 years ago in their parent's garage. Sisters Beth, Grace, and Sarah, who was recently married and not able to participate as much in this year's performance, have worked together over the years to help encourage not only a love for performing, but the opportunity to meet new friends, making the performance a memorable experience for everyone involved — and it shows.

From beginning to end, actors delivered lines with ease, performed dance routines and sang their hearts out with smiles on their faces the entire time. For anyone in the audience, it was plain to see how much the children enjoyed being a part of the production.

This year's play was written by Beth, whose clever wit added a wonderful touch of humor, especially appreciated by adults in the audience. From Fairy Bell asking a fairy helper to retrieve a "how to slay the Giant informational packet" from her office, to Chip Munk looking for a "Singles for Singles" meeting, the story line appealed to a wide audience.

Not to go unnoticed were the sets, created by Tyler Rosen. With a magic, growing beanstalk and rising sun, as well as houses and scenery which fit exactly with the characters, the sets provided a backdrop which was the perfect compliment to a great show.

Sisters Grace and Beth are still considering whether they should continue the program next year without Sarah. While they will surely be missed if they don't return, this show could not have been a better note to end on. Congratulations to everyone involved for a job well done!

Runaway reptile is star of the show

Lizard lounging in bog lands career in education

By Alice Coyle
ACOYLE@CNC.COM

Over the years, Lydia Mathias has seen a lot of wildlife wandering around her cranberry bogs, from deer and skunks to raccoons, coyotes and even wild turkeys. But last week the owner of Bog Hollow Farm saw something she had never seen amid her cranberry crop or anywhere else — a 3-foot-long Nile monitor lizard.

The runaway reptile, most likely someone's exotic pet that either escaped or was released, had apparently been on the lam for several days before getting bogged down at Mathias' Wapping Road property.

Mathias said one of her seasonal workers alerted her to the lizard's presence July 23, but she was dubious about the reptile report at first.

"I said 'a big lizard? Yeah, sure.' " But sure enough when she went to check it out there he was lying on cranberry vines in a ditch near one of the sprinklers. "I almost fell over when I saw him," Mathias said. "I knew it sure wasn't from around here."

Mathias' first call was to the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell, which then referred her to the New England Wildlife Center in Hingham. When the wildlife center said it didn't handle lizards, Mathias' next call was to the Pembroke office of Animal Rescue League of Boston.

"They couldn't have been nicer," said Mathias. "They came right over."

It wasn't the first call the league had received about the lizard. On July 21, the rescue league got a call from the Kingston Police Department reporting a large iguana was on the loose along South Street.

"As soon as our driver saw it, we knew it wasn't an iguana," said Animal Rescue League shelter agent Adam Page. With its long snout and tail, Page said the reptile looked more like a cross between an alligator and an iguana.

Before they could make a positive identification, the large lizard made an escape into some wetlands. Two days later the rescue league was back on its trail at Bog Hollow Farm. But the elusive lizard continued to confound by slipping into a ditch and disappearing before the rescue league even arrived.

By the next day, the lizard was back exactly where Mathias had first found him, lounging on some cranberry vines and appearing as if it had just enjoyed a snack — perhaps a field mouse or frog. This time the rescue league was able to noose the reptile. After it had slipped into a pipe between the pond and the bog, rescue league workers waited at the end of the culvert pipe and when the large lizard emerged caught him in the net.

"It seemed to be in pretty good health," said Page, noting that the facility — which opened last June — had never rescued an animal as exotic as a lizard. "We get a lot of cats and dogs around her here, nothing like this."

Although clearly not equipped to care for exotic lizards, the rescue league staff did what they could to keep it comfortable.

"The first thing we did was to set up some heat lamps because it was very cold," said Animal Rescue League assistant manager Ed Doyle "These are desert creatures, they like it hot."

A call to the Massachusetts Department of Fisheries and Wildlife helped identify the reptile as the Nile monitor lizard, indigenous to Northeast Africa in the region of the Nile River. The department also helped connect the rescue league with the Beverly-based Rainforest Reptile Shows where the 2-3-year-old male Nile monitor lizard has become an instant star.

"He's done three shows with us in the last two days," said Rainforest Reptile Shows herpetologist Michael Ralbovsky, Tuesday. The lizard was transferred to him Saturday and by Monday, Ralbovsky had worked the reptile into his routine, educating children in preschools and summer recreation programs.

On Wednesday, the lizard which Ralbovsky is considering naming "Cranberry" based on his rescue from Bog Hollow Farm, made his debut at the South Shore Natural Science Center.

Michael Ralbovsky of Rainforest Reptile Shows introduces "Cranberry" a three-foot-long Nile monitor lizard to the young audience during last Wednesday's performance at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell. The lizard was found lounging last week in Lydia Mathias cranberry bogs at Bog Hollow Farm.

Ralbovsky said he's delighted to have "Cranberry" on staff and noted that for a Nile monitor lizard he's pretty mild-mannered. "Nile monitors have a reputation for being aggressive," he said. "This one's dog-tame."

"He seems to be very intelligent and is not afraid of an audience."

He is also in very good health. "Whoever owned him took good care of him," said Ralbovsky.

Cousins to the Komodo dragon, Nile monitor lizards are carnivores, and opportunistic feeders like alligators, Ralbovsky said. In the wild they eat small mammals, crocodile eggs, birds, carcasses of dead animals, whatever they come across, he said. While in the bog "Cranberry" most likely enjoyed a diet of frogs, field mice, salamanders — whatever small wildlife that crossed his path, Ralbovsky surmised. Nile monitors have teeth to tear their food, and a long tail they use for defense against other animals. But contrary to popular opinion, the lizards don't use their tails to whack their prey, he said. "That's just a myth."

Due to their long tails, mature Nile monitor lizards can grow to six feet in length, although Ralbovsky said he's never seen one get that big. And they can live as long as 30 years.

It is likely that whoever owned the lizard hasn't come forward because they were keeping it unlawfully. To keep a Monitor lizard in the state of Massachusetts you have to have a permit, but because they are available in the pet trade in nearby states and some people think, "It's cool to have a big lizard" many of them are kept illegally in the Commonwealth, Ralbovsky said. Some are released, some escape and others are confiscated by the state department of fisheries and wildlife, with many turned over to Ralbovsky's company. Ralbovsky estimates about half of the "couple hundred animals of 50-60 different species" came to Rainforest Reptile Shows through confiscations.

"We have the largest collection of crocodilians in New England," boasts Ralbovsky. "Cranberry" is one of a dozen Monitor lizards, but the only Nile in Ralbovsky's group. "He's a beautiful animal," he said.

On Wednesday, "Cranberry" shared the show with a giant tortoise, an American and a Chinese alligator, and a rare Argentinean boa, the most endangered of all the world's boa constrictors. His schedule will be a busy one, but Ralbovsky said the lizard will work a few days and then rest a few days. "We don't ever stress an animal."

Should his attitude change or should he become less docile or grow too big for Rainforest Reptile Shows to handle, "Cranberry will be turned over to a zoo or a facility where he'll be taken care of," Ralbovsky said.

OBITUARIES

Peter A. Sullivan

Peter A. Sullivan, 33, of Marshfield formerly of Hingham, an engineer, died July 29, 2003, at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

Born in Bethesda, Md., Mr. Sullivan grew up in Hingham and graduated from Hingham High School. He also graduated from Tulane University in New Orleans with a bachelor's degree in engineering.

He was employed for 11 years by Promethian in New Hampshire.

Mr. Sullivan enjoyed scuba diving and was an avid fisherman and devoted father.

He leaves his wife, Christine (McGannon) Sullivan; two children, Joshua and Kelly Sullivan of Marshfield; his father, Albert Sullivan MD of Cohasset; his mother, Marjorie (Nichols) Sullivan of Hull; a sister, Denise Brown of West Chester, Pa.; nephews and nieces, Peyton and Troy Brown and Henry McGannon; and many aunts, uncles and cousins. He was brother of the late Christopher Sullivan.

A funeral service was held at First Baptist Church in Hingham. Interment was private.

Arrangements were by the F.n. Keohane Funeral Home in Hingham.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to the Sullivan Children's Fund, c/o Hingham Institution for Savings, Main Street, Hingham, 02043.

Alberta Whitcomb

Alberta (Gillette) Whitcomb, 78, died Saturday in Alexandria, Va. of pneumonia and a heart ailment.

Born in Duluth, Minn., she was the daughter of Albert C. and Annie W. Gillette. She was educated in Minnesota and Florida schools and graduated from the Madeira School. She then attended the Parsons School of Design in New York.

She married the late Robert B. Whitcomb in 1943, and following the war, they moved to Cohasset where she was a well-known painter who displayed her work in numerous shows and was a member of many civic and social organizations. From 1969 to her husband's death in 1975, the couple lived in a wooded retreat on a pond in Norwell.

In 1975, Mrs. Whitcomb moved to Georgetown and in 1998, to Virginia.

She leaves her three daughters, Margaret Bandery of Annandale, Va., Anne Jacob of Manchester, N.H. and Jane B. Whitcomb of Freehold, Va.; her two sons, Robert B. Whitcomb of Providence and David M. Whitcomb of Saugatuck, Mich.; her six grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Interment was private.

Funeral arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Cohasset.

Joseph M. McMath

Joseph M. McMath, Jr. 81, of Scituate, owner of Cohasset Limousine & Taxi Service from 1980 to 2000, died July 11, 2003, at Life Care Center of the South Shore in Scituate after a long illness.

Mr. McMath also was a bartender 35 years for Arthur Roebuck Catering.

He was a Navy veteran and served in the Navy reserves.

Mr. McMath was born, raised and educated in Somerville.

He leaves his wife, Aurora (Cordo) McMath; five daughters, Theresa Colby, Elizabeth Steverman and Kathleen Field, all of Scituate, Linda Daley of Norwell and Donna Bagni of Pembroke; two sons, Michael McMath of Connecticut and Dennis McMath of Marshfield; a sister, Phyllis Curran of East Boston, 13 grandchildren and a great-grandson.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Mary of the Nativity Church, Scituate.

Interment was in the Massachusetts National Cemetery in Bourne.

Arrangements were handled by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Donations may be made to St. Mary of the Nativity Church, 1 Kent St., Scituate Harbor 02066.

Flag depository at American Legion

The American Legion, George H. Mealy Post 118 in Cohasset has a way for the public to be able to bring them their tattered and worn flags so they may be properly and ceremoniously destroyed. The Flag Depository, located in front of the legion post at 98 Summer St., has the look and shape of an American flag. This solid metal Flag Depository protects the flags until they are removed for storage and kept until the time of the desecration ceremony. The Herb Chambers Automobile Dealerships made this service possible through a donation to the post. Everyone is invited to bring his or her retired flags to the depository.

The Flag Depository, located in front of the legion post at 98 Summer St., has the look and shape of an American flag.

All-Scholastic boys lacrosse team

Cohasset's Davis, Durkin, Kahn and Spirito named among area's elite

Cohasset's Curt Kahn (#11) finished his sensational career with 227 points and two Mariner All-Scholastic selections.

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

Several of the young men you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

In the end, however, we limited ourselves to a team of just 21 and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top male lacrosse players in Marinerland for this honor:

Curt Kahn - Senior Attack - Cohasset

Curt Kahn

The lefty sniper became the first CHS player to ever post back-to-back 50-plus goal seasons and finished his high school career with 227 career points...with 52 goals and 32 assists, was the top scorer on a Skippers team that posted a school best 16-game winning streak, and finished 16-2 overall, including a loss in the state finals to Ipswich...scored three goals with less than five minutes to play to break open a 7-7 tie versus Scituate...had four goals and two assists in 11-10 win over Sandwich, and created the winning goal in this game when he intercepted a goalie clear with only seconds left in the game...had six goals vs Hopkinton (a 12-5 win), and four (of team's six) vs. Ipswich in the state semis....Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic...two-time Mariner All-Scholastic...two-time member of Bay State Games gold medal winning lacrosse team...National Honors Society member...President of his senior class...also a three-year varsity soccer player who moved from forward to starting goalie this past season, and helped lead team to sectional semifinals...was named soccer team MVP and a Mariner All-Scholastic Honorable Mention...for has been recruited to play lacrosse at Trinity College in Hartford, Conn. next year...brother Eli played lacrosse at Harvard and sister Jaclyn plays soccer at Swathmore College...Cohasset coach Kevin Orcutt: "Curt is just so talented. He could be just about as good as he wants to be. He's worked hard on his game. When Matt (Davis) got hurt this year, he stepped it up quite a bit."

Matt Davis - Senior
Midfield - Cohasset

Matt Davis

Cohasset coach Kevin Orcutt feels his team might well have won a state championship if Davis had not been lost mid-season to a broken collarbone...ended his senior season with 33 points (20 goals, 13 assists) in nine games and his career with over 120 points...also named a Mariner All-Scholastic as a junior, which he finished with 24 goals and 28 assists...a fine athlete and gritty competitor...excellent two-way performer...two-time member of Bay State Games gold medal winning lacrosse team... also stood out in hockey and football at CHS...named a Mariner All-Scholastic for hockey, finishing with 15 goals and 19 assists to help lead the Skippers to their second straight league title...won Norm Delaney Student Athlete Award for having hockey team's top GPA...National Honors Society member who achieved a grade point average of 3.6 in his senior year ...was recruited by several schools with nationally regarded lacrosse programs, but chose to attend Ursinus College (Penn) and play Div. 3 lacrosse...plans to major in Biology, casting an eye toward studying medicine as a post graduate...Cohasset coach Kevin Orcutt: "Honestly, I think Matt was one of the best players in the state. In terms of talent, athleticism, desire, work ethic and the ability to blend scoring, passing and physical play, I'd put him right up there with just about any high school player I've seen."

Building from the ground up

SHS gridders lend hand to youth football hopefuls

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Arguably, there is no sports program required to be constructed from the ground up to the same degree as football.

This is precisely why it is not surprising to see hard-driving third year Scituate High head football coach Steve Maguire stepping up his involvement with the town's youth football program this summer. Maguire, his entire coaching staff and many of his returning players are presently conducting a five week long football camp on Tuesday nights at SHS for all interested players in the Scituate-Cohasset Youth Football program.

"I think it's important I think that we get all the football players in the town on the same page," said Maguire, a former Burlington High star quarterback. "This is how you start to build a football program."

Many of the drills Maguire and staff will run at the camp are the same ones the high school team uses, though a few will be watered down somewhat.

"It's an introduction to our system, and an introduction to

Ben's dream takes shape

Training regimen helps former CHS grid star realize dream of playing college football

By Mike Spellman

Ben Lynner knew it was make or break time. As he looked ahead last summer to his senior year at Cohasset High, Ben realized his dream of playing college football could be slipping away and made the decision to do everything he could to fight for it.

Through his sophomore and junior years, Ben was recognized as one of the more natural and versatile athletes at CHS — playing key roles on the varsity football, basketball and lacrosse teams – but perhaps not collegiate caliber in any of them.

Post 118's Gulinello eyes opportunities to play baseball at the next level

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

It was not unusual for Scott Arnold to get a knock on his door early in the afternoon these last few summers on game day.

When he heard the rapping and walked to the door, it got to the point that the veteran Cohasset Post 118 Legion coach came to expect to see star shortstop Mike Gulinello (pronounced Jewel-inello) standing there with a few buddies, asking if he could borrow the equipment bag in order to take a few extra hours of batting and infield practice.

During the dog days of summer, Arnold sometimes had a tough time convincing some of his players to take the time even to loosen up properly prior to game action. Obviously, that was the least of his concerns with Gulinello, who completed his third and final season with the Post 118 team last week, batting a robust .350 for the season to go along with team bests in RBI (20) and stolen bases (18) and his first ever home run over the fence at Scituate High School.

"Mike is one of those kids who just lives and breathes baseball," said Arnold. "He has a ball playing. He's always looking to get better."

And now this work ethic and commitment is beginning to pay dividends for the 2002 Scituate High graduate.

Mike has been recruited by a few area colleges for baseball, ticularly after star middie Matt Davis was lost to a broken collarbone...plays much tougher and stronger than his slender 5-foot-9 frame might imply...finished with 29 goals and 13 assists...had five goals and 10 assists as a junior, his first year of high school lacrosse...an exceptionally quick and fluid athlete...season highlights included a phenomenal two-way effort in Skippers first win over arch-rival Hingham in many years, a four goals-three assist outing against Canton and a hat trick vs. Norwell...also a Mariner All-Scholastic hockey player...led South Shore League in scoring this winter with 42 points (22 goals, 20 assists) to pace the Skippers to a 10-6-4 record and a second straight SSL championship...also a standout wideout and defensive back for the CHS football team...will try to improve college prospects by prepping a year at Pomfret Academy, where he'll play lacrosse and hockey...Cohasset coach Kevin Orcutt: "John really came out of nowhere to play a huge role with us this year. He was huge after Matt (Davis) got hurt. He just never wanted to come off the field, and, to be honest, it was tough a lot of times to take him off the field. It seemed like he could run all day and never let up."

Nick Spirito - Senior (Capt.)
Defense - Cohasset

Nick Spiritto

Nick has made himself into a top flight lacrosse player through a strong year-round dedication to the sport...lauded as one of the toughest defenders in the state...the only Cohasset player ever chosen to play in consecutive Eastern Mass. All-Star games...two-time Mariner All-Scholastic...two-time member of Bay State Games gold medal winning lacrosse team...Pilgrim Conference All-Star...a top face-off man...almost always assigned to cover top opposing scorer...was assigned straight up on Marshfield scoring star Pete Collins in Skippers win that saw Rams score just two times through three quarters...had a pair of assists this season...a four year starter...played high school football in his senior year after playing soccer the three previous falls...coaches youth lacrosse...Honor Roll student this past semester...has been recruited to play for Nazareth College (Rochester, N.Y.), a top Div. 3 lacrosse school...leaning toward majoring in Business...Cohasset coach Kevin Orcutt: "Nick got a little overshadowed sometimes by flashier players, but he was one of the toughest defenders in this league, no doubt about it, and he was a great leader."

Todd Faiella - Junior
Goalie - Marshfield

Todd Faiella

No question here...This All-American goaltender was rarely scored upon this season, boasting a 66.4 save percentage and 5.4 goals against average...His work in the net helped land Marshfield (17-4) in the Div. 2 Eastern Mass. Finals, where they lost to eventual state champs, Needham...Faiella allowed only 16 goals in three tourney games...Shut out two-time Div. 2 state champs Hingham (7-0) and came up big in a 10-9 OT win over Div. 1 power, Braintree...Aggressiveness is one of his greatest assets, often coming out of the crease to take away scoring opportunities...Quick hands and great anticipation gave him the advantage in one-on-ones...Also had the ability to clear the ball almost the entire length of the field...Was named the defensive MVP at the Top Gun Fighting Clams Summer Camp in Maryland...Also an All-star linebacker on the MHS football team, Faiella will return to captain both squads next season. Marshfield coach Nate Balboni: "At the camp were about 70 of the best programs in the country and the coaches said Fai was the best they'd ever seen. Inside the net, he's very poised, but he's also very aggressive and doesn't have a problem coming out to intercept a pass. He's not shy about issuing a hit either. Just a great athlete."

Pete Collins - Senior
Attack - Marshfield

Pete Collins

One of the main reasons why the Rams reached the Div. 2 Eastern Mass. Final this season was Collins' grace under pressure, scoring several late-game goals in comeback wins over Wellesley and Winchester, drilling the game-winner in a 7-6 rally win in the Div. 2 Eastern Mass. semis...Led the team in scoring, netting 80 points this season for Marshfield (17-4)...Bigger than your average lax player, Collins' extra muscle and aggressiveness made him a force in front of the net...Scored a hat trick in the team's heartbreaking loss to Needham in the Eastern Mass. Final...Collins plans to attend Mary Washington College and continue his lacrosse career. Marshfield coach Nate Balboni: "He was the heart of our offense. He didn't play that quick, dodge style, rather he was a crease man. He's a big, strong kid and was tough to move off the ball. He has great field sense and is just one of those hard working guys."

Shea Coakley -
Senior (Capt.)
Attack - Marshfield

Shea Coakley

A two-time All-Scholastic, Coakley enjoyed another solid offensive season for the Cinderella Rams team (17-4)...Not too aggressive, Coakley's style helped pace the offense to look for the best play as opposed to the quickest...Was the second leading scorer on the Marshfield squad, netting 70 points this season...His work in the offensive end helped land the Rams in the Div. 2 Eastern Mass. final, where the fell to eventual state champs, Needham...Coakley scored a hat trick in the team's 7-6 rally win over Winchester in the Eastern Mass. semis, two of which came in the second half...He also scored a crucial tying goal in the team's quarterfinal victory over Wellesley...Coakley plans to attend Mary Washington College where he will continue his lacrosse career. Marshfield coach Nate Balboni: "He's a very disciplined offensive player. In the past, we've tried to push the ball to the net, but the most important thing Shea did was pace the offense with great ball control. He didn't force the play."

Steve Curtis - Junior
Defenseman - Marshfield

Talk about peaking at exactly the right time, Curtis' confidence defensively helped shut down some of the area's best attackers in the Rams' (17-4) memorable tourney run...Most notably in the Div. 2 Eastern Mass. semifinals, Curtis put a strangle-hold on Winchester's Brad Khuen, who scored a first-half hat trick, but was held scoreless in the second half resulting in a 7-6 win...His play was equally admirable in the team's heartbreaking loss to eventual state champs Needham in the Eastern Mass. final, doing his best to contain All-American Matt Chadwick...Was the team's leader in ground ball pickups...An undeniable long stick presence in the backfield, Curtis more than made the most of his 6-foot, 4-inch frame...Was voted the team MVP at the Top Gun Fighting Clams Summer Camp, which featured 70 of the country's best lax programs...He will return to captain the MHS squad next season. Marshfield coach Nate Balboni: "He's one of the best athletes on this team. He plays a very smart defensive game. He's not overly aggressive or physical but has great field sense. He's a very coachable kid."

Drew Sowyrda - Senior Attack - Hingham

Drew Sowyrda

A two-year starter on the Hingham squad, Sowyrda played a crucial role on the Harbormen's two-time Div. 2 state championship teams (2001, 2002)...Sowyrda helped pace Hingham in this year's Div. 2 Eastern Mass. tourney, netting five goals in a tough semifinal loss to Needham, the eventual state champs...Sowyrda led a well-balanced offense in scoring this season with an estimated 40 points (around 28 of which were goals)...A great cutter in front of the net, Sowyrda more than made the most of his 6'2" frame...Also a captain on the HHS basketball squad, Sowyrda plans to attend the University of Colorado at Boulder where he will play club lacrosse. Hingham coach John Todd: "He's a big, strong kid and is a great finisher. His fluidity in front of the net comes from his basketball background, as far as hand/eye coordination and lateral movement."

John Ferrante - Senior
Defenseman - Hingham

Referred to by his coach as being the "Total Package", Ferrante played several roles for Hingham this season...Ferrante played every position but goalie in games this season, making him the team's own utility man...Where he fit best, however, was in the defensive midfield where his strength and persistence frustrated some of the area's best attackers...Ferrante also took several face-offs, most of which came down the stretch and helped the Harbormen land in the Div. 2 Eastern Mass. semifinals...There, he took a hard hit in a game against Needham, but quickly returned to play...A two-year starter, Ferrante was a member of Hingham's state title teams in 2001 and 2002...Also a talented wrestler at HHS, Ferrante plans to attend . Hingham coach John Todd: "He's they type of athlete you love to have because he can do anything. We had him do everything from short-stick defender to manups and we never worried about missing a beat. His reliability on the field was astronomical. He's impossible to replace."

Ben Prime - Senior (Capt.)
Attack - Hingham

Perhaps better known for his soccer skills, Prime was certainly no slouch on the lacrosse field...A three-year starter on the Harbormen squad, this speedy attackman has been among the leading scorers the last three seasons...

Ben Prime

Prime tallied about 30 points this season, second on a well-balanced offensive attack that prides itself on getting goals from a variety of players...Scored the biggest goal of his career in his junior season, netting the game-tying score in the state title game against Winchester, pushing the contest to OT and an eventual victory...He was also a member of the 2001 state title team...Also a multiple soccer All-Scholastic, Prime plans to attend Deerfield Academy in the fall. Hingham coach John Todd: "His ability to change directions is unbelievable and it made it difficult for defenders to stick with him. His speed and quickness made him a dominant player in soccer and lacrosse. He has a great work ethic and is extremely dedicated. He'll go down as one of the best."

Derek Losi - Senior (Capt.)
Midfielder - Weymouth

Derek Losi

A solid contributor to both the offensive and defensive midfields, Losi's presence on the field was undeniable... His play helped lead Weymouth to a respectable finish in the competitive Bay State League and to the Div. 1 South Sectional tourney...Losi played key roles in the Wildcats' regular-season victories over Div. 2 Eastern Mass. semifinalist, Winchester (10-4), as well as Div. 2 state champs, Needham (10-9)...Also a soccer All-Scholastic and first-team BSC All-star, Losi plans to attend Babson College where he will continue his soccer career.

Matt Murray - Junior Attacker - Weymouth

One of the older players on Weymouth's young attack, Murray was a natural leader...The Bay State Carey first-team All-star was the Wildcats' leading goal scorer this season with 50...Quick and aggressive on a break, Murray was a tough player for opposing defenses to stop... Scored a hat trick in a 10-4 victory over Eastern Mass. semifinalist Winchester and also played well in a 10-9 win over Div. 2 state champs, Needham...Murray took part in a productive summer in which he played for the Southeast team in the Bay State Summer Games and tallied 9 goals, 1 assist en route to a silver medal...Also a football player at WHS, Murray will return to both squads next season.

Brendan Mulligan - Junior
Defenseman - Hanover

A standout player on the five-year-old Hanover lacrosse squad, Mulligan's play has been praised by several area coaches...A Pilgrim Conference All-star, Mulligan always drew the task of defending the opposing team's best player and did it well...Not exactly the biggest kid on the field, Mulligan's long stick defensive skills, quickness and field sense make him a tough player to beat...An Honorable Mention to the All-Scholastic squad, Mulligan is making his first appearance on our team...Spent the summer participating in lacrosse camps...Mulligan will return to captain the HHS lax squad next season.

Ryan Grant - Senior (Capt.)
Attack - Braintree

Ryan Grant

Top scorer on 19-3 Wamp team that surprised many by making it to the state Div. 1 semifinals in its third year as a varsity program...a gifted athlete who finished his three year lacrosse career with 264 points, including 117 this season (90 goals, 27 assists)...much stronger and quicker than 5-foot-9, 140 pound frame might suggest...instincts, along with soft hands and quick wrists set him apart...three time Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic...three-time Bay State Conference all-star and two-time first team All Eastern Mass selection...also a Mariner All-Scholastic hockey player this past year, as he led the 9-7-4 BHS squad in scoring this season and finished his hockey career with over 150 points...a solid B student...member of SADD...teaches youth lacrosse and youth hockey...will try to improve college prospects by attending a prep school this year and play both hockey and lacrosse...has choice narrowed down to Kent Hill or Brewster Academy...five-time Patriot Ledger all-scholastic, three times for lacrosse, twice for hockey...Braintree coach Andrew Curran: "Ryan just has a knack for scoring that you can't teach. You saw it in hockey too. He's in the right place at the right time, and he's just so smart and instinctive. His hands are incredible. He catches the ball anywhere near the cage, and that shot is off in a heartbeat, and usually right on net."

Pat Lynch - Senior (Capt.)
Attack - Braintree

Pat Lynch

Though sometimes overshadowed by Ryan Grant and All-American Mike Aylward, Lynch certainly did more than his share for the state semifinalist Wamp team (19-3)...finished season with 105 points (68 goals, 37 assists)...first team Bay State Conference All-Star...first team

Nick Spirito (#2) made himself into one of the top defenders in the state through a strong year-round dedication to lacrosse.

Eastern Mass all-star…Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic…a very well rounded and mature player…also a standout basketball player at BHS…got to play both varsity lacrosse and basketball this year with younger brother Matthew and cousin (and fellow all-scholastic) Tim Lynch…an excellent student who graduated with a 3.5 GPA and in his class' top 10 percent…National Honors Society and Spanish National Honors Society member…earned a Dean's Scholarship from UNH…was recruited by a few college lacrosse programs, but chose to attend UNH and play club lacrosse…will major in Liberal Arts…Braintree coach Andrew Curran: "Pat was probably my best rounded attacker. He could score or dish and was very team oriented. He's a terrific athlete who got better every year. I think he's going to have an incredible amount of success at UNH."

Tim Lynch - Senior (Capt.)
Attack - Braintree

Natural athlete wound up quarterbacking one of the state's premier attacks, finishing with a team best 58 assists for the 19-3 state semifinalist Wamps…also had 36 goals to finish with 94 points…had 97 points as a junior…Bay State Conference All-Star…second team Eastern Mass selection…took naturally to the "point guard" role, carrying over several of the skills that made him a league all-star point guard for the BHS basketball team…an extremely tough-minded competitor…also a Mariner All-Scholastic for basketball and a very good golfer…will major in Business next year at the Isenberg School of Management at UMass-Amherst, where he also hopes to play Div. 1 collegiate lacrosse…Braintree coach Andrew Curran: "Tim plays lacrosse the same way he plays basketball: he thought assist first, goal second, and with the great scorers we had on this team, that was huge…He was a coach on the field. I always listened to him when he had suggestions."

Tim Lynch

Mike Aylward - Senior
Midfielder - Braintree

Arguably the top player on what turned out to be one of the state's top teams…the All-American is a self-made player…excellent two-way talent who finished the season with 45 goals and 41 assists, outstanding numbers for a midfielder…fell in love with lacrosse in junior high and devoted an incredible amount of energy into improving his game over the next several years…became the first BHS laxer to earn a Div. 1 athletic scholarship when he accepted Sienna's offer…will major in Business…a Boston Globe, Boston Herald and Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic selection…two-time Bay State Conference all-star…two-time Eastern Mass all-star… Honor Roll student the last two years…coaches youth lacrosse camps…also played football at BHS…Braintree coach Andrew Curran: "Mike is role model for anyone who wants to make it in lacrosse. He made himself into an All-American lacrosse player by going to every camp he could find and by just constantly working to improve."

Mike Aylward

Frank Granara - Junior
Midfield - Norwell

Though it was a difficult year for the Clippers, Frank enjoyed a breakthrough campaign…broke Norwell High's all-time scoring record with 71 points (39 goals, 32 assists), outstanding totals for a midfielder…a strong and fluid athlete with deceptive quickness…well-rounded lacrosse player…took most face-offs for the Clippers and won 75.2 percent of them…Pilgrim Conference All-Star…second team All Eastern Mass selection…also a standout football and basketball player for Norwell High…a Mariner All-Scholastic Honorable Mention in football last fall as a linebacker/wingback…has been named a football captain for 2003…High Honors student…Peer Educator…3.70 GPA…National Honor Society…would like to play college lacrosse, and is eyeing a few NESCAC schools…leaning toward majoring in Business… Norwell Coach Frank Granara, Sr.: "It's tough to talk about your own son, but Frankie really did have a very nice year. He's got nice quickness and he sees the field well and has a good shot. He's well rounded and he's improved his play defensively too."

Jason Grier - Senior (Capt.)
Midfield - Norwell

Now a four-time Mariner All-Scholastic selection (two times each for lacrosse and soccer)…was often a marked man for the Clippers this season, but still finished third in the team scoring race with over 40 points…an exceptional athlete with excellent instincts in the open field…second team All Eastern Mass selection…toyed for a while with the idea of playing two sports in college, but has now accepted a Div. 2 soccer scholarship from Franklin Pierce (N.H.) and will play that sport exclusively…High Honors…was also a top wrestler at NHS in his junior year…brother Adam (Class of 2002) is now playing lacrosse at Roger Williams…Norwell coach Frank Granara: "Jason is a real talented player and athlete. He's fast, he's strong and he can really shoot. If he'd stuck with lacrosse, I'm sure he'd have done quite well in college."

Jarrett Dawson - Senior (Capt.)
Midfield - Scituate

Graduates as the all-time leading scorer in the three year history of Scituate lacrosse…finished second on the team in scoring (to sophomore attacker Ben Brigham) with 16 goals and 18 assists despite playing both ends of the field and often being marked by the opponent's top defender in the offensive end…was the team's top face-off man…often played longstick defense in man-down situations…three year starter…Eastern Mass all-star-second team…played for Bay State Games gold medal southeast team in 2002…well rounded athlete…also two-year starter for SHS football team at split end and cornerback…Honor Roll student…will attend UMass-Amherst and may try out for the lacrosse team as a walk-on…undecided on a major, but is leaning toward Business…Scituate coach Chris Weber: "Jarrett did so many things to make us go. He was a good leader and played hard all the time even though he was a marked man most of the time. Other teams figured they contain him and they do a pretty good job containing us, and sometimes that's the way it turned out."

Cohasset swim team tops Marshfield Area Swim Klub

By Eileen McBride
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The last couple of weeks have been something of a challenge for Cohasset's swimmers. There was the confusion and disappointment at Eel River and then the false start/re-scheduling of the Knights of Columbus meet. But, on Friday afternoon, with the program back on track and the weather finally cooperating, it felt like Cohasset was ready to take on one of their most intimidating rivals, the MASK (Marshfield Area Swim Klub) squad.

Competition has always been fierce between these teams and margins have always been tight, but on this bright sunny afternoon, Cohasset was able to come up with the goods and pull off their fourth win of the season, finishing the afternoon with 349 points to Mask's 270.

The meet started well with wins for both the eight and under boys and girls in the 100 yard medley relay and for the ten and under boys and girls in their races (boys, eight and under: 1st: Fontaine; McCarthy; Adkins; Kissick; 3rd: Brown; Michalowski; Swain; Berube; 5th: Green; Doonan; MacCarthy; Rice; girls, eight and under: 1st: Farren; Carrier; Buckley; Teague; 5th: Malerti; Bodner; Zimmerman; McCunney; 6th: McGowan; Noble; Berube; Farren; boys, ten and under: 1st: Salerno; Durkin; Mahoney; Carrier; 2nd: Murphy; Leahy; McCormack; Kennedy; Murphy; Faber; Buckley; Durkin (DQ); girls, ten and under: 1st: Fontaine; Michalowski; Kissick; Donohue; 4th: Adkins; Seraikas; Karski; Farren; 5th: Kelly; Gibbons; Musto; Berube). The twelve and under boys were held to a second place finish, while the girls claimed another first (boys: 2nd: Connors; Porter; Doonan; Ofsthun; girls: 1st: Ryan; Lehr; Mahoney, C.; Meehan; 3rd: Mahoney; Sullivan; Meikleham; Lehr; 5th: Costa; Kelly; Buckley; Libby).

The medley relays rounded off with the 200 yard races and second, third and fifth place finishes for the seventeen and under boys, and second, fourth and sixth place finishes for the girls (boys: 2nd: Tehranian; Roach; Conway; Bilton; 3rd: Doonan; Zappolo; Drybanski; Hunt; 5th: Kuppens; Kelly; Shipp; MacCarthy; girls: 2nd: Hernan; Anderson; Garber; Durkin; 4th: Regan; Faber; Ogrodnik; Lehr; 6th: Teague; Fortin; Swain; Campbell). With the first event completed, Cohasset had accumulated 52 points to Mask's 44.

In the ten and under 50 yard freestyles, the boys put in an impressive performance to finish first, second and fourth (1st: Carrier, J.; 2nd: Salerno, J.; 4th: Buckley, T.) and the girls followed suit with first, fifth and sixth places (1st: Fontaine, E.; 5th: Adkins, O.; 6th: Murphy, O.).

The individual medleys were up next and the twelve and under boys started with second and fourth places, while the girls took second, fourth and sixth (boys: 2nd: Porter, I.; 4th: Ofsthun, C.; girls: 2nd: Meehan, S.; 4th: Meikleham, A.; 6th: Gibbons, L.). At the fourteen and under level the boys took a win and the girls finished second and fifth. The event finished with a win from Brian Bilton, at the seventeen and under level and a third and fourth place finish for the girls (boys fourteen and under: 1st: Drybanski, J.; 3rd: Zappolo, N.; 4th: Cunningham, C.; girls fourteen and under: 2nd: Garber, C.; 5th: Tehranian, R.; Teague, M – DQ; boys seventeen and under: 1st: Bilton, B.; girls seventeen and under: 3rd: Fortin, S.; 4th: Ogrodnik, M.; Harrington, B. – DQ). Going into the freestyle event, Cohasset was still holding on to an eight point lead.

The freestyles kicked off with great performances from the eight and under boys and girls, who won both their races (boys: 1st: Kissick, C.; 2nd: Michalowski, C.; 3rd: Swain, G.; girls: 1st: Buckley, M.; 3rd: Teague, M.; 5th: McCunney, K.). The ten and under boys and girls had similar success in their event, also securing first place finishes (boys: 1st: Durkin, T.; 2nd: Durkin, J.; 4th: Mahoney, R.; girls: 1st: Michalowski, A.; 3rd: Karski, E.; 6th: Donohue, M.).

At the 50 yard distance the twelve and under boys kept up the pace with a first place finish and the girls missed the win, but took second and third (boys: 1st: Connors, R.; 4th: Plante, J.; 5th: McCormack, T.; girls: 2nd: Meehan, S.; 3rd: Lehr, T.; 5th: Libby, S.). The fourteen and under boys also claimed second and third places and the girls finished second, fourth and fifth (boys: 2nd: Conway, C.; 3rd: Hunt, A.; 5th: Doonan, P.; girls: 2nd: Durkin, L.; 4th: Teague, M.; 5th: Previte, M.). The event rounded off with a win for the seventeen and under boys and second third and fourth place finishes for the girls (boys: 1st: Tehranian, K.; 3rd: Roach, K.; 5th: Musto, C.; girls: 2nd: Regan, D.; 3rd: Anderson, C.; 4th: Lehr, R.). Cohasset was now 26 points ahead of Mask.

In the butterfly the youngest team members once again did a great job, with second, third and fourth places for the boys and first, second and fourth for the girls (boys, eight and under: 2nd: Brown, M.; 3rd: Adkins, J.; 4th: Swain, G.; girls: 1st: Buckley, M.; 2nd: Teague, M.; 4th: Malerti, H.). The ten and under boys also claimed a win and although the girls were held to third, fifth and sixth places they still added another critical point to Cohasset's score (boys: 1st: Mahoney, R.; 2nd: Murphy, J.; 4th: Buckley, T.; girls: 3rd: Kissick, H.; 5th: Musto, E.; 6th: Karski, E.). In the final 25 yard races Cohasset dominated once again, with wins for both the boys and girls at the twelve and under level (boys: 1st: Doonan, B.; 5th: Queenan, C.; girls: 1st: Mahoney, C.; 4th: Ryan, K.; 5th: Baumgarten, E.).

In the 50 yard butterflies the fourteen and under boys started well with first, third and fourth place finishes, and the girls just missed the win to finish, second and third (boys: 1st: Conway, C.; 3rd: Cunningham, C.; 4th: Shipp, A.; girls: 2nd: Garber, C.; 3rd: Swain, K.; Tehranian, R.; DQ).

Ben Rice, of the Cohasset Swim Team, checks his goggles as he climbs onto the block for his race at recent swim meet.

The seventeen and under boys took second place and the girls finished second and third (boys: 2nd: Tehranian, K.; girls: 2nd: Ogrodnik, M.; 3rd: Harrington, B.). Now, just over half way through the meet, Cohasset had 188 points to Mask's 150.

The breaststroke was up next and the eight and unders got going with second, third and fifth places for the boys and second, fourth and fifth places for the girls (boys: 1st: Leahy, S.; 2nd: Durkin, T.; 5th: Faber, J.; girls: 1st: Michalowski, A.; 2nd: Kissick, H.; 5th: Farren, A.).

At the 50 yard level, the twelve and under boys just missed the win, but took second, third and fifth places, while the girls finished first in their race (boys: 2nd: Porter, I.; 3rd: Queenan, C.; 5th: McCormack, T.; girls: 1st: Lehr, S.; 3rd: Kelly, M.; 5th: Sullivan, O.). The fourteen and unders followed a similar pattern with second, third and sixth places for the boys and a first for the girls (boys: 2nd: Hunt, A.; 3rd: Zappolo, N.; 5th: Musto, C.; girls: 1st: Durkin, L.; 5th: Fortin, S.; 6th: Anderson, M.). And the seventeen and unders again followed suit with second and third places for the boys and first, third and fifth for the girls (boys: 2nd: Roach, K.; 3rd: Kelly, T.; 4th: Gammon, B.; girls: 1st: Anderson, C.; 3rd: Faber, A.; 5th: James, K.). It was clearly a winning formula, because Cohasset now had a 47 point lead.

The backstroke was the final individual event of the afternoon, and the eight and under boys and girls got things started with wins in both their races (boys: 1st: Fontaine, A.; 2nd: Brown, M.; 3rd: Adkins, J.; girls: 1st: Bodner, K.; 3rd: McCunney, K.; 4th: Farren, N.). The ten and unders were right there with them, again claiming first place in each of their races (boys: 1st: Carrier, J.; 2nd: Murphy, J.; 3rd: Salerno, J.; girls: 1st: Fontaine, E.; 4th: Musto, E.; 5th: Murphy, O.).

In the 50 yard event, the twelve and under boys just missed the win, finishing second, third and sixth, while the girls claimed second, third and fourth places (boys: 2nd: Doonan, B.; 3rd: Connors, R.; 6th: Plante, J.; girls: 2nd: Ryan, K.; 3rd: Mahoney, M.; 4th: Costa, A.). The fourteen and under boys and girls pushed ahead to win both their races and the seventeen and under boys also claimed a first (boys, fourteen and under: 1st: Drybanski, J.; 4th: Doonan, P.; 5th: Kuppens, C.; girls, fourteen and under: 1st: Hernan, E.; 5th: Regan, M.; 6th: Plante, V.; boys, seventeen and under: 1st: Bilton, B.). The final individual event finished with second, fourth and fifth place finishes for the seventeen and under girls (2nd: Regan, D.; 4th: Harrington, B.; 5th: Lehr, R.). Going into the final event of the afternoon, Cohasset had established a sixty point lead.

The free relays are always a high point of the meet and Friday's were no exception. Mask swimmers' are enormously competitive and well prepared and each race becomes a high stake competition in the final countdown of the afternoon.

The 100 yard races were first up and the home team won five out of six of these races. The eight and under boys stormed home in first, third and fifth places and the girls took first, third and fourth (boys: 1st: Swain; Adkins; Fontaine; Kissick; 3rd: McCarthy; Brown; Berube; Michalowski; 5th: Doonan; Lund; Rice; MacCarthy; girls: 1st: Farren, N.; Carrier; Buckley; Teague; 3rd: McCunney; Noble; Malerti; Bodner; 4th: Chase; McGowan; Axelson; Farren, V.). The ten and under boys built on the success of their younger team mates to take first, second and fourth and the girls were right with them in first, third and fifth (boys: 1st: Durkin, T.; Salerno; Mahoney; Carrier; 2nd: Buckley; Faber; Leahy; Durkin, J.; 4th: Carpenter; Kennedy; McCormack; Pratt; girls: 1st: Fontaine; Donohue; Kissick; Michalowski; 3rd: Adkins; Murphy; Farren; Karski; 5th: Axelson; Caron; Haber; Kucinski). End of Season Celebrations for Cohasset Swim Team

SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Cohasset Swim Team celebrated another successful summer season last Friday with their Awards Ceremony and ice cream party.

In a summer of thunderstorms and interrupted meets, Cohasset managed to win six out of seven competitions, and are heading into the Championships with high hopes for a repeat of last year's success.

The season started with substantial wins against Hanover's Sharks and Duxbury Yacht Club, with margins of 260 and 187 points. The third meet turned out to be something of an aberration in the record of a team that has consistently beaten some of the best competitors in the South Shore League.

Swimming against Eel River, Cohasset dropped behind early in the meet and were denied the possibility of a rally when rain stopped play, precisely at the half way point. Discussions followed, rule books were consulted and, a week later, the meet was called and Cohasset had to accept the defeat.

But morale remained high and, with encouragement and instruction from Ted Hughes and his coaching team, Cohasset was back on course the following week with comfortable wins against the powerful Knights of Columbus and Mask squads. The season finished with two further conclusive wins against the newly emerged Kingsbury Club and Scituate Harbor Yacht Club.

Cohasset's Wes Ulmer gets set to hit the water.

On Friday, Cohasset will send its starting line up to the South Shore Championships at the Duxbury Yacht Club, and, Eel River or no Eel River, there is a strong feeling that they have an excellent chance of bringing home another victory. Anyone wanting to see some terrific swimming by the fine youth on the South Shore should come on Friday morning. The swimming is finished with a 1:00 PM start to the spectacular diving championships.

Thanks should go out to all the individuals involved in making Cohasset Swim Team such a successful endeavor. The coaches, Ted Hughes, Casey Anderson and Blake Worrall, have done a great job in their first season without Alison Hughes' strong leadership. The Steering Committee members have successfully coordinated the efforts of more than fifty volunteers, over seven competitions. And the volunteers themselves have coped with the demands of judging places, distributing ribbons, keeping score, running concessions and managing unruly groups of random children who need to be at the block in the right heat and at the right time.

But the stand outs, as always, are the more than one hundred and sixty children who come to practice four times a week, who climb up on those scary blocks and "take their places" with such focus, who shiver in the rain, swim alone on the fourth heat of their most detested stroke, finish the race in the full knowledge that they have already been lapped, and always, always end the meet by cheering the other team. Thanks to them for a great season.

and appears to have settled for now on Massasoit, which has one of the premier junior college programs in the country. His plan right now is to attend the Brockton school for one year, and then transfer to a four-year college. The UMass-Dartmouth coach, for one, has expressed a good deal of interest.

Of course, if a pro baseball offer should come along, that plan could be altered. Mike recently flashed his wares at an open tryout for the Philadelphia Phillies in Lowell, and he's also had a phone call from the Brockton Rox expressing interest.

"It's pretty exciting that I'm getting some opportunities," said Gulinello, who is leaning toward a major in Media Arts. "Whichever way it goes, I'll be playing baseball, and that's the big thing for me."

Mike was the starting third baseman and fixture in the middle of the batting order for the 2002 Scituate High team that advanced to the sectional finals of the Div. 2 state tourney. He held down the same responsibilities with the Post 118 team that made it to the second round of the state Legion championships a few months later, falling there to eventual state champ Sandwich.

A star shortstop right up through the youth baseball ranks, Mike was moved to third as a senior at SHS, with fellow seniors Jason Connelly and Jesse Cole (both now playing college baseball at Western New England and Wofford College, respectively) flip-flopping between shortstop and pitcher. This provided the Sailors with one of the "best left sides of the infield in the state", according to SHS coach Kevin Greer.

"Mike was also a big-time clutch hitter for us, and he might have been our best hitter down the stretch that season," added Greer of the Mariner All-Scholastic-Honorable Mention selection.

Mike moved back to the more familiar shortstop position this summer for Post 118, and provided coach Arnold with everything he expected defensively and more.

"Mike made the sensational plays and the routine plays for us," said Arnold. "He was our rock in the infield, no doubt about that."

Coach Arnold pretty much echoed those sentiments when the subject turned to Mike's off the field contributions.

"Mike and Brian were our leaders, and they'll definitely be missed," said Arnold of Gulinello and his fellow final year player Brian Woods. "They were never named captains. I usually don't name captains. They just took up the responsibility. I believe that natural leaders aren't named; they emerge to lead, and that's just what Mike and Brian did."

Of course, the extremely young Post 118 team struggled this season, finishing well off the 2002 pace with a 5-15 record. However, for Gulinello, whose been working over the last year trying to earn money for college and just playing pickup ball wherever and whenever he could, the season reaffirmed his love of the game and opened a few doors for him to play it at the next level.

"I loved getting back into the swing of things, playing competitive baseball," said Gulinello. "It really made me want to keep playing. Hopefully, I'll make the most of my opportunities."

Coach Arnold, for one, feels certain he'll do just that.

"Mike is a baby to the game in a lot of ways," said the longtime Post 118 coach who's seen many ex-players move on to play college and pro ball. "He has loads of untapped potential and he never gets tired of playing the game. Put him in the right situation, and I think you'll see him really blossom as a player."

us too, personally," continued Maguire, 29. "This gives us a chance to meet the kids and them a chance to meet us. Hopefully, we'll help keep the kids wanting to play football and play football for us."

This camp also serves as a nice tune-up for the Scituate-Cohasset Youth Football season, with official workouts beginning next month.

Scituate High cheerleaders coach Tara Powers is also running a cheerleading camp in conjunction with coach McGuire's camp.

Maguire actually started the camp last year and had 83 grid hopefuls. The overall number is down to 67 this year, which the SHS coach writes off to a greater number of summer baseball programs in Cohasset and Scituate this year. Still, he sounds pleased with the caliber of talent he's seen.

A few of last year's campers will be entering Scituate High as freshman this year, and coach M is clearly looking forward to getting them on the field.

"We're establishing a continuity here," offered Maguire. "You only have so much team to get kids ready for the football season. These kids who have worked with us in camp should be able to hit the ground running a little bit faster than kids have the last few years."

Maguire also feels his returning players will benefit from familiarity with the system. The Sailors finished with a record of 4-6-1 last fall, ending a streak of three consecutive .500 seasons. From the tone of his remarks, though, it would appear he's expecting to start a new streak.

"Our guys have been working hard in the off season, and I really think it's night and day in a lot of ways between what we had last year," said Magurie. "Our seniors appear to be extremely committed to the program, and the underclassmen are falling in line with that."

Football had always been Ben's favorite sport, and the one he was determined to play at the next level. He was a league all-star defensive end for the Skippers as a junior. However, at 6-feet tall and 230-pounds, he was simply not big enough to play that position in college. He realized his best shot at playing college ball was to move back to linebacker, but for that to become a reality he knew he must become quicker and better conditioned.

"I love football, and I hated the thought of it all just ending with my final high school game," he said. "To play in college, though, I knew there were some areas I'd really need to work on."

It wasn't that Ben was not in decent shape. He carried his weight well on the football field at 230-pounds, but the difference between high school defensive end and college linebacker is like night and day when it comes to requirements of endurance and quickness.

"I needed to turn some of my body fat into muscle, and I needed to get lighter on my feet," noted Lynner matter-of-factly. "I really started working hard on that near the end of my junior year, and I keep working hard on it, running and lifting weight just about every day, and I feel pretty good right now."

And he looks pretty good too. To put it plainly, he doesn't even look like the same person he did a year ago when you see him in shorts and a tank top. Ben's once slightly rolly-polly 6-foot frame is now a chiseled 215 pound block of granite.

The commitment to a personal improvement began when Ben signed on with personal trainer Joe Hayes — a former Scituate High football and track superstar who now owns and operates Hayes Sports Performance in Cohasset Village — following the course traveled by 2002 CHS star Jason Brown, a sophomore gridder to be at St. Anselms. The exercise regimen, as it turned out, was only half of the body makeover formula.

"Joe Hayes really showed me so many things I needed to do better or differently," said Ben. "He showed me a few non-traditional ways of lifting weights that really worked out for me, and a lot of other things like how often to run and eating habits."

Ben, who now works out at Fitness First in Cohasset, continues to employ these training methods and approaches on a daily basis

No doubt, these are habits that should help ensure a better quality of life for Ben for many years to come. For now, though, Lynner is more appreciative of the immediate payoff: the realization of his dream to play college football.

Coming off a second consecutive South Shore League all-star season this past fall, Lynner drew a good deal of interest from several colleges with Div. 2 and 3 football program, among them Springfield, Western New England, Norwich and St. Anselms.

He wound up electing to travel a little further, though, as he chose Ohio-Wesleyan University in Delaware, Ohio. The choice was made, he noted, in deference to academic considerations. Of course, it also didn't hurt that both of his parents attended OWU.

"It just seemed like a good fit for me, athletically and academically," explained Ben, who is leaning toward a major in Business. "My parents both had good things to say about the school, and it looks like they play good football out there."

Ben concedes he may still be a little on the small side to play college linebacker, even at the D3 level, but figures he should be able to add another 10-15 pounds of muscle over the next several months without losing speed or quickness.

"I'm thinking I might not play much as a freshman, but maybe I'll get a shot at some special teams play, and then maybe build on that," he said. "If I keep working hard in the weight room, and get a little stronger and a little bigger, like I think I should, hopefully I'll get a chance to do more and more."

One dream at a time, though. Ben Lynner has realized his first one, the big one: he's playing college football. This puts him ahead of most who ever shared this dream.

under level, the boys just missed the win, but secured second place while the girls bounced back with first, third and fifth places (boys: 2nd: Porter; Ofsthun; Connors; Doonan; girls: 1st: Ryan; Lehr, S.; Mahoney, C.; Meehan; 3rd: Meikleham; Libby; Lehr, T.; Mahoney, M.; 5th: Dickenson, R.; Dunn, B.; Masotta, A.; McBride, F.).

The event ended with the 200 yard relays and, in a tight finish, the seventeen and under boys headed home first and the girls took second, fifth and sixth (boys: 1st: Conway; Roach; Bilton; Tehranian; 3rd: Hunt; Doonan; Drybanski; Zappolo; 5th: Cunningham; Yeager; Gammon; MacCarthy; girls: 2nd: Durkin; Garber; Anderson; Hernan; 5th: Swain; Campbell; Regan; Previte; 6th: Harrington, B.; James; Plante; Harrington, K.).

The meet was finished and with a pause for the final calculation and checking of scores, Cohasset was declared the winner, with 349 points to Mask's 270. It was a conclusive win and a well deserved end to the disruption of the last two weeks.

Congratulations to all our swimmers on an impressive end to a very competitive meet and, of course, to the coaches, Ted, Casey and Blake, who are doing a great job preparing the team for these events.

American Legion raffles Vespa motor scooters

The George H. Mealy Post of the American Legion in Cohasset is sponsoring a most unusual raffle for the benefit of its Christine Burke scholarship fund. The lucky winner will drive away with two Vespa ET2 motor scooters or $5,000. The choice is theirs. The Vespa motor scooters have a retail value of $3,295 each. They don't require a special drivers license nor do they need to be registered. The winner may have their choice of any available colors. An anonymous friend of the Legion and Herb Chambers who, along with 25 automobile dealerships, owns Vespa of Boston donated the Vespa motor scooters. Chances for the raffle are $10 each and only 1,000 will be sold. They may be purchased at the Legion post at 98 Summer St. at 781-383-9657. The drawing will be held at the Legion's annual clambake on Sandy Beach on Sept. 6 or 7 (rain date). The Christine Burke scholarships are awarded to deserving high school seniors on the South Shore who are going on to a higher education. In 2003, $14,000 in scholarships were awarded.

Sunset at the Abbey concert is on Aug. 23

Hingham Symphony Chamber Players present An American Celebration, full of good old-fashioned summertime music, at their annual outdoor concert on the lawn at Glastonbury Abbey, Saturday, Aug. 23 at 4:30 pm.

Featured soloist is pianist Jacqueline Schwab, known for her piano improvisations on the soundtracks of Ken Burns' PBS documentaries. She will perform American parlor and traditional folk music from Mark Twain's age and beyond: Stephen Foster and Civil War songs, vintage ballroom dances, hymns and spirituals, ragtime, tango and blues ballads.

HSO Chamber Players, all principals with the symphony, include oboist Andrew Price, trumpeter Misha Grandel, and Jobey Wilson on tuba. Each will play a solo set of American classics, and combine for some jazzy improvs.

Bring a blanket or beach chair and a picnic; refreshments will also be available to purchase. In case of rain, the concert will be moved to picturesque First Parish Meeting House on Cohasset Common. Tickets $10 adults, $5 through age 18; available in advance at Hingham Public Library, Noble's Hingham Square, Cards & Shards, Cohasset, or call 781-740-5694. The concert is sponsored by Serono, Inc. in Rockland, a member of HSO's Corporate Advisory Council.

Skinner appraisal day at Lifesaving Museum

Do you have a family heirloom passed down through the generations? Maybe a great flea market find that might be a real treasure? Would you like to know what it is worth? Bring those special items you have been wondering about to the Skinner Antiques Appraisal Day at the Hull Lifesaving Museum on Saturday Sept. 13 from 10 a.m. –3 p.m.

Stuart Whitehurst, director of books and manuscripts, English and Continental furniture and decorative arts specialist and senior appraiser with Jim Callahan, director of Asian art and general appraiser, will provide verbal appraisals on a first-come, first-serve basis. Doors open at 9:30 a.m. Appraisals will begin at 10 a.m. The cost will be a single appraisal for $10 museum members/$15 non-members or three items for $25 members/$30 non-members. All proceeds benefit the Hull Lifesaving Museum educational programs. Please limit your objects to three items. Good quality photographs may be substituted for large or fragile objects (Please exclude coins and stamps).

Skinner Auctioneers and Appraisers of Boston and Bolton have been conducting appraisal days for more than 25 years and appear frequently on the popular PBS series "Chubb's Antiques Roadshow." Parking is free at the museum. Light refreshments will be available for purchase.

Hullapolooza is on Saturday night

Hull's summer music festival, Hullapalooza, returns Saturday night, Aug. 9, to the Red Parrot on Nantasket Avenue. Five of the areas bands will play from 7 p.m. to midnight during this benefit event organized by Hullonians Steve West and Colleen MacDonald. All proceeds from the concert will benefit the Hull Lifesaving Museum and its youth programs.

The bands include Rob and Tim (folk, blues, and Celtic), Brook and Katie (Americana - not folk!), Freeda Rome and the Lost Boys (country twang), Cat Basket (rock 'n roll from the 60's onward), and the Pemberton All-Stars (rockin' blues and the best covers ever).

Tickets are $10 apiece, available in advance at the Lifesaving Museum or at the door. The Red Parrot's full menu will be available during the performance. Families are welcome. With any questions, please call Vicki Stevens at the museum at 781-925-5433.

How about some dinner and a movie?

Square Café, Loring team up

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Hingham's classic theater and one of its newest restaurants have joined to offer dinner and a movie at a reasonable price within walking distance of each other.

The Square Café and the Loring Hall Theatre, Hingham's popular "small screen" movie house located just around the corner, have come up with the dinner-movie package for a special night out "on the Square."

"People love the idea of someone else planning an evening out for them – and at a reasonable price. It really helps them relax," said Square Café owner Patti Libby. "People are busy and life is expensive. Over the past year or two, the cost of running a business has gone up and consumers feel it on their end, too."

A couple of weeks ago, a party of 19 took advantage of the offer. Another week, a party of two enjoyed the dinner-movie combination. "We've been surprised at the number of responses we've had overall," Libby said.

The special offer is available Monday through Thursday from 5 to 7 p.m. and includes a small salad, choice of entrees, and a non-alcoholic beverage from the Square Café menu, a movie ticket, and a tasty snack to nibble on during the show for $25 per person (excluding tax, gratuity, and additional beverages). Dinner must be eaten between 5 and 7 p.m., but diners may go to either the early or late movie at the Loring.

Courtney Mayer and Brian Pinch head to the Square Café for dinner to be followed by a movie.

The Square Café and Loring Hall, shown here, have teamed up to provide a nice night out.

The current "tasty treat" is honey peppered pecans and spicy wasabi. "It's a delicious combination," Libby said. Of course, many moviegoers also enjoy the Loring's hot buttered popcorn.

Theater manager Steve Young said the summer promotion has been good for both businesses. "It gets people involved in the Hingham scene and community, and it's convenient because the cinema is right down the street from the Square Café."

The cozy Loring offers a variety of foreign and general release movies, ranging from "Chocolat" and "Life is Beautiful" to "Seabiscuit" and "Legally Blonde 2."

"People seem to come here regardless of the movie, but we strive to show films that people will like – ones that are a little off the beaten path that suit the atmosphere of this quaint (movie hall). It's like a breath of fresh air from 10-screen theaters."

Going to the movies at the Loring is a tradition for many Hingham families. "We try to offer movies you can bring a family to, especially during the summer," Young said.

At the Square Café, quick service is the order of the day to allow diners to "get in and out" in a short time to avoid feeling rushed.

"We offer a one-dimensional meal and a nice walk to the theater. People can also stop at Nona's for ice cream on the way to or back from the movie," said Libby. "Ordinarily, considering the economy, it would seem outrageous to consider dinner and a movie in one night, because it's usually so expensive. We wanted to offer a little bit of a break."

The bigger focus, though, is networking in the Square area to encourage business owners to "develop a close relationship with one another," she said. "This is the first step."

Sometime in the future, the Square Café will team up with Beauty and Main, a cosmetics boutique in downtown Hingham, to provide a "Girls' Night Out," according to Libby. "For example, a bridal party could sit down together for cosmopolitans and a nice dinner together after they've finished their business at Beauty and Main."

Other ideas are in the works to build business in the downtown area.

87 percent suffer from foot related problems. By wearing Good Feet Arch Supports customers tell us they can walk all day and still feel refreshed. Conventionally, most orthotics are made of foam that flattens with the weight of the body and only one or two arches that won't balance you. They have no lifetime guarantee. They are molded from a troubled foot. Wouldn't that worry you? Whether high arch or flat feet or most anything in between, Good Feet Arch Supports representing the Ideal Foot, align your feet and your entire body. It's this misalignment that often causes the aching and soreness. The curtain went up Friday on the Company Theatre's production of "Ragtime." The Tony Award-winning musical runs through Aug. 24 and features a multi-racial cast of 65 who tell the story of three separate groups of people — affluent residents of New Rochelle, NY, Jewish immigrants, and blacks from Harlem — at the turn of the last century. Directed by Zoe Bradford and Jordie Saucerman, the local production features some of the sets used in the national tour and hundreds of costumes. Legendary performer loves a crowd

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

A little thing like a language barrier isn't going to keep Engelbert Humperdinck from connecting with an audience.

"When I played Russia for the first time recently, I had an interpreter on-stage with me translating my spoken words," Humperdinck explained by telephone last week from Los Angeles. "The music, however, they knew. Many of them even sang along."

With perhaps the largest fan club of any performer in the world — numbering 250 chapters and some 8 million members — Humperdinck should not have been surprised by the responsive Kremlin crowd.

"Every so often, someone will throw a pair of knickers on-stage. These days, though, I think it is done in a lighthearted way and more for fun than anything else."

Engelbert Humperdinck

If history is any indication, the singer — who has sold more than 130 million records — can count on another appreciative audience when he pays return visits to the South Shore Music Circus on Friday, Aug. 15, and the Cape Cod Melody Tent on Saturday, Aug. 16.

"People have been very good to me over the years. I'm very proud of my fans for sticking by me. They're the ones who have given me my longevity as a performer," says Humperdinck. They've also been known to give him some other things, including hotel room keys offered up in mid-performance. "Every so often, someone will throw a pair of knickers on-stage. These days, though, I think it is done in a lighthearted way and more for fun than anything else."

'80s rocker headlines at South Shore Music Circus

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

One of the biggest hits for Huey Lewis and the News during the band's mid-1980s heyday was "Back In Time," a bouncy pop-rocker from the Back to the Future movie soundtrack. And going back to the future is just what a revamped Huey Lewis and the News is doing these days as the band tours on into the 21st century.

The first millenium album release from Lewis and the News, 2001's Plan B, was a record marking the band's expansion from a sextet to a nine-piece including a three-man horn section, plus its attempt to move away from the slick, MTV pop-rock that made the band 80s megastars and more toward what Lewis and his mates believe are the band's true rock 'n' roll and R&B roots.

"Plan B is the record we would have made if Plan A hadn't worked so well for 24 years," the singer has quipped in interviews. Lewis and the News have kept right on taking their fans along for the ride, both into

Local singer pays tribute to Connie, Patsy and Brenda

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

In "Connie, Patsy, Brenda and Me," a new musical revue currently being presented by JM Productions Dinner Theater at Raffael's in North Quincy, singer Sheila Fahey pays tribute not only to her girlhood idol, Connie Francis, but also to legendary country singers Patsy Cline and Brenda Lee.

"When I was growing up in Dorchester, my girlfriends and I would have "Connie-offs," where we competed to see which one of us could sing more Connie Francis songs. I knew even then, when I was maybe 14 years old, that I could do Connie's music," Fahey explained by telephone recently from her Neponset home.

"Over the years, I've come to believe that these three women have been forgotten. There have been a few tribute shows to Patsy, but you seldom hear anything anymore about either Connie or Brenda," Fahey says of the three women who scored their biggest hits in the 1950s and '60s.

Blueberry clafouti

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

It is not an exaggeration to say that clafouti is most often a disappointing dessert. A mixture of fruit and batter that is then baked, it is either too wet and rubbery or one gets a nice light top layer which masks a soggy bottom underneath. The joy of clafouti is that it is simple to make – throw together a few common ingredients and pop it into the oven. But I wanted a great dessert as well, one that embraces qualities of a pudding, a custard, and a popover.

I started by making recipes from a host of classic French cookbooks plus "The Joy of Cooking" and the "Chez Panisse Café Cookbook." The surprise is that they had little in common. Some used a mere 2 tablespoons while others used a half-cup. Some used 2 eggs; one recipe called for 4 whole eggs plus 2 yolks. None of them were great. So I began with the basic ingredients (a pint of blueberries, flour, sugar, salt, eggs, milk and vanilla).

I decided to use one pint of berries for this recipe since they fit nicely into a 9-inch pie dish and also started with an even cup of milk (light cream and half and half turned out to be good substitutes). The eggs give the clafouti its lift as well as adding richness in both the texture and flavor. I tested two, three and four eggs and settled on three large. If I used fewer eggs the clafouti was limp and wet and more eggs made it rubbery. Finally, I tried beating the whites into soft peaks and folding the whites into the yolk/sugar/milk/flour mixture. Inevitably the whites rose to the top of the clafouti and the wet ingredients sunk to the bottom, producing a wet cake topped with a dry meringuelike layer.

For the sugar, I used 1/3 cup since the blueberries in my testing were not particularly sweet. For the flour, I tested as little as 1/4-cup flour and as much as 3/4-cup and finally settled on a half cup. I felt this amount allowed the clafouti to maintain a moist puddinglike texture and have enough body to hold its shape. To finish off the recipe, I added a pinch of salt and 1 1/2 teaspoons of vanilla. I tried baking the clafouti in both a 350- and 375-degree oven and preferred the cooler temperature and the longer baking time, which allowed the berries to cook longer, breaking down slightly and exuding juice. I tried the recipe in individual ramekins or custard cups and they take only 30 minutes and make a substantially more sophisticated presentation.

BLUEBERRY CLAFOUTI

This recipe can also be made in individual ramekins – see the variation below. Half and half or light cream makes this dessert a bit richer and, in my opinion, a bit better.

1 pint blueberries, about 12 ounces
3 large eggs
1/3 cup sugar
1 cup whole milk, half and half, or light cream
1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla extract
Pinch salt
1/2 cup all purpose flour

1. Heat the oven to 350 degrees and adjust a rack to upper position. Lightly butter a 9-inch pie dish and arrange berries in an even layer.

2. Whisk the eggs and sugar in a medium bowl until lemon-colored and slightly thickened, about 1 minute. Add the milk, vanilla and salt and whisk to combine. Sprinkle the flour over the mixture and whisk until smooth. Pour the batter over the berries and bake until puffed and nicely browned around the edges, about 45 to 50 minutes. Once removed from the oven, the clafouti will deflate as it cools. Serve warm with a sprinkling of confectioner's sugar.

Serves 6 to 8

INDIVIDUAL CLAFOUTIS

Lightly butter eight 1-cup ramekins or custard cups and place on a rimmed baking sheet. Evenly distribute the berries and then the batter into the cups. Bake until puffed and browned, about 30 minutes.

RASPBERRY VARIATION

Substitute one pint of raspberries for the blueberries in the above recipe.

CHERRY VARIATION

Substitute about 3 cups of sweet or sour cherries (enough to cover the bottom of the pie plate with a generous single layer) for the blueberries. Traditionally the cherries are not pitted but you may do so if you prefer.

on the television program "American Bandstand," Francis first gained national attention in the late 1950s and went on to record many million-selling songs including "Who's Sorry Now," "Lipstick On Your Collar," "Stupid Cupid," and, of course, "Where The Boys Are." These days her recording career is mostly behind her, but Francis continues to headline in both Las Vegas and Atlantic City.

Long known as "Little Miss Dynamite," Brenda Lee topped the charts with "I'm Sorry" and 'Rockin' Around The Christmas Tree." Lee has the distinction of being both a country singer well-known for her appearances at the fabled Grand Old Opry and also a recent inductee into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. She continues to make concert appearances around the country. Patsy Cline's renderings of songs like "Crazy" and "I Fall To Pieces" earned her a place in country music history that she has held firmly since her tragic death in a Tennessee plane crash forty years ago.

The Me, of course, is Fahey who — in addition to presenting music associated with the three famed recording artists — will also perform some of her own favorite songs.

"My voice is certainly deeper than most female vocalists so my own set will include songs I love that were made famous by everyone from Elvis Presley to Simon and Garfunkel and Frank Sinatra."

Long a fixture on the South Shore Community Theater scene, Fahey has appeared in productions of "Mame," "Nunsense" and "Annie" with the now-defunct Neponset Players and also with earlier incarnations of JM Productions, including the Quincy Community Theater. Fahey may be best-known to Raffael's audiences for her acclaimed work in JM Productions annual holiday offering, "What Christmas Means To Me."

Singer Sheila Fahey, pictured with music director Mark Donahue, pays tribute to three of her musical idols Connie Francis, Patsy Cline and Brenda Lee in the musical revue, "Connie, Patsy, Brenda and Me" playing at Raffael's through Aug. 14.

This time around, Fahey will be joined by Accompanist and Music Director Mark Donahue of Milton and a quartet of back-up singers which includes her daughter, Jennifer Fahey of Neponset; niece Patty Lee of Braintree; and longtime friends Kathy Teevans of Milton and Mary Ellen Anson, also of Braintree.

"This is the first time that I've done anything quite like this, and I'm loving it. It's my first one-woman show," says Fahey who says she is also pleased to be backed by a team she can count on.

"The four women singing back-up for me are natural born "harmonizers." I've known these women for at least 15 years, but this is the first time we've all appeared on-stage together. They're fun to work with, because they are serious enough to do what it takes to make the show work while still not being so serious that we can't all enjoy ourselves. We're really having a great time with this show."

As the group's most senior member, it has fallen to the elder Fahey to help the other women truly appreciate the legends who've inspired this particular tribute show.

"The young women have really fallen in love with Connie, Brenda and Patsy's music," says Fahey. "These three incredibly talented ladies may have sung songs with mostly simple lyrics, but they were also making a point with their stories of meeting boys, dating, and getting married. Even today, their music sends powerful messages."

"Connie, Patsy, Brenda and Me" will be at Raffael's Restaurant through Aug. 14. For tickets and information -including menu selections — call 617/328-1600 or visit www.jmproductionspresents.com ness as a saxophone player in London pubs where he was billed by his birth name. At age 17, he entered a singing contest where his dead-on impersonation of Jerry Lewis led early fans to call him Gerry Dorsey. He remained popular on the UK music circuit until he contracted tuberculosis which silenced him for six months.

Upon his recovery, he set out to restart his career with a new manager who suggested the new moniker. Taking the name Engelbert Humperdinck from an Austrian classical composer, he became an international sensation when his recording of "Release Me" went to number one in 1967. The single stayed on the charts for 56 weeks and even kept the Beatles' "Strawberry Fields Forever/Penny Lane" from the top spot. "I never imagined I'd get to the stage I am at now, especially since it all started with that one big hit."

In four decades in show business, Humperdinck has also managed to maintain a healthy family life. Married for 41 years to wife, Patricia, they have four adult children, Louise, Scott, Bradley and Jason. Career and family are sure to be two of the main subjects of Humperdinck's as-yet-unnamed upcoming autobiography.

"I plan to take readers through some very interesting experiences in my professional life and the difficulties you can have as a performer when the people who manage you also rob you," he says. "In the early years, I was making a fortune while at the same time getting ripped off by the people who were supposed to be helping me."

The romantic balladeer who has had hits with songs like "A Man Without Love," "Cuando, Cuando, Cuando," and "After the Lovin'," promises an honest presentation of his life story. Those interested in juicy and sensationalized personal details, however, may want to stick with the supermarket tabloids.

"In order for an autobiography to be a reality, you have to speak the truth. I will, of course, be addressing all the rumors of paternity and other such things. I'm not a kiss and tell person, though, so the personal stories about me can get boring."

With a US concert tour underway and appearances planned for Australia later this year, Humperdinck will have to fit the writing in around the singing. "I never get tired of the road, because I keep my show very contemporary and up to date. I make sure I do all the hits, too. You have to do your hits and that's fine, you never get bored with the songs that made it happen for you. You just change the interpretations over the years," he points out.

A friend of the late Elvis Presley from the days when both were both headlining in Las Vegas in the early 1970s, the "King of Romance" still finds value in lessons he learned from the "King of Rock and Roll."

"We socialized after each other's shows. We'd get together and chat. And, you know, he stole the sideburns from me. I was wearing them before everyone else, including Elvis. I still think of Elvis as just about the greatest entertainer who ever lived. He was also a wonderful man. He didn't take his image too seriously, he even mocked it a little bit. I thought that was wonderful coming from someone like him. I do the same thing. I fool around with the image a little bit." In addition to his friend, Elvis, Humperdinck also looks to more contemporary artists for inspiration these days.

"I enjoy people like Sting and Jon Bon Jovi. When you listen to younger people you admire, they help keep you up with the times."

His own fans will have something new to listen to with the upcoming release of Humperdinck's just-completed first gospel album. "I grew up with church music and I'm very happy to have had the chance to finally record both gospel standards like my personal favorite, 'Rugged Cross,' along with new material."

While he spends a fair amount of time in the recording studio and on the golf course, Humperdinck freely admits he is happiest in front of an audience. "More than anything, I love to perform. If God takes me while I'm on-stage, that will be fine by me. That's the way I want to go."

(Engelbert Humperdinck will perform at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset Aug. 15, and at the Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis Aug. 16. For tickets, call 617/931-2787 or visit www.musiccircus.com. For more information about Humperdinck, visit www.engelbert.com.)

Maintaining the August landscape

Green thumbs up

By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

With clippers, tarp and cultivator in hand, I ventured forth into the jungle that surrounds my home on another damp, overcast summer morning. The August landscape has never looked so lush and spring-like. In recent years, dragging hoses and complaining about heat and drought were the typical topics of conversation for gardeners during the latter half of the summer. This growing season will be remembered as the year of an everlasting spring, when mold, mildew, diseases, rot, bugs, slugs and mosquitoes prevailed.

Weeds seem to thrive no matter what Mother Nature offers in the way of heat and moisture but a week of damp weather has enabled a bumper crop of crabgrass and weeds to germinate and flourish. Many of my gardens that appeared weed-free a week ago are overrun by weedy sprouts, particularly along the front of the borders that were recently edged but regretfully not mulched.

In dry summers, weeds seem more obvious, flourishing while our preferred plants suffer from lack of moisture, making it easy to identify and remove the intruders. During moist summers, many of these weeds are remarkably sneaky, closely resembling their desirable neighbors in the appearance of their foliage, fooling us into believing they might be seedlings or something we planted but neglected to label. Although they are easier to extricate from the soft, damp soil, these invaders often escape detection until they disperse plentiful quantities of offspring. Carefully scrutinize each garden for these misplaced wildflower intruders, uprooting as many as possible. A huge stack of weeds and a freshly cultivated border are one of the most gratifying aspects of maintaining a garden.

Once I complete weeding each border this week, I have vowed to spread mulch before continuing to the next garden. Even a thin layer of shredded pine bark reduces the germination of unsightly newcomers in addition to highlighting perennials and shrubs and covering the stones, pebbles and imperfections that constantly rise to the surface throughout the growing season.

As I wander through the garden on weed patrol, I pause to remove faded blooms and flower stalks, a practice commonly referred to as 'deadheading'. Gardening, like any hobby, has its own language, a jargon that an experienced dirt-digger sometimes takes for granted. Pinch, prune, thin, mulch, harden off, compost, and deadhead are just a few of the almost barbaric-sounding terms gardeners use and novice gardeners may not find familiar.

The routine practice of deadheading to eliminate spent flowers and seedpods is essential for creating a tidy, ever-blooming garden. One primary reason to deadhead is purely aesthetic. Shriveled blooms and dead flower stalks are usually unsightly, spoiling the appearance of plants that are still in bloom. A few moments spent snipping withered flowers vastly improves the appearance of every plant. Perhaps an even more important reason to deadhead is to prevent the formation of seedpods. The removal of faded flowers is essential to prolong the bloom of most plants, especially the ever-blooming annuals. If annuals are allowed to produce numerous seedpods, they tend to bloom less or may even cease to bloom entirely, as their mission to recreate themselves in a single growing season has been accomplished. Continuous deadheading encourages the plants to keep bearing flowers in a never-ending effort to produce seed.

If possible, try to deadhead annuals every few days to keep plants neat and to make the process less of a chore. Each day, as I water my container gardens, I pick off the spent flowers of geraniums, petunias and daisies. Other annuals that respond to a routine deadheading include marigolds, zinnias, cosmos, verbena, salvia, snapdragons and dahlias. Petunias may be one of the more labor-intensive annuals but the rewards of removing shriveled flowers and seedpods are worth the effort. Pulling off the withered flowers will not prevent the formation of seedpods so it is essential to snip or pinch off the entire seed capsule at the stem. Periodically, it may be advisable to cutback entire stems that have become leggy and less productive. If one-third of the stems are pinched back each week, plants will continue to blossom but will remain compact and bushy rather than long and spindly. It should be noted that many of the more recently introduced cascading petunias and million bells require minimal deadheading but respond beautifully to an occasional trim. Impatiens and begonias are equally low maintenance annuals requiring little more attention than water and an occasional feeding.

Another reason to eliminate seedpods is to reduce random scattering of seeds and the potential for unwanted offspring. Some cultivated plants may actually become nuisance weeds when allowed to disperse their seed capsules. This is especially true of many biennial plants including foxgloves or forget-me-nots, which produce incredible quantities of seed. Many of my gardens are overrun with these exuberant biennials and although some seedlings should be tolerated to ensure future colonies of these flowers, their numbers may become overwhelming, not to mention they always seem to pop up at the front of the border or in all the wrong places. I prefer to collect the seeds of desirable biennials, annual poppies, cleome and a few choice salvias and scatter them in specific locations or save them for sowing the following season.

If your time is limited, select a small patch to weed or even a singular plant to deadhead. The tidy result will inspire even the most reluctant gardener to continue the process during the coming weeks.

the future with a rootsier, horn-driven sound and "back in time" with prime-era News hits such a "Workin' for a Livin'," "I Want a New Drug," "Heart of Rock and Roll" and numerous others.

The band is back in the local area once again for two shows at the South Shore Music Circus this Thursday and Friday, Aug. 7 and 8.

"Plan B was a different sort of album for us in the sense that in regard to current trends, it's anachronistic," said Lewis, whose real name is Hugh Cregg. "The idea for the album was to write the songs as they came to us, rehearse them, play them on the road, then, when there were 12, take them into the studio. We saw it as that's how all our favorite R&B records of the 60s were created, long before all the overdubs, samples and studio tricks that most records are made from today."

"Altogether, the making of the album used few microphones than we'd ever had before and no special effects, with almost all of the vocals and instruments live in the studio. We actually overdubbed the horn section, an occasional backup vocal and maybe a tambourine here and there. But everything else was laid down just like you hear it on the record," Lewis said.

Back in the 80s, when most of the rock/pop music scene was a notoriously trendy circus of freaky-styley haircuts and fashion, androgyny and post-punk rage, Huey Lewis and the News hit it big by being — off all things — normal. Lewis and his bandmates — who were originally called American Express — looked like nothing more or less than everyday, fun-loving, friends-from-college types and the band played straight-out, bar-band rock with catchy, pop-friendly songs about 9-5 jobs and sports.

Lewis and the News' roots as a band actually go back to the early 70s and the singer's first major band, Clover. This Bay Area sextet included several future News members as well as guitarist John McFee, later with the Doobie Brothers. At a mid-70s L.A. club date, Clover caught the eye and ear of British pop-rocker Nick Lowe, who convinced the band to tour Britain with him. But Clover was not successful in Britain, arriving just when their folk-rock sound (known as pub-rock in Britain) was being swept aside by the exploding punk-rock scene.

Lewis returned to the States while the rest of Clover backed Elvis Costello on his debut My Aim is True album. These days, Lewis, now 53, and his mates are most concerned about exploring the roots of their sound and continuing to deliver the News live, which is where the band has always been at its best.

"Today when were on the road we're not touring as hard as we used to for most of the 80s," Lewis said. "There's a lot less pressure to meet commercial demands and a lot more freedom to relax and just play and have fun onstage. It's sort of like falling in love all over again. And musically as a band, I honestly think we sound better than ever."

Huey Lewis and the News plays the South Shore Music Circus Thursday and Friday, Aug. 7 and 8 at 8 p.m. For Tickets and information call (781) 383-9850.

20th Annual Easter Seal Softball Marathon to benefit children and adults with disabilities. The annual event — a 24 hour long softball game - will be played on Aug. 9 and Aug. 10 at the Duxbury Train Field off Alden St. in Duxbury. The game will begin at 10 a.m. on Saturday, Aug. 9 and end at 10 a.m. on Aug.10. (Few people play the entire 24 hours anymore but you're welcome to try!) We're looking for players and teams who want to register to play. Each player must raise $50 in sponsorships by game time. All the money raised from this event goes directly to the Easter Seal Society of Massachusetts. Those who don't want to play are encouraged to drop by to cheer (or jeer) their friends. Donations are welcome. All donations are fully tax deductible to the extent allowed by law Any donations should be made out to "The Easter Seal Society" and mailed c/o me, Jim Cantwell, 40 Huntington Avenue, South Weymouth, MA. 02190. For more information call 781-837-1960 or home 781-335-0121.
